Approval Urged For School Levy

For the third time in less than a year the Bloomington School District is asking its voters to increase the educational fund levy 21 cents to $1.59 per $100 of assessed valuation.

And for the third time "political" problems — some of them petty — threaten to drown out the great need for solving the educational problems.

Of four elementary school districts posing similar referenda last June, only Bloomington's was defeated in an apathetic 270 total vote count.

Apathy killed the referendum by 46 votes. Forty-six persons made the decision for the approximately 1,600 registered voters in the district.

In the second try in September, Catholic voters, incensed over the school board's decision not to participate in a shared-time physical education program for St. Walter's students to take in the Roselle School District, got out a less apathetic "no" vote and helped defeat the referendum in a 2-to-1 total vote of 565.

No doubt, apathy and such "partisan" interests were not the only reasons the referenda were defeated.

Add to that list older persons whose children are grown and educated and therefore feel no responsibility to help educate other children as other taxpayers helped educate their children; young homeowners so shortsighted they are not willing to make an investment in education for their future children; and worst, the petty few who can't overlook personality differences for the good of the whole.

It costs $590 to educate each child each year — and the district is operating on a $104,000 deficit budget.

Since the first two referenda were defeated, the district has had to eliminate remedial reading classes and advanced education classes.

The "free busing" issue, even though it was caused by financial problems in another fund, threatens to scuttle passage of the referendum Saturday by persons who do not understand the issue.

Passage or defeat of Saturday's referendum will have no effect on the curtailment of free busing for district children living within 1½ miles of their school.

This involves another one of the eight separate funds set up by law under the school code, and is another problem with another set of possible solutions.

Even if the referendum was to be passed Saturday, the financial benefits would not be felt next year or the next, and more program cutbacks will undoubtedly come.

Passage of the referenda tomorrow is the only way to pull the district out of an ever-deepening hole.

The Register joins the Citizen's Advisory Council in urging Bloomington voters to approve the 21-cent educational fund tax rate increase tomorrow.

Not To Bury a Foe But To Honor An Athlete

by PHIL KURTH

Gary Steger has visited Bensenville before. But it was always in the uniform of a "hated" opponent, Lake Park.

Last spring in Bensenville he hammered a dramatic home run to end the second game of a double-header with Fenton and give the Lancers a clean sweep.

Gary was a villain that day.

TOMORROW night Gary will visit Bensenville again, under tremendously different circumstances. The bitter Lake Park-Fenton rivalry will be forgotten; the Milwaukee Bell will be forgotten.

Remembered will be a great athlete and a great gentleman who suffered a crippling injury on the football field and is starting the long, slow road to recovery.

The town of Bensenville wants to help. Fred Steger, village president, has proclaimed March 15, Gary Steger Day.

A nightful of basketball action and entertainment is planned tomorrow at Fenton to honor Gary and help raise money for the rehabilitation ahead.

AN HONOR guard from the Fenton letter club will form a line and escort Gary in. Between the first and second games of the evening, Gary and his family will be presented a national plaque by the Bensenville Tigra VFW Post 2149.

Prior to the opening game, Steger will read his proclamation and the Blackhawk Junior High School band will lead the crowd in the National Anthem.

Rev. Gordon Ingram will lead the invocation. Ralph Schultz, commander of the Tigra Post, will lead the pledge of allegiance.

Later in the evening the Tigra VFW Ladies Auxiliary will present a $25 donation and an American flag to the Steger family.

And the local Indian Guides will present a donation and put on a little demonstration.

The junior high band will play during halftime of the first game and the Fenton choir will entertain at halftime of the second game.

LAKE PARK High School will get into the action with a presentation at halftime of the final game.

John Varbie, Bensenville park commissioner, will present small trophies to each of the boys participating as a memento of Gary Steger Night in Bensenville.

Ken Kaufman, assistant superintendent of schools, will act as master of ceremonies for the night.

A special guest will be Brian Piccolo, hard-driving halfback and fullback of the Chicago Bears.

During the evening, a moment of silence will be observed for Art Koopman, coach in the Bensenville Boys' Athletic Association (BBAA), who died recently.

THE BENEDICTION at evening's end will be given by Father Jim Brommel of St. Alexis Catholic Church.

Hardcourt fans will see three basketball games, the first starting shortly after 6 p.m.

Game one will pit the Fenton faculty basketball team against a squad made up of all-stars from the Bensenville men's church league.

In game two, the seventh grade team from Blackhawk will face an all-star team from the BBAA's major league.

The main attraction of the evening will feature a showdown between Blackhawk's eighth grade team and the St. Charles Borromeo eighth grade team (undefeated in the Suburban Catholic League).

MORE THAN 2,100 tickets already have been sold, according to Will Davidson of the BBAA, and it's expected that another 500 will go before tomorrow night.

The town of Bensenville wasn't always too happy to see Gary — not with a football or a bat in his hands, anyway.

But tomorrow a couple of thousand people will turn out to honor and applaud him and let him know that they're rooting for him, too.

Lake Street Repaving Planned—At No Cost

Lake Street through Bloomington will be repaved at no cost to the village, Stanley Havercamp, village president, said Wednesday.

The expected $1 million project will include resurfacing and left turn lanes at Roselle-Bloomington Road, according to Sigmond Ziejewski, Illinois Dist. 1 highway engineer.

Resurfacing of Lake Street on Route 20 will begin east of Bartlett and continue along a 7½-mile stretch to about Swift Road, said Ziejewski.

Bids will be let in July or August with the project getting underway in late summer or early fall.

HE SAID the state is financing the project.

Other improvements in the Bloomington area will include curbing through parts of Bloomington at the intersection with Roselle-Bloomington Road and Lake Street.

Upon a request from the state highway department, the village board voted to direct its attorney to prepare an ordinance prohibiting parking on Lake Street from Maple to Ridge.

In other action, the board instructed its attorney to prepare an ordinance covering recom-

45 Acts Perform In Show Tonight

A 45-act talent show will be held tonight at 7:30 in Wood Dale Junior High School.

SPONSORED by the Wood Dale Junior Woman's Club, the show will feature performances by youngsters from Wood Dale, Bensenville, Itasca and Addison.

"It's going to be a marathon," said Mrs. Jerry Jacobs.

The program was arranged by Mrs. Richard Dhooge and Mrs. Robert Jensen, ways and means committee chairmen mentations made by the zoning board of appeals for a 36-acre 400-unit apartment complex in what was formerly known as Blecke's Grove.

THE ZONING board is asking that the apartment complex be limited to 400 units, 300 two-bedroom and 100 one-bedroom apartments.

Also it is recommended that the height of eight 50-unit buildings be limited to four stories or 37.3 feet, provide 600 parking spaces, five-foot screening, and that special use be granted for one year.

If no construction begins within a year the zoning would revert from R-5 (multiple dwelling) to R-1 (single family).

In other business, Robert Holm, 358 Cardinal Drive, an engineer for Western Electric, was appointed to fill a vacancy on the plan commission created by the retirement of Bud Franzen.

Taxpayers Hear Park Vote Plea

The Roselle Park District will present plans tonight at a Roselle Taxpayers League meeting for the upcoming March 29 $400,000 park improvement referendum.

THE GATHERING will be held at the home of Fing Nyborg, 317 Brookwood Terrace, Roselle, at 8:30 p.m.

The public is invited to attend.

Park plans include vast improvements at Turner Pond Park and Community Park.

A community swimming pool complex and other recreational facilities would be constructed.

Zoning Asked For Westlake

Petitions for pre-annexation zoning for the 477-acre Hoffman-Rosner Corp. complex, proposed for an area southeast of Bloomington, were presented to the village board Wednesday.

Lowell Siff, of the firm, based in Hoffman Estates, said a petition for zoning with DuPage County would be withdrawn.

THE PROPOSED development, known as Westlake, is in an unincorporated area near Army Trail, Bloomington, and Glen Ellyn roads.

A commercial-residential development expected to cost $70 million, it would include 860 homes, 539 condominiums, and 1,030 apartment units in addition to a shopping center, theaters, parks, and a lake.

Siff presented petitions for pre-annexation zoning, a partial and preliminary annexation agreement, and a petition for public hearing.

THE PETITIONS were referred to Trustee Robert McLaughlin, chairman of the zoning and planning committee. Stanley Havercamp, village president, told the 30 visitors at the meeting that the "public will have time to have its say at the public hearing."

Rossi Pledges To Reduce Salaries for Supervisors

Taxpayer relief from "soaring township taxes" was singled out this week as the chief campaign theme in Bloomingdale Township by Edward H. Rossi, Democratic candidate for township supervisor.

Rossi, of Glen Ellyn Country, pledged an all-out effort to reduce salaries proposed for the supervisor in tentative budgets prepared by the incumbents.

"THE SUPERVISOR'S salary, amounting to some $15,000 is out of line and taxpayers must unite at the annual town meeting April 1 to hold the line," he said.

"Township spending has doubled in the four years that the present supervisor has served.

"We must not reward this spendthrift government by increased salaries or allowing them to stay in office," he told Democratic committeemen at a recent meeting.

Rossi said the incumbent supervisor, Pat Savalano, and assistant supervisor, Jack Wall, each collected more than $7,000 from county board per diems and forest preserve claims in 1968.

He added the supervisor now receives more than $5,000 from the township and has asked another $1,800 in budgets to be presented at a hearing March 25.

THE FINAL vote at the annual town meeting April 1 will determine the budget.

"During my opponent's administration (since 1965), the budgets for the township general fund rose from $65,000 to $138,500," said Rossi.

"County levies have almost tripled in the same period and the one-party (Republican) monopoly is to blame."

ROBERT BURT

EDWARD ROSSI

He also questioned the $3,000 compensation budgeted for township clerk, up from $2,100.

It is "higher than that for clerk in any DuPage County township except Addison, Milton and York, which are all much larger," he said.

Rossi said he and Robert Burt, Democratic nominee for clerk, were convinced that workloads for the offices they seek can be reasonably handled for $1,000 less.

Dean Henriksen of Roselle, Democratic candidate for assistant supervisor, said published average per diems of county board members of $5,300 per year were greatly exceeded by the two Bloomingdale Township members.

"MY OPPONENT collected more than $7,500 from the county in his part-time capacity," Henriksen said.

Burt said the clerk's work was chiefly handled by a capable full-time office staff and suggested that salary hikes be given "those who really deserve them."

College To Offer Architect Course

College of DuPage will offer a course in house planning, architecture 060, during the spring quarter, which begins March 25.

Instructor for the course, scheduled for Monday evenings at Glenbard East, Lombard, will be Mrs. Jean Wehrheim, a practicing architect with 20 years of experience in designing homes in the Chicago suburban area.

The aim of the course is to teach persons to creatively solve their personal housing problems.

ONE IN every five families in an average suburban area moves every year.

Architecture 060, according to Mrs. Wehrheim, will help students understand what housing options are possible and which ones would be most advantageous for their families.

Topics covered in the course include traffic patterns, spatial relationships, separation of functions, special needs, interplay of vertical and horizontal space, creative use of materials and methods of dealing with architects and contractors.

Under Mrs. Wehrheim's supervision, each student will design and draw to scale his concept of the ideal home he would someday like to have.

PERSONS wanting additional information about architecture 060 should call 858-2150 before March 25.

Registration information concerning any course offered by the college can be obtained by contacting the Office of Admissions, College of DuPage, 29W235 Ferry Road, Naperville.

Election Slated By Wesley PTA

The regular meeting of Wesley School PTA, Addison, will be held at 8 p.m. March 25 in the school's multi-purpose room.

CHARLES Citrano, dean of students at Indian Trail Junior High School, will be guest speaker.

Colors will be presented by the Wesley School Bluebirds, and the Pledge of Allegiance will be sung by the Bluebirds and Campfire Girls.

Refreshments will be served by second grade mothers.

Juvenile Officers, County Committees Discuss Home

DuPage County is taking another step toward building a juvenile detention home in DuPage County was taken yesterday as juvenile officers from various police and probation departments met with DuPage County Board of Supervisors' committees.

The planning committee and education and courts committee called the meeting to solicit ideas of juvenile officers for incorporation into the building or plans being formulated.

The officers were, in turn, told of the county's plans.

BASIC PLANS call for a 30-to 45-person capacity home under direction of the DuPage County Circuit Court to provide care for boys and girls under 18 years old.

Juveniles held there may be as young as 8 years old.

The home would be constructed west of Wheaton.

It was emphasized by Magistrate Robert Nolan of the Juvenile Court that persons would be held there pending court action or transfer to another institution.

"No one would be sentenced there for a specific period, even though their stay may be as long as three months or more," he said.

A CHILD would have to be in danger of hurting himself or society or under threat from others to be put in the home, he added.

Juvenile officers were told the home would have 24-hour supervision, meals, individual sleeping rooms, medical care including a dentist available, psychological testing and care, educational programs and recreation.

"One thing you should have is a shower and barber available as soon as we bring the offenders in," suggested one officer.

"Give them a shower, haircut and put them in a uniform. That would do more than two weeks in the place. It takes their pride away like in the Marines."

OTHER OFFICERS were concerned whether the grounds would be fenced. They were told the play areas would be fenced with "inescapable" arrangements.

Getting in would be easier than getting out.

Other security measures include 24-hour visual and audio monitors and supervisors.

"Breathing while sleeping could even be checked," said Frank Bellinger, chairman of the planning committee and assistant supervisor from Milton Township.

"We have visited other homes throughout the country and will take the best features of each and make DuPage County's home the best in the nation," Bellinger said.

"IT WOULD be somewhere between a hotel and a jail, but not either."

The home is slated for groundbreaking Sept. 1 this year. Money has been set aside by the county board.

Taxes levied this year will help pay for construction. Further taxes later will pay for the operation of the home and expansion.

The county received state legislation in 1967 to proceed with the home without a referendum vote.

'Molotov Cocktail' Charges Levelled

Two Itasca youths were arrested following a "Molotov cocktail" incident in Itasca Tuesday night.

A gasoline-filled bottle was found burning near the Prospect Street bridge, north of Irving Park Road.

Carl J. Krueger, 17, of 19013 Devon Avenue, and a 15-year-old youth were charged with illegal use of a weapon following police investigation.

POLICE extinguished the blaze. The bridge was not damaged.

Two youths, later spotted near the scene, were questioned, released and taken into custody again when their stories checked out to be false, police said.

The 15-year-old was released to his parents and will appear in DuPage County Juvenile Court.

Krueger's bond was set at $1,000, pending a Magistrate Court hearing.

He faces a possible $250 to $1,000 fine and up to a year in jail if found guilty.

Village Beat

Wood Dale, Itasca Boundary Vexes

by SYD JAMIESON

The current debate between Itasca and Wood Dale officials on reaching an agreement on a common boundary north of Irving Park Road erupted again during an informal meeting in Wood Dale last month.

The three-hour session between the two villages may have been more fruitful if a strong turnout of Sherwood Forest property owners had not overflowed the Wood Dale village hall.

The mass turnout by residents of the residential subdivision, which lies west of Prospect Road and is part of the village of Wood Dale, seemed to trigger the tense atmosphere which prevailed.

Wood Dale's Mayor Ralph Hansen, in recognizing the crowded attendance, said that because of the publicity, he hoped "it was not blown out of proportion."

Yet, nothing was blown out of proportion because one developer had approached the council on annexation to Wood Dale. The matter could have been dropped right then with the knowledge that the property to be annexed was located west of Mill Road.

But according to one commissioner, "anyone has a right to petition for annexation or submit a tentative plat for review by planning, sewer and water boards."

Not too long ago, however, this same commissioner commented on a request for rezoning for a gasoline service station at the corner of Wood Dale and Irving Park Road. He told the council "why bother to refer it to the planning commission — we don't want it. Let's save the petitioner the cost of a public hearing and ourselves a lot of time."

The matter was killed when the council voted to reject the developer's proposal.

The Wood Dale Council, however, has not summarily rejected the proposed annexation of 40 acres for multi-family and light industrial use west of Mill Road.

It is this request by developer Anthony Maraviglia which has resulted in concern by Itasca officials in their negotiations with Wood Dale on a common boundary pact. It has also become the concern of a group of residents in the Sherwood Forest subdivision which would abut Maraviglia's development.

Itasca officials well remember a statement made in their own village hall that "Wood Dale would not cross Mill Road," although Wood Dale admitted it had been approached by a developer in that area.

The commitment was qualified to some extent as Wood Dale council members were bargaining for Prospect Road as a common boundary north to Devon.

And here is where the current negotiations are at a stalemate, with the allegations of "threats" being hurled against each other.

Itasca feels because of its scheduled sanitary sewer line north on Prospect from Irving Park to Thorndale, what land is immediately east of Prospect should be serviced by the installation.

A more desirable boundary, claim Itasca officials, could be the Commonwealth Edison Co. high line acting as a buffer strip between the two communities from Irving Park to Devon.

Wood Dale on the other hand says everything east of Prospect is contained within the Wood Dale park and fire protection districts and its elementary school district.

What taxes are derived from these land parcels to go to the Wood Dale taxing bodies anyway, Itasca declares.

There is also a personal side to the debate. Nottke has sold property east of Prospect to Commonwealth Edison for a substation site and wants the 112 acres in Itasca. Just north of this is property owned by Itasca Realtor Wesley Leubring, who has publicly stated he wants to annex to Wood Dale.

Both villages claim Salt Creek Country Club on Thorndale wants to be annexed to their community.

Recognizing the merits of both communities, if no agreement is reached soon, there is always the threat of Elk Grove Village thundering down across Devon into DuPage County as it has with the 208-acre industrial development.

Then the big squeeze will really be in earnest, with very little left for compromise.

Hunger March Rally Slated

Preparations for a mammoth "March for Hunger" through the Northwest suburbs now include a rally and "new form of expression" planned for Sunday afternoon at the St. Peter Lutheran Church, 111 W. Olive, Arlington Heights.

According to Steven Sonnenberg, minister of youth of the church, Sunday's services will include a rally between 2 p.m. and 4 p.m. and a worship service between 5 p.m. and 6 p.m., which will include a performance by a rock band, a slide show and Beattle songs.

The "free expression service" will be held to create interest in the hunger march planned for Good Friday, April 4.

SONNENBERG said the march has received good response from churches and organizations in the area. Sponsors of the march now hope to attract between 5,000 and 10,000 persons, who will march between Park Ridge and Palatine.

Get 15-30 Years In Marks Kidnap

WHEATON, Ill. (UPI) — Robert and Ethel Marin Thursday were sentenced to 15-30 years in prison for the kidnapping of 7-year-old Hillard Marks last Sept. 18.

The couple, convicted by a jury Feb. 24, heard the sentence without any show of emotion.

DuPage County Circuit Judge William J. Bauer said he made the sentences light because the Marins did not harm the boy while he was kept in their home for 36 hours.

"Because you are parents of two children, you know how it is to be deprived of a child," the judge said.

"You did it and you kept the child, but I am taking into consideration that you did not hurt the child, so I am sentencing you to 25 to 30 years each," he said.

The Marks boy was seized near his home in suburban Oak Brook, and was recovered by FBI agents 36 hours later in the Marin home in Riverdale.

The Marins said they were merely babysitting and understood that the boy's father, William, had arranged the abduction with Daniel C. Pieler to try to collect $125,000 from the boy's millionaire grandfather.

Pieler, 30, a former employee of the boy's father, is still awaiting trial on kidnapping charges.

THE ACCEPTED INFLUENCE IN THE NORTHWEST SUBURBS

Just Call Them All Smith Street

JEFFERSON STREET in Bensenville is also known as Hickory Street and Third Avenue.

HICKORY STREET sign near County Line Road in unincorporated Bensenville.

THIRD AVENUE someday will be an east-west thoroughfare from County Line Road to Wood Dale Road.

New York City has its Broadway but so do Bensenville and Wood Dale.

In fact, Broadway splits the two villages almost right down the center.

Today, Broadway is more commonly known as Illinois or Route 83. On old maps it's nevertheless listed as Broadway.

A man who has done some research on the history of Bensenville said that about 40 years ago, Illinois 83 also used to be known as Marshall Road.

Another resident said that it was not until about 1939 that the highway came through and the bridge over the Milwaukee Road tracks was built.

THE OLD maps also refer to it as Robert Kingery Expressway and Tri-State Highway. North of Bensenville and Wood Dale in Elk Grove Village it is known as Busse Road.

Names of streets can be confusing at times.

For example, Wood Dale has an Edgebrook, Edgewood and Elmwood.

Bensenville has an Edgewood, Evergreen and also an Eastland and Eastview.

Sometimes streets are named after trees or people.

Take Oak Street in Chicago. It's just a simple three letter word.

But then there is Martin Luther King Drive, which barely fits on street signs.

IN WOOD DALE, Murray Drive and Gilbert Drive are named after former mayors.

In Bensenville, First Avenue was changed to Memorial Road in honor of soldiers killed during a war.

Wood Dale's Georgetown Square subdivision has taken the names of the original Georgetown section in Washington, D.C., in an effort to add some class.

There is a Lafayette Street, Jefferson Place, Montgomery Lane and a Washington Square.

Bensenville developer Ralph Cantrell added a sentimental twist when he named the streets of Brentwood Terrace subdivision after his family — Daniel, Dolores, David, Dennis and Diana.

Mohawk subdivision in Bensenville has its streets named after Indians — Mohawk, Blackhawk and Tioga.

The township section presumably is named after the airports — Meigs, O'Hare and Midway.

IT IS NOT hard to find cases where two towns have streets with the same names.

Wood Dale has a Pine Avenue and Pine Tree Lane. Bensenville has a Pine Avenue and a Pine Grove Avenue.

Both towns have George, Hawthorne, Walnut, Forest View, Division and Grove Streets, just to name a few.

Third Avenue, which is destined to be an east-west thoroughfare in Bensenville and Wood Dale, also is known as Hickory Street or Jefferson Street.

Just to make things difficult, there is another Hickory Avenue just south of Third Avenue near Wood Dale.

Foster Avenue in both towns once used to be known as Ring Street in Bensenville.

Mill Road in Wood Dale is Parkside Avenue in Itasca.

Irving Park Road once used to be known as Old Plank Road.

York Road is Elmhurst Road in Elk Grove Village and later Illinois 83 in Mount Prospect.

Meyer Road is Addison Street and Second Avenue is Washington Street in Bensenville.

BEELINE Drive was once Elmhurst Street in Bensenville.

But, because proprietors of the large fashion firm requested it, a change was made.

All the similarities in street names can sometimes cause problems, especially for someone working in the post office.

Mrs. Ann Neander, assistant to the postmaster in Wood Dale, agreed.

She cited the three streets in Wood Dale with the word "Forest" in the name.

There is a Forest Glen Road, Forest Preserve Drive and Forest View Avenue.

On one old map even Wood Dale Road is called Forest Avenue.

If only the word "Forest" is used in an address on a letter, the mail could be delayed, she said.

And if the addressee forgets to put north, south, east or west, he's out of luck — at least until the error can be corrected.

Flood Plain Dispute Aired at Bensenville

Engineers for Bensenville and the developers of Brentwood East subdivision met this week to resolve any problems caused by the addition of fill to a flood plain in the southeast section of the village.

The meeting with engineers was called following a meeting between developers and village officials Saturday. It also followed the passage of a resolution by the village board last Thursday which admonished the developers for alleged violations of the flood plain provisions in a pre-annexation agreement.

A flood plain is an area designated by engineers as prone to flooding during heavy rainfall. The addition of fill is liable to change the plan. Brentwood East touches on the flood plain.

THE VILLAGE board strongly worded resolution threatened to stop construction of the 21-acre, 71-home subdivision southwest of George and John streets. The developers are Cantrell and O'Brien Development Corp., Bensenville.

Daniel Cantrell said this week that full cooperation was promised in finding a remedy to the situation. He said the developers agreed to live up to the findings of the engineers.

The engineers were to have reported to the village board last night.

CANTRELL SAID engineers were meeting to learn "how much water if any, assuming there was a heavy rainfall, has been displaced and how much will be displaced with future fillings to meet state grades."

While Cantrell said the developers were willing to alleviate any problems, he still was bitter about the resolution the village board passed.

He said the agreement of not putting fill in the flood plain was a verbal one and that, once the developers learned what grades were required, they found it impossible to live up to those required.

WILLIAM Hegebarth, village trustee who introduced the resolution last week, said the agreement was part of the board's official minutes from last year.

Cantrell also said that the addition of fill to lot 17, seven acres north of George Street and west of Addison Creek, had nothing to do with the Brentwood East subdivision.

Lot 17, unlike the subdivision, is not in the village but is in the flood plain. It is owned by Cantrell's brother and brother-in-law. Dumping of fill there has stopped.

In the resolution, the village proposed that consideration be given to condemning lot 17 for a proposed water retention basin.

The village has been seeking land in the area of George, Jefferson, John and Park Streets for the proposed retention basin. Cantrell said the retention basin has been proposed for 10 years. He also said lot 17 is now up for sale.

Cantrell further added that fill is presently being dumped in the flood plain north of George Street but east of Addison Creek, and that the village has done little about it.

HEGEBARTH acknowledged the dumping problem there and said that the village has in the past been successful in getting it stopped. Though the area is outside the village limits, Hegebarth said the village will pursue the problem again.

"The point I'm trying to get across," Hegebarth said, "is that two wrongs don't make a right."

The resolution also charged that the developers had entered the channel of Addison Creek without the approval of the Illinois Division of Waterways.

CANTRELL said the developers dredged and widened the creek for the improvement of its flow south of George Street.

He said state inspectors found some loose dirt along the sides.

A bridge across Diana Court was constructed with the permission of the village engineer, he said, admitting that a free permit from the state was forgotten.

HEGEBARTH said that making the creek deeper will not solve flooding in nearby areas.

Cantrell said that ever since his father, Ralph, began building homes in 1953, he has always tried to improve the community.

Parishes Hold Meetings To Discuss Education Trend

The first step in the plans of the Joliet Diocese to lay the foundation for Catholic education in the next decade took place last week at the diocese's 108 parishes.

Meetings were held in the parishes to ask the people how they think changes in Catholic education should be adopted. The meetings were the first in a series of four to be held in each parish this month.

AT THE END of the series of meetings a 146-question survey will be sent to every family in the diocese.

The office hopes the results of the questionnaire will show how parishioners feel the diocesan board of education should plan for future change.

Distribution of the questionnaires will begin April 13 with return slated for April 21.

The Rev. Anthony DeFilippis, study director, said the questionnaires and parish meetings will be concerned with all areas of Catholic education — grade schools, high schools, adult education and Confraternity of Christian Doctrine classes.

IN THEIR introductory remarks to the people attending the parish meetings last week, discussion leaders read a prepared statement from Fr. DeFilippis.

The statement called for a unified effort by parishioners to help solve the problems of diocesan education, saying:

"There is some need for new ideas, new alternatives, new directions in Catholic education. This entire project is based on the assumption that there have to be some changes made in the way the church carries out its teaching mission."

The changes are needed, Fr. DeFilippis said, because of the changes in American society.

"In our country today there is a greatly increased interest and emphasis on quality in education."

"The little red schoolhouse is clearly a thing of the past. It is a fact of life that when people are better educated themselves they demand an even better education for their children," he said.

To meet this increasing demand for quality education, changes will have to be made in the Catholic schools, he said.

"This series of parish discussions is a part of a study project which hopes to develop some plans or guidelines for the future of Catholic education in our diocese."

THE SECOND in the series of meetings was held this week at parishes throughout the diocese. Questions asked of parishioners included:

— "Can the church really afford, in terms of its teaching mission, to allow the parochial school to decline in any way?"

— "How dependent are most parishes on the parochial school?"

— "Is it possible to teach religion effectively outside of the school?"

— "Are adults interested and willing to be involved in teaching the school outside of the school?"

— "How would you describe your idea of the product that Catholic education should produce?"

— "Are children available for out-of-school programs?"

Pre-School Story Time Is Planned

The Bensenville Community Library will offer a pre-school story program on Thursday afternoons at 1:30 p.m. during April.

Children 3 to 5-years-old are eligible and may be registered for the story time at the library before March 26.

The pre-school story time is an enrichment program providing children with an introduction to the best in children's literature and art, and, often, their first lessons in group experiences.

Staff member Mrs. George Moreth will be the storyteller.

THE LIBRARY gives a special thank you to the Junior Girl Scouts of Troop 334, Mrs. Moreth said.

Under the leadership of Mary Clark and Mrs. John Del Vicario, the Girl Scouts are making "sit upons" that will be used during story time.

Since the size of the group must be limited, the library suggests that interested parents register their pre-schoolers as soon as possible.

Science Fair At St. Peter's

St. Peter's Catholic School, 500 N. Cherry, Itasca, will hold its annual science fair Sunday from 9:30 a.m. until 2 p.m.

Exhibits will be presented by students from grades five through eight, under the direction of Patrick O'Donnell and Kenneth Hajduk.

The projects exhibit will be in the fields of math, biology, chemistry, physics and earth science. The fair will take place in the school hall.

Weeks May Challenge Chairman Ronske

Paul Ronske, York Township, chairman of the DuPage County Board, faces the threat of a challenge to board leadership when the board reorganizes after the April 1 elections.

This challenge, while still a speculation, is said to be a considerable one with the challenger, Gerald Weeks, one of the ablest members on the board and chairman of the prestigious finance committee, expected to make the bid.

Though Weeks on Wednesday refused to confirm or deny that he would actually be a candidate, the former Milton Township GOP chairman did say he had been approached by several board members and believed he should give it some thought.

Others told this column that Weeks is in the running and has at least a half dozen solid backers now, with as many as 10 being enumerated. But it would require 16 votes, voice votes at that, to win the chairmanship.

BUT IT MIGHT as well be said that he is not the only member of this 31-member board, who would like to sit up front and whack the gavel. Several others are yearning for the opportunity, but as the old saying goes, "If wishes were horses, beggars could ride." A number of these aspirants are not exactly beggars, but they'd love to bask in this sunshine of board leadership.

Most prominent among gavel-wielding dreamers, it is said, are the effervescent Wesley Casper, York, who would like it, he explains, for only a day and Pat Riedy, Lisle, who wants it for a year and a day.

Ronske is philosophical about it all. There are 31 members on the board, he points out, and says "I'm just one of them. Why shouldn't any or all of them exercise their prerogative of running for my job?"

Well, come to think of it, with 31 candidates on the first ballot, each of course would vote for himself and with a 31 tie vote, a second ballot would be necessary. The bets are that Ronske would probably land the 16 votes necessary to win.

HE APPOINTED the 16 chairmen who served on board committees last year. A committee chairmanship is a pretty good deal. The chairmen not only exercise authority over certain areas of the county government, they call committee meetings and collect $25 per diem for doing it. Most committee chairmen, so the theory goes, will not bite the hand that feeds them. They will vote for their chairman because a new chairman could dismiss them and they would have to start from the bottom again.

As Weeks told us, and he said he was criticizing no one, the weakness and rigidities in county government are less a fault of the personnel but are a part of "the system." This could be improved only by the legislature, which should permit counties to reduce the size of their boards, elect a county chairman at large and provide proper authority and jurisdiction to govern. Also put them on a salary basis so they won't have to scrounge for $25 per diem.

THE COUNTY CHAIRMAN told us county board politics always perk up around election time and there is nothing unusual about 1969. Ronske doesn't know for sure who the candidates for chairman will be at this time, but, "We know we can expect them."

Ronske has been on the board for 14 years and has served the past eight as its chairman. As chairman he gets an extra $450 per month as liquor commissioner. Beyond this, his remuneration is the same as other board members. He thinks he may not even do as well as some of the better-paying municipalities for their administrative leaders.

"I'm out at least three nights every week, at my office in Wheaton every day," Ronske says, "and am constantly in touch with the committees to keep abreast of what they're doing and to direct them."

The county chairman has the responsibility of formulating the county programs, new buildings and capital improvements, new personnel, expanding services and setting up the fiscal procedure to fund them.

"I CAN TELL you one thing," he explained, "Under my chairmanship this county has remained solvent and we've been able to pay our bills without undue hardship on our people. This doesn't just happen; we're constantly working at it to keep it that way."

This one-party county situation has been alluded to, especially by the Democratic opposition, as a county board weakness. They say it shows up in "petty politics" at the county level which interferes with solid achievement.

But Ronske says anyone who attends committee meetings and county board meetings must conclude that no county where two parties are represented explores issues more freely than is done at Wheaton. Of course Paul Ronske is a Republican.

The chairman says, "The art of leadership is to change thinking. For example, the sewerage referendum. The voters have to be convinced that it is to everybody's advantage to see DuPage County as a single unit as the best way to solve the problem and that the health and welfare of all is at stake."

DESPITE THE speculation about his candidacy, there is no doubt that Weeks holds the present county chairman in high esteem.

"Paul Ronske and I are the best of friends and there is nothing personal," he makes it clear, "in whatever position I take on the county board."

"But it's my conviction," Weeks said, "that personal relationships with a board as large as ours over the years have throttled board leadership and this is interfering with bold, decisive action necessary today."

The Milton Township "contender" has been on the county board the past six years, is supervisor of his township and has served as its GOP chairman, which rotates between Wheaton and Glen Ellyn.

An interesting fact in this matter is that both Weeks and Ronske are big enough to understand that especially in a one-party county, rivalry for the leadership of county government is not only healthy but can produce future good.

The county chairman told us that after the township elections are over and the chairmanship contest decided, he believes the county board will make some constructive progress in handling the many problems waiting for solution.

Half the board members are up for re-election, and unless in those townships where Democrats are flexing their muscles, things go awry (which the GOP says is inconceivable), all will show up to vote in the chairmanship race. That is, if it isn't a fade-out.

Ronske are big enough to understand that especially in a one-party DuPage County, it becomes less clear just where and what the Republican intra-party alignments are. It is no mistake to say that a distrust reigns throughout the upper hierarchy brought about mainly, we think, by the "generation gap." This Elmer Hoffman, county GOP leader, will dispute. He denies such a gap exists.

But what is shaping up are new working arrangements, based on political opportunities. Admittedly they are now pretty flexible and not too reliable, but these "birds of a feather" will flock together in the future and establish their areas of strength and perhaps a solid new leadership in DuPage County.

Castro's 10 Years: A Gloomy Success

by EARL COPELAND Jr.
United Press International

In the 10 years since he came to power, Prime Minister Fidel Castro has established firm control over Cuba and suppressed all serious opposition.

To that extent his remarkable revolution of the 1950's—remarkable in that its guerrilla beginnings involved such a small band of determined men—may be termed a success.

But Castro has failed in one of his prime aims—to export his revolution throughout Latin America—and for Cubans themselves it has been a belittling, frustrating decade.

The Cuban economy has plummeted 20 to 25 per cent since Castro toppled Fulgencio Batista from the presidency on Jan. 1, 1959, and where in 1959 Cuba enjoyed economic and political independence, it now is firmly tied to the Soviet Union by barter agreements, trade pacts, and the need to sell the Soviets her only major product—sugar.

Some goals of the revolution have been reached or are still in the process of evolution. Education and health services are improved and more widely and evenly distributed than in pre-Castro days. The once all-powerful rich upper class has been destroyed and the middle class has all but disappeared. The very poor enjoy more of the benefits of government and there has been a leveling in income, and in economic and social benefits available to the masses.

Yet, dissatisfaction runs deep even among the working class and peasantry fretting over continued shortages and lack of any clear indications when things will be better. For the people, however, the people—particularly the young generation—place the major blame not upon Castro—still the heroic figure who came out of the Sierra Maestra Mountains in 1955—but upon his "enemies," and the United States is No. 1 among them.

The worsening economy may prove in time to be Castro's Achilles heel but today the bearded leader—still a young 41—appears in no foreseeable danger of overthrow. And he has not given up his dream of exporting Castroism through the Americas.

Through failures and successes, Castro has demonstrated considerable staying power. He survived the U.S.-mounted Bay of Pigs invasion, the Cuban missile crisis, the vast exodus from Cuba of hundreds of thousands of its citizens. Today he stands without a contender for power and in virtually absolute control of the largest and most populous island in the Caribbean—a country with more people and a higher living standard, even now, than several Latin American nations.

Still, any assessment of today's Cuba and its role in the Americas must return to its economic weaknesses. Cuba's total productive capacity has remained essentially stagnant since 1959. Its Gross National Product (GNP) amounted to about $2.8 billion in 1958 and was estimated at approximately the same in 1968, the last time any reliable indicators were available. The country's 1958 GNP was the highest in Latin America except for Venezuela and Argentina.

Cuba in the immediate pre-Castro period had grown to its high economic plateau in just 60 years. It was the last nation of Latin America to gain its independence from Spain. Per-capita income in 1958 was $422; in 1968, it had dropped to $415.

Cuba lacks raw materials, an energy source (oil, coal or hydroelectric power), capital and a trained labor force. Early Castro efforts to industrialize at the expense of sugar, the country's largest income producer, resulted in a very low sugar crop as well as reduced coffee and tobacco crops. This has been to some extent corrected as the Castro government has restricted its efforts to producing sugar and other tropical products.

If there is little coordinated opposition to Castro at home, there is also little organized opposition to Castro at home, once fiercely dedicated to returning home, have gradually become more separated from life on the island and a new rising generation is less interested in marshalling opposition from the outside.

Even accepting the Castro contention that those who have fled Cuba since he came to power have been largely the elements the revolution wanted to get rid of, the exodus can only be rated a debilitating factor in overall national strength.

Apart from its political isolation in the hemisphere, Cuba suffers also from sharply reduced transport links with the rest of the world. In 1959 more than a score of airlines served Havana, Camaguey and Santiago de Cuba, and Cuba's ports were among the world's busiest. Now, Cuban air links are confined to two Aeroflot (Soviet) flights a week from Moscow, one Czech Airlines flight from Prague each week, one weekly Iberia Airlines flight from Madrid, two Cubana de Aviacion flights weekly to Mexico City, and 18 AIM flights a year between Curacao and Havana.

In 1963, when the U.S. first sought to press economic sanctions there were eight vessels above 15,000 tons and 24 above 10,000 tons in addition to many smaller craft plying regularly to and from Cuban ports. In 1964, 394 free world ships called at Cuban ports. But the drop has been steady since then—to 290 in 1965, 224 in 1966, 218 in 1967 and, in the first 10 months of 1968, 152.

Castro predicted his revolution would spread to the Andes. The fact is—it has not. So Castro's basic challenge to the Americas can only be described as, so far, a failure. In 10 years not a single country of the continent has followed the example of Cuba in destroying free enterprise and seeking to build a socialist economy on its ruins.

Castro, however, did challenge United States complacency in regard to its Latin American neighbors. It can be construed as the motivating impulse for the late President John F. Kennedy's ambitious Alliance for Progress self-help aid program.

The Castro revolution also served to bring more U.S. popular attention to the "poor relations" of the South. Relations, in the generalized sense, have improved between North and South America as a result.

To attribute the recent spasm of military revolutions in Latin America to military fears of Castro-type actions in their countries would distort history. Many if not most of the countries of Latin America have—long before Castro—had a political history of so-called "men on horseback" and no other Latin American country is so concentrated on the primitive system of barter dependent on the Soviet Union, as is that of Cuba.

After 10 years of Castroism, Cuba is today a near-friendless nation in its own family of nations. (Next Week: The Middle East tinderbox: Is another round inevitable?)

Home Nursing Service Requests Skyrocket

Community Nursing Service, the home nursing service for DuPage County, is facing an explosive increase in requests for its service. It has been reported.

In 1968, home visits to provide bedside nursing, rehabilitation and physical therapy increased 35 per cent over 1967; 18,000 visits in 1968 compared with 13,346 in 1967.

CNS estimates that 19,000 visits will be made in 1969, and 20,000 in 1970.

Mrs. Fred Kinderman, CNS president, said, "CNS must attempt to continue to maintain the maximum service to meet these needs until community financial support can be increased in proportion to the tremendous demands for the service."

CNS DEPENDS on Community Chest and United Fund contributions for part of its support. These funds make it possible for nurses to serve those patients in financial distress due to illness, as well as those who can afford the service.

If financial problems persist in 1969 and 1970, the organization's capacity for service will become threatened and the necessity to reduce the caseload will inevitably result.

Mrs. Kinderman said, "The citizen who request CNS service is typically one who has a very urgent need. It would be difficult to deny help that is needed so badly."

CNS works with physicians, hospitals, health and welfare agencies to help those who are sick and infirm to recover and to become rehabilitated at home whenever possible.

CONVALESCENCE, often enough, can be continued just as well at home as in the hospital, thus freeing a hospital bed for an acutely ill patient.

In 1968, 581 hospital beds were freed in this way for acutely ill patients through a continued care coordination program.

In this program a staff member works with the hospitals, physicians and families of patients in arranging the extension of professional nursing and rehabilitation services from the hospital to the patient's home. "In DuPage County we have a network of home services, agency resources, extended care facilities and nursing homes," Mrs. Jack Kelly, executive director, explained.

"The health care system is complex and families need help in learning what is available for their needs and resources. This is an area in which the CNS nurse can be most helpful as a consultant."

The CNS report for 1968 shows an increase in the number of phone inquiries for information and for referrals made.

Almost 2,000 such contacts were tallied last year.

THE REQUESTS for home health aide service of CNS increased even more than those for nursing service in 1968. The 7,000 hours of Home Health Aide Service delivered in 1968 was double the record for 1967. As a specially trained lay person, the CNS aide spends as much time as is necessary in a home where there is illness. She gives personal care to the patient and helps to maintain a smooth running household.

Dist. 7 Approves Additional Posts

A recommendation that a part-time assistant superintendent and a full-time principal be hired in Wood Dale Elementary School Dist. 7 was approved recently by the school board.

Supt. Warren B. Carson recommended the additional positions because under the current arrangement the staff is spread "too thin."

The district has three principals in four schools with one superintendent.

FRANK MAISCH serves as principal of both Oakbrook and Westview schools. Hudson Meserall is principal of Wood Dale Junior High School and Thomas Comer is principal of Highland School.

Carson recommended that the principal of Oakbrook School be appointed assistant superintendent on a half-time basis.

In other business, the board accepted Comer's resignation as principal. He has been with the district for almost two years.

THE BOARD also agreed to obligate funds for two Title III National Defense Education Act programs for industrial arts and arts and humanities.

The federal government will reimburse the district $5,449 for the $12,110 industrial arts program and $209 for the $688 arts and humanities program.

Highland Hilites

Chuck and Vicki Block, Northview Lane, celebrated his March 5 birthday by attending the Guild Players performance of "Wait Until Dark."

Ten candles were lit on the birthday cake for Donna, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Delaquila of Highland Boulevard. She celebrated with sister, Debbie, and several friends.

Plans to celebrate the sixth birthday for Patricia, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Hutchison of Lafayette Lane, includes a party with St. Patrick's Day decorations, for she was born on St. Patrick's Day. Joining her to help celebrate a few days early are sister, Deborah, brothers, Jon, James and Jay, and several neighborhood friends.

Mr. and Mrs. John Hutchison celebrated a dozen years of marriage March 2.

Dick Kelly, Ashley Road, celebrated his March 8 birthday at the Guild Players cast party Saturday night, in the home of Mickey and Jerry Mandel.

Mrs. Lawrence S. Graff Jr., past president of B'nai B'rith Women, Aliyah Chapter, was in Chicago Sunday, as guest of her sister-in-law, Mrs. Ronald Graff, at the culminating luncheon of B'nai B'rith Women, Westridge-Sunset Chapter, at the Cafe LaTour Restaurant.

SIX YEARS old is Beth, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Astrowski of Lafayette Lane, who celebrated March 9 with her family by having dinner at Hackney's in Wheeling.

John, son of Mr. and Mrs. K. E. Ryan of Evergreen Lane, extended an invitation to brothers, Jeff and Timothy, sister, Jennifer, friends, Jimmy Felker, Terry Holtz, Michael deLannoy and Bobby Stoops, to join him March 11 to help celebrate his seventh birthday.

Three birthdays are being celebrated in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Marty Goldstein of Frederick Lane. Carrie's was March 3, Marty's, March 8, and Gery's was March 12.

Entertaining out of town guests are Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Graff and children, Debbie, Karin and Marc, of Newport Road. They were in Chicago today to see Mr. and Mrs. Van Morris of St. Louis, Mo. Also helping to entertain are Mr. and Mrs. Sol Graff, Chicago, who are hosting a dinner in their honor.

Guests at the sixth birthday party for Dani Pitzer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Larry Pitzer of Newport Road, are sister, Sheri, and several neighborhood friends.

Bill Erwin, Newport Road, celebrated his birthday March 4 at a family party that included his wife, Laura's mother, Mrs. Frank Hyde who recently arrived from California to make her home in Hoffman Estates.

Talk of the Town

John and Marilyn Liautaud are enjoying a rest from telephone calls this week. Last week they and their five children moved from 318 Lakeview to a new home in Churchill, and due to a telephone shortage, it will be some time before their telephones are installed.

Also moving from Lakeview Lane were David and Myra Friele. They are renting an apartment on Evanston.

Gene Re' of N. Washington Boulevard has recovered sufficiently from recent surgery to return to work.

While on Alcoa, Stewart Olson almost lost a finger and the use of his hand as the result of an accident at work. A fluid with which he was working penetrated the skin of his fingers and required extensive surgery. After being in the hospital for almost a month, he is now home but still not able to use his arm.

Both Bernie and Paulette Gerstein of Illinois required hospital treatment after their recent automobile accident.

On another floor, their son, Steven, after undergoing tests for over a week, is now recuperating from surgery.

IT'S ALWAYS fun when relatives come to visit, especially when it's a great-grandmother. Last weekend Scott Isaac and his parents, Barbara and Chuck, of N. Olive had a weekend visit from his great-grandmother, Mrs. Ida Feldman of Chicago.

Friday evening Art and Jane Dern of Aster and their son, Tim, and Mary Jane Sloan saw the play "Wait 'Til Dark" at Telf High School in Streamwood. Later they had supper at Mangums in Beverly Lake.

Viewing the same play Saturday night were Irving and Carolyn Bentcover, Bernie and Phyllis Levin and Howard and Phyllis Risberg.

Guild Players' cast party was at the home of Geri and Mickey Mandel. Among the 60 guests were Ken and Jan Boutelle and their son, Ken Jr., who was home on leave for 30 days from the Navy and has now returned to his ship and is on his way to Vietnam.

SATURDAY was a busy day for the Howard Risberg family of Glendale. Saturday morning their son, Gary, celebrated his bar mitzvah at Beth Tikvah Congregation. Watching the ceremony were grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Morris Saperstein, and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Risberg of Chicago. Coming from Peoria were former Morgan Lane residents, the Farol Ginsberg family and from Oak Forest more former Hoffmannites, Charles and Delores Zamut.

Friends and relatives joined the family afterwards for a luncheon at Old Orchard Country Club.

Recently moving from Morton, where they lived for over 10 years, were Lennie and Hannah Friedman and their boys, Larry, Keith, Doug and Richard. They now live in Woodlawn Heights.

Coleen, daughter of the John Reedy of Berkeley, is in St. Alexis with a kidney infection.

Florence Fabing has just heard from her son, Richard Dean, that he will be stationed in Germany for the rest of his enlistment.

Laurel Dulaney of Berkeley came home from the hospital Monday, following major surgery.

DICK AND Lynn Weisz of N. Olive spent the weekend in Indianapolis, visiting former residents. Jay and Estelle Levinson. The occasion was the bar mitzvah of Russell Levinson.

Vickie Mann, daughter of Robert and Sybil of Aspen, celebrated her 15th birthday March 5. She and the family will see a hockey game as a belated celebration.

Among area couples who decided to get together at the Wagon Wheel in Rockton last weekend were the Larry Kootzes, Jack Nobles, Jim Sloan, Bob Fossells, Bob Berks, Phil Gibbs and the Don Meyers.

Jay and Linda Finnegan of Alcoa had quite a jolt when they answered their doorbell Saturday night to see the William Fitzgeralds of Chicago, Robert Pavesich, and the Robert Douglas. Arriving later from Chicago were the Stan Cromwalls and then Peter and Scott Damby from Rockford. The occasion was a surprise housewarming arranged by Mrs. Fitzgerald. Fred and Pat Weismueller invited the Hoffman guests.

The Way We See It

Public Hearing Idea Worthwhile

The Illinois House has approved a bill which would give the public an opportunity to be heard before changes are made at municipal airports which would affect neighboring communities.

The bill, co-sponsored by Bensenville's State Rep. William A. Redmond, would protect communities like Bensenville, Elk Grove Village and Wood Dale from arbitrary change in air space use without being consulted.

Concern over the measure is high because of repair work at O'Hare field last summer which created increased nuisance of jet noise in several Northwest Suburban communities. Current O'Hare expansion plans call for construction of a sixth runway in a northeast-southwest direction.

The Redmond bill would give neighbors a chance to be heard on changes like this, as well as those affecting ground traffic or the functioning of municipal governments.

Air travel is a great servant of man, its contributions to modern society are incalculable.

However, the convenience and comfort of thousands of people living in suburbs cannot be wholly dismissed. They should be given an opportunity to be heard before such major changes are approved.

We hope the Senate and governor will add their endorsement to this measure.

Weighted Vote Inadequate

No apparent means of satisfying the one-man, one-vote principle is available to Illinois counties other than abandonment of township representation.

That is the impact of a recent ruling by Illinois Atty. Gen. William Scott.

Scott said a U.S. Supreme Court decision in a Texas case on apportionment of counties clearly applies to the 84 Illinois counties where county boards are composed of township supervisors and assistant supervisors. Among these counties are DuPage and Lake.

Scott ruled that "weighing" the votes of board members, to reflect the population of the township they represent, would not satisfy the one-man, one-vote principle. Voting districts based on population will have to be established.

The Political Beat

For Ogilvie, the Mantle Is Heavy

by CHARLES HUFNAGEL

A dramatic tug-of-war with Illinois "teetering on the brink of bankruptcy" is flashing across the Springfield horizon as Democrats and Republicans are locked in what amounts to a political maneuvering for the coming contests of 1970 and 1972.

This despite the glowing promise of a new approach to the problems of Illinois government so convincingly presented during the Ogilvie campaign of 1968. This is not to say that the Governor is reneging on all that he held out to the voters of this state, far from it. What it does mean is that there is more complication and confusion in the administration of state government at Springfield in these times of unparalleled affluence and unparalleled distress than was dreamed of even a year ago.

The governor is not only having his problems with the defeated Democrats who have rebounded with an amazing new vitality and a young and vigorous leadership, but he may be having trouble harnessing a Republican Party in Illinois which from any point of view cannot be said to be united.

HUFNAGEL

GOVERNOR Ogilvie, regardless of his party control of both houses, two Republican senators at Washington and a Republican President friendly to his success, is nevertheless finding Illinois split with change — social, racial, political, economic, fiscal — and the state GOP is reflecting it.

Whatever the voters were saying on election day, the voices of divergent interests are clamoring louder today and they are shouting to be heard in legislation that promotes their particular welfare whatever it happens to be.

This puts the Governor on the spot. He hears them all but he cannot by any stretch of the imagination answer them all. His administration must provide a solid answer for all the state's unending needs in these expanding times. His responsibility must be to provide for the welfare of all the people of Illinois.

With the state treasury empty and new tax resources, despite this state's incalculable wealth, difficult to find bold statesmanlike action is called for. Can the Republicans at Springfield, W. Russell Arrington, senate majority leader, Ralph T. Smith, house majority leader, with Gov. Richard B. Ogilvie provide the necessary leadership to pull the state out of the moral, economic and fiscal morass it is in and

by CLIFFORD G. ROWE
Asst. Managing Editor

We're finally doing something with all those rocks we brought home last summer.

After a winter of sitting and stepping on pounds and pounds of agates, of moving them from drawer to closet and back again, we have decided to polish them.

This, it turns out, is no small fete.

We bought a tumbler — a plastic jar-type device that rolls on two rods turned by a small electric motor. Along with it came three plastic containers of grit (course, medium and fine), two sets of instructions (which more or less agreed) and a rubber liner for the tumbler to hold the noise down.

I had anticipated this business of bringing the glow of these beautiful rocks to the surface as a short-term operation — an overnight sort of thing.

We've had six pounds of rocks tumbling all over themselves for better than a week now, and we have three weeks to go — 24 hours a day.

COMMONWEALTH Edison should be overjoyed.

There's more to it than just plugging the motor in, too. The grit solution which is supposedly polishing these rocks has to be checked each day to be sure it's of the proper consistency.

The difficult part of this is getting the lid off the tumbler. It took my wife an hour the other day, much to the delight of our two youngest, and she's no weakling. (She's had a lot of practice on baby-food jars.)

The machine has to be oiled each day, of each week.

MY WIFE and daughter assure me it's all worth it.

I see it as the same six pounds of rocks we had before — only prettier — being sat on and stepped on, and moved from drawer to closet and back again.

Not so, they say.

It seems we owe a couple of polished agates to a couple from New York State who we met while camping; there are loads of relatives who will just be overjoyed at receiving a Lake Superior agate, "and with what's left we can make bracelets, and tie tacks and jewelry..."

If anyone in our family has doubts about their birthday and Christmas presents for the next few years, that latter point should erase them.

AND THEY needn't fear our not having enough agates to go around. There's another 12 pounds or so somewhere.

And out in the garage the tumbler whirs on...and on...and on...

The Fence Post — Letters to the Editor

Sex Education: Our Readers Debate Merits

'Too Important for Street Learning'

The letter on the subject of sex education from the gentleman in Hoffman Estates interested me.

Something has to be done to educate our children in the facts of life. While I agree it should not be the school's responsibility to teach this to our children, what other course of action can there be when parents won't teach them at home? Isn't sex education also an important part of preparing our children for their adult lives? Do we have to wait until "street corner" talks give the kids ideas?

CHILDREN ARE very observant people. They see mothers "with child" frequently. They can't be told that the stork brings babies or that they were found under a cabbage leaf.

Who are we trying to fool? The increasing rate of births among unwed girls surely is an indication to be that a good portion of our young people are uninformed or misinformed. Parents have to accept the blame.

Sir, just what do you expect from our schools? You say teach them to plant and raise a garden — how to prepare a meal — and perhaps even do the dishes. Honestly, where should these things be taught? Nowhere else but home. Do you really think they are? I can answer in one word — hogwash. Our own high schools have to teach young ladies how to measure a cup of flour in a foods class, how to thread a needle and how to sew a few basic stitches. The children are growing up with too much freedom and too little responsibility. What it all boils down to is that parents, even with all the more leisure hours they now have, don't take the time to give their children a proper home education in every basic fact of life.

WE'RE LIVING in a society today where sex has been made into something dirty and evil. Yet sex is also a God-given gift. It isn't something dirty or evil — it is something wonderful and beautiful for two married people in love. If your children have been honestly and lovingly given the information they need, just what are you worried about? If they were to be in a sex education class at school, don't you feel they could accept this if you yourself had given them the education of life they need, or have you failed your children and stuck your head in the sand?

As for the educators trying to put sex education in our schools — I say thank God for them. Youngsters who won't receive this education at home won't be left to find out from the locker rooms and street corners.

I have three children whose questions are honestly answered. They've seen films on TV about the beginning of life and the births of human and animal babies. I wouldn't oppose their attending classes at school on sex education. They have a mother and father who believe in letting them know and giving them the information on where they came from. I know they won't be hurt by such a class. If they would have questions, I'm sure they'd discuss them with my husband and myself. They trust us to give them honest answers.

In The Crystal Ship

In the Herald, I read the interesting comments by Mr. Anwarter regarding Crystal Ship now operating on the grounds of Community Presbyterian Church in Mount Prospect. Believe me, the group of people who are for a clean, Christian youth program are very much active and as long as Crystal Ship remains in operation, especially that type of operation and what it stands for, there will be objections; not only from church members but surrounding neighbors as well. Mr. Anwarter further states in your news column that members will not leave the church. Again he is wrong, because I personally know some that already have and more are contemplating such a move. Also many including myself are withholding pledges until Crystal Ship ceases operation.

Let me go back and relate to you my personal experience with Crystal Ship. After paying the admission charge of 50 cents on a Friday night, I was confronted with a large sign on the wall stating "Elections are..." Other signs tacked on the walls or painted were either anti-Christian or communistic. The basement was lit only by a single candle plus a red light on the Combo. Bodies of teenagers were lying around side by side smoking. I observed teenagers from other churches and some who I knew were smoking without their parents' knowledge.

Being very upset, the next morning I called a few people, including two elders of the church to meet me over at the Crystal Ship. The place was a mess; cigarette butts were everywhere ground into the floor. Even one of the elders admitted that the signs on the wall looked like communism.

The next evening I again attended Crystal Ship, this time with another couple. When the cashier saw the three of us, he turned the sign around to read the outrageous price of $1.50. As you can see, they don't want adults there, and they dis-

With the second largest elementary school district in Illinois beginning this year a new controversial curriculum, it seems exceedingly strange that the local papers have not been at their best in informing their readers of its existence.

I refer to District 15's family living curriculum that has been in progress all courage them when they can. Refusing the $1.50 price, we paid the usual 50 cents and went in. This time there was a single guitar player but the operation was the same. That night we observed a teenage girl burning a dollar bill over a candle.

THE REV. PHILLIPS entered, came over and asked what I thought of it now, and I told him in no uncertain terms that after I had observed the operation my dislike for it had grown beyond words. Furthermore the communistic literature that I was leaning against shouldn't be here. His only comment was that my children would be exposed to it sooner or later anyway. After that I left.

The two nights that I attended, by the way, were after the Crystal Ship was supposedly closed and certain rules were drafted for re-opening. In reality it has been open every Friday and Saturday night.

Now with the advent of warmer weather the teen-agers have expanded their activities to the outside causing minor disturbances.

THE CRYSTAL SHIP operators are charging 50 cents admission and 15 cents for coffee and coke, etc. Now it was admitted that there were at least 150 attending one night session and I now ask what is all the money going for? Certainly all the proceeds are not for the lone guitar player or combo. Who is in charge of accounting for the money? What is it spent for?

I believe in a good youth program but it must be morally clean and Christian throughout its operation. Crystal Ship is not that kind of operation, nor do we want it on church property or for that matter in Mount Prospect.

Elmer F. Collin

year. This curriculum is divided into three parts. One deals with family life, one deals with mental health, one deals with human growth and reproduction (commonly called sex education). The district has been reluctant to lay the entire program K-8 grades before the public. They prefer to release small amounts of information at a time to parents and others who inquire. The first two units are not considered controversial to parents by the administration, only the last unit.

AS A PARENT who has inquired on a school level and on a state level I think it should be pointed out that all three units are controversial from the standpoint of the great depth that is gone into, particularly on a personal basis. The state department of public instruction policy statement recognizes this in its evaluation remarks... "the seeking of such evaluative information may violate personal privacy and have serious legal and ethical implications."

It also should be made plain that the family living curriculum is not a state requirement but rather entirely permissive.

I urge all parents to go to their schools in Dist. 15 and study the program carefully. Ask questions, review completely the guidebooks... evaluate the whole program, kindergarten through eighth grade, talk with teachers and parents who have experienced the pilot program and its actual application. It would be very helpful to have made public the results of the pilot programs in all four schools, including teachers, parents, and the students who participated.

Charges 'Yellow Journalism'

The Herald's recent escapades into yellow journalism would be very amusing if it were not for the fact that it is destroying the public's confidence and the reputation of Elk Grove High School. On at least two occasions (the articles on the use of drugs at EG and the recent Light Show) the paper has shown that it is unable to accurately report the news.

During the recent "narcotics scare," which was begun after the arrest of about 20 students for drug usage, the Herald worked itself up to the point where 40 percent of Elk Grove's students were using drugs. Any clear-thinking citizen would not swallow such rubbish, but many obviously bought your paper. Sensationalism does have that ability.

FOR THE LIGHT: Show your paper printed three pictures with no outline or story. As an explanation, you had a headline that read, in part: "Mind-Blowing (?) at EG. What other conclusions can be drawn from these pictures than that EG is nothing more than a brothel with painted females seducing those present and love rampant in the halls. Nothing could have been farther from the truth.

There is going to be a certain amount of affection shown, but not to the extent indicated by your picture; and, the girl shown in your picture was certainly dancing, but the fluorescent paint and her movements added to the visual effects of the patterns being shown on the wall — which your paper failed to show.

You will probably claim that you had no idea that the pictures would have an injurious effect upon EG. You would then, however, be displaying your ineptness as journalists.

A PAPER'S duty is to act as a public servant. The Herald's reporting was not in the public's welfare. Any apology your paper prints is worthless because the damage has been done to the reputation of EG.

I believe that if the Herald continues this sensationalist tendency the public should stop subscribing to a publication that is attempting to cause discord where there is no reason for discord.

While preparing units on sex education for presentation at Palatine High School, I made frequent reference to SIECUS materials. Unlike W. T. Shoholm, who, in a recent letter branded this organization as distributors of "filthy literature," I feel that SIECUS is trying to fill the gap in our society produced by a dearth of educational materials vs overexposure to sex through the various communication media and somewhat, I imagine, through changes in some of our societal patterns and values.

I believe that the objective of SIECUS is to enable our children to make decisions through knowledge and avoid mistakes through ignorance.

Harper Budget Key: 'What If?'

A half-dozen "what ifs" are facing Harper Junior College trustees as they begin the annual budgeting process.

Budget committee members Milton Hansen and Mrs. Jessilyn Nicklas, huddling Wednesday night with Harper Pres. Robert Lahti and Dean of Business William Mann, were told that a firm budget cannot be completed until:

- The college completes faculty salary negotiations that have not yet started.
- The State Department of Vocational Education decides what percentage of the college career course expenses will be reimbursed.
- The General Assembly acts on Gov. Richard Ogilvie's recommendation that state junior college aid be raised from $11.50 per credit hour to $15.50 per credit hour.

HARPER EXPECTS its enrollment next year to go to 3,200 full-time equivalent students when the college moves into its next campus next fall.

The full-time equivalent enrollment this semester is 2,200, with about 1,600 full-time students and 1,700 more enrolled on a part-time basis.

To handle the increased enrollment, the college expects to increase its full-time teaching faculty from 90 to 125 in 1969-70.

Lahti noted with pride that the community college has been able to trim its per-student cost by several hundred dollars in the past year.

In 1967-68, the per-student cost of operating the college was $1,476 — higher than many of the state's other junior colleges.

PER-STUDENT COST in the current year is $1,270, Mann estimates.

PADDOCK PUBLICATIONS FRI., MAR. 14, 1969

Earlier years' per-student college board recognized the cost was higher because the administration and the community campus opened.

Want a Castle for Nothing?

BUDAPEST (UPI)—Castles in Spain are said to be in short supply, but a romantic castle in Hungary is yours for the taking.

"Our village will give it to anyone who wants it," one of the community fathers of Bajna told the newspaper Magyar Nemzet.

The castle was built in classicist style by the famous Hungarian architect Jozsef Hild for Count Moric Sandor, a legendary Hungarian equestrian.

Sandor married the daughter of the Duke of Metternich, and the last owner of the castle was the Princess Clementine von Metternich who died in 1945.

After the war, the noble landmark was used as a tractor repair station.

Now it sits empty and badly damaged and Bajna has no money for repairs.

Only catch to the gift is that whoever takes over the castle must arrange for its restoration. Estimated cost: 7 to 8 million forints (about $300,000).

Harper Wants Arts Program

Harper Junior College has high hopes of nurturing a broad scope cultural arts program in the Northwest suburbs, but faces a major hurdle in getting this done.

Frank Borelli, director of student activities, says the one thing missing to bring this about is housing.

The campus now under construction lacks a building large enough to handle the musical and stage play road shows, the orchestras and the opera companies that Borelli would like to see brought here.

The students activities director pointed with pride at the crowd of several thousand that turned out at Elk Grove High School last week to hear Breadbasket leader, Rev. Jesse Jackson, speak on the Harper lecture series.

He said it was a good example of the turnout that could be attracted to suburban northwest events.

But Borelli had to turn down a chance to sponsor a local performance by David Merrick's

"Funny Girl" company because he had no place to put the show. The production could have cost the college as little as $500 because its agent had a vacancy on the booking schedule and decided he'd rather earn something than nothing at all.

With this area as near to O'Hare Field as it is, such opportunities could fall into the college's lap many times, Borelli said.

He thinks taking advantage of such chances might require an auditorium seating three to four thousand. So far chances of Harper financing such a facility seem dim.

Wistfully, Borelli mentions the possibility of the college combining forces with some suburban northwest village to provide a facility that the area could share.

The college has explored the possibility of financing a large campus auditorium with state assistance, with little success.

Illinois Junior College Board officials think that classrooms, rather than auditoriums or fieldhouses, should have priority in getting state funds. They have indicated that large auditoriums or coliseums should be municipally financed.

The state is paying three-fourths of the cost of the college's first phase construction, to include a campus center, physical plant building, and five buildings.

Harper officials have been told that state guidelines won't permit construction of a Little Theater seating more than four or five hundred.

"That's too large for experimental theater and too small for anything else," Harper Pres. Robert Lahti commented ruefully when the topic came up at a board meeting several months back.

Fashions for The Young

by RACHEL HEUMAN

Today's trend is individuality. Its motto is "do your own thing," and fashionwise, even the little misses are in on it.

The junior miss can pick her costume according to her mood. She can demurely woo attention with the "sweet-young-thing" look. Or, she can make the scene in garb influenced by the American cowgirl and the Spanish gaucho.

Grushenka the peasant girl, Pocohontas the Indian maiden and Romeo's Juliet also have influenced the shapers of fashion this spring.

COLORS ADMIT a new respect for individuality, appearing in the three basic ranges that echo those of mother's new spring wardrobe. Corals, mauves, melons, apricots and blues are loosely looped into easy-care knits, or sheerly pasted in dotted Swiss, voiles, lenos and cotton lawns.

Neutrals, coming back all the way in cadet gray, chamois and off-white, are the height of feminine delicacy. And the proud tri-color — the red, white and blue — performs sharply in nautical and sport looks as well as in Sunday-best cape and dress ensembles.

THOUGH GEOMETRIC patterns are big, they are out-patterned by flowers. These, are absolutely everywhere and with personalities all their own. Red, yellow and blue bold print flowers tumble with gay abandon on heavy, ribbed white broadcloth in a puffed sleeve charmer to tease spring breezes.

Tiny delicate flowers are sprinkled on soft, pastel fabrics with puffy sleeves and ribbons. And carefree peasant bouquets scatter gaily at yokes, waistbands, shoulder straps or hemlines.

Fabrics are less effort than ever. Denim and stiff cottons are the choice for much of the sportswear. Sheers are dressy, linen and linen-rayon blends are big in any area, loopy knits are wash and wear, and, of course, the housewife's dream-come-true, permanent press — for everything.

"IN" DETAILS include the nautical look with its sailor collars, epaulets and chains. Belts and cowboy kerchiefs are also favored. Smocking everywhere from bodices to wide waists and sleeves provides up to the moment styling on a variety of costumes.

At least as popular as flowers are the Swiss, Tyrolean and Dutch braidings offering enchanting freshness and appeal on dresses and skirts. The rick-rack trimmed white blouses have short puffed sleeves to complete an outfit Heidi would be proud to wear for an afternoon in the Alps with Peter.

Fit is freedom-loving, yet girlishly feminine. The high, fitted bodices with flared skirts are popular. So are the elasticized smocking effects from neck to waistline, or simply at the cinched waist.

THE PRE-TEENS have it over their younger sisters in a number of areas. One of these is the tunic. For the more "mature" young lady, the mini-skirt length tunic is coordinated with slacks, for sport, or slightly longer skirts or dresses, for more social moments. Leather trim is also more common in the pre-teen line.

And of course, theirs is the innocence and romance of the Juliet dress. The various versions have in common the high ruffled Victorian neck, and sleeves that are full to the elbow and fitted to the wrist. Sheers, flowers, pastels and ribbons are the most popular complements to a pretty and simple dress suitable for graduation or parties.

Whatever the age this season, though, the selection is wide. This is the year of the real break-a-way! When little girls no longer need gaze impatiently through catalogues wondering how much longer they'll have to wait before they can wear "grown-up" fashions. In a "now" mood, the fashion world has something for everyone — now.

Information on where to see the fashions pictured may be obtained by calling Paddock Reader Service, 394-2300, Extension 200.

New Deadline

News for the Suburban Living section must now be submitted at least two days prior to the desired publication date. The daily deadline hour is 10 a.m.

APPRECIATING THE flowers that bloom in the spring are Mimi Good and Jennifer Baumann in the season's newest fashion offerings. Mimi in a sunflower yellow plaid sailor dress with nautical white collar trimmed in yellow. Jennifer's happy dress is white ribbed cotton scattered with red, yellow and blue flowers. A bright green bow with long ribbons is a finishing accent.

(Staff Photos)

A ONE-PIECE costume for the warmer school days coming up fast features the country girl look. The peasant blouse with sweetheart braid trim has full sleeves elasticized at the wrists. The print skirt has a wide border trim at the hem of the skirt.

THE SHEERNESS OF batiste, the softness of rosy pink, the delicacy of lace-trimmed collar and cuffs and the girlish charm of bellowed smocking make this dress a perfect candidate for Easter Sunday.

SHIP AHOY: Mimi is ready to go in red and white sailor outfit of lightweight jersey. A solid red skirt is coordinated with a white double-breasted blazer with accent cuffs and collar.

In Wigs, Women Prefer Dark Hair

by GAY PAULEY

NEW YORK (UPI) — It's said that gentlemen prefer blondes. But ask most women and they'd rather be dark-haired.

If you want to split hairs over this assumption, check in with Jerome Alexander, a wig stylist, who travels the country steadily, talking with women in the stores and appearing on women's television and radio programs.

"The biggest market is for the dark wigs, not the blondes," said Alexander. "It may sound surprising, but the most popular are the black and gray blends and the mixed grays."

"YOU GET outside New York and you find that women want to look their age. I ask them, 'Don't you want to look younger?' And they're not buying wigs for that at all. They'll tell me, 'My husband likes the gray.' Imagine. Settled down to middle age at 35!"

Alexander finds the more mature women buying the full wigs, many because they have hair problems — thinning, even balding. The young girls buy the partial pieces — wiglets, falls, perukes.

ALEXANDER began styling wigs around 1960, with the first impact of wigs as a fashion item and a definite adjunct to a woman's wardrobe. By 1965, he had his own company, specializing in popular-priced wigs of real hair "for the average doll" who couldn't afford the costly $300 and $400 ones.

He's been using Oriental hair "because European hair is getting scarcer and scarcer . . . European hair tends to mat easily anyway," he said. In turn, hair processors have learned how to strip down Oriental hair so that it is less coarse than it was in earlier days.

NOW THE stylist is about to expand into wigs made from Japanese synthetic so that they'll be wash and wear.

"They're handmade," said Alexander, "and the hair has a memory. It is impossible to wash the curl out."

Alexander's so fascinated with hair as a fashion item he's run up a couple of costumes in it — one a trouser suit with horizontal layers of hair for trim, and the other a vest and skirt. Expanding into clothes won't create any shortage, he feels.

"Asia is the mecca of the hair business, and there are an awful lot of collectors in Hong Kong, Indonesia and Korea," he says.

Tiny Infant's Weight Delays Her Homecoming

Although Mrs. Ronald Kirchner of Arlington Heights became a mother last week, on March 6, she does not yet have the gratifying experience and the joys of tending to her first child. That's because tiny Cynthia Evelyn Kirchner is still in Northwest Community Hospital, gaining slowly from a birthweight of 3 pounds 10 1/2 ounces.

Cynthia arrived a few weeks early and is expected to remain in the hospital for about a month.

FOR THE TIME being, Mr. and Mrs. Kirchner, of 1020 S. Evergreen, find it convenient to visit her regularly because they live only a short distance from Northwest Community. Keeping a check on the baby's progress is most important to the new mother, and according to her report of a few days ago, Cynthia has gained one ounce, a precious quantity in a tiny infant's growth.

Grandparents of the new-comer are Mrs. Phyllis Kirchner of Arlington Heights and Mr. and Mrs. Godfred Bulow of Pell Lake, Wis.

NORTHWEST COMMUNITY
Johanna McKenna was another tiny newcomer born March 6, her weight listed at 4 pounds 10 ounces. Parents of their second child are Mr. and Mrs. William R. McKenna Jr., 16 S. Forrest Ave., Arlington Heights. The McKennas have a son, Phillip, who is 9. Grandparents of the two children are Mr. and Mrs. W. R. McKenna of Pittsburgh.

Miriam Faustina McCay is the name of the first child of Mr. and Mrs. David D. McCay, 4937 Wilke Road, Rolling Meadows. Born March 7, she weighed 7 pounds 8 ounces. Grandparents are the Harry Kinkades and the Elmer McCays, all of Creston, Iowa.

Sara Elizabeth Burger, third child of Mr. and Mrs. William J. Burger, 1537 N. Ridge Ave., Arlington Heights, was born

March 7 and weighed 6 pounds 12 1/2 ounces. She is a new sister for Jennifer, 3 1/2, and Joseph, 2 1/2. Grandparents of the three are Mrs. J. M. Burger of Marion, Ill., and Mrs. S. Schraffenberger of Short Hills, N. J.

Christine Ann Gould's birth took place March 6, her weight listed at an even 7 pounds. The John P. Goulds of 715 Bennet Ave., Palatine, are her parents, and she has two brothers, Philip, 6, and David, 2. The children's grandparents are the A. M. Shaghalians of Warwick, R. I., and the P. N. Goulds of Williamsport, Pa.

ST. ALEXIUS
Michelle Renae Gagne arrived March 4 and weighed 7 pounds 1 ounce. She is the fourth child and second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Al Gagne, 810 Walden Court, Schaumburg. Other children in the family are Wendy Sue, 8, Keith, 5, and Scott, 3. Michelle's grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Johanns and Mrs. Lillian Gagne, all of Franklin Park.

Debra Lynn Bass is the first daughter and third child for Mr. and Mrs. Donald Bass, 2305 School, Rolling Meadows. Born Feb. 28, Debra Lynn weighed 6 pounds 12 ounces. She is a new sister for Brian, 2 1/2, and Randy, 16 months. Grandparents of the Bass youngsters are Mr. and Mrs. Victor Bass and Mrs. Bernice Makar, Palatine, and Chester Kryza, Chicago. Mr. and Mrs. Fred Hildebrandt of Palatine are their great-grandparents.

MEMORIAL-DUPAGE
Louis James Wacker adds another son to the Carl A. Wacker family of Roselle. He was born Feb. 25 and weighed 8 pounds. Other children in the home are Susan, 6, Donna, 5, and Carl, 3. Mrs. Mabel Wacker of Roselle and Mr. and Mrs. B. J. Hedger of Chicago are their grandparents.

Ryan Alan Schmidt makes a trio of children in the Ray Schmidt home on Andean Lane, Itasca. The newcomer was born March 5 at 8 pounds 5 ounces and joins Jolene, 5, and Jay, 3, in the family. Grandparents are the Fred Schmidts of Bensenville and Henry Schoo of Mount Prospect.

OTHER HOSPITALS
David Lawrence Wilson's birth took place March 1 in Holy Family Hospital. He is the first child for Mr. and Mrs. Larry Wilson, Glen Ellyn Road, Bloomingdale. The 8 pound 3 1/2 ounce baby is a grandson of the Samuel Nisleys of Parsons, Kan., and the Elmer Wilsons of Cleveland.

Kristi Lou Stein's birthweight on Jan. 31 was 6 pounds 8 ounces. Her parents are the junior Louis F. Steins who are stationed at Ft. Carson, Colo., and the baby arrived in the base hospital. Grandparents are all Bloomingdale residents, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Stein Sr. and the William Cammelots.

Julie Ann Lyford is the name of the newcomer in the home of the John A. Lyfords, County Line Road, Bensenville. Born March 2 in Resurrection Hospital, she weighed 6 pounds 7 1/2 ounces. The baby has a brother, Tommy, 3 1/2, and a sister, Debbie, 2. Her grandparents are the Melvin Nokers and the J. C. Lyfords, all of Bensenville. There is also one great-grandmother living in the area, Mrs. Ellen Heavens of Bensenville.

Jasen Daniel Grasser arrived March 7 for Mr. and Mrs. Paul Grasser, 1318 N. Race, Arlington Heights. Birthplace of the 6 pound 3 ounce was Hinsdale Hospital. Jasen is the Grassers' first child and a grandson for Mrs. Mary Grasser, Port Washington, Wis., and Mrs. Helen Van Aelst, LaGrange Park.

Local Couples Create Floral Clock for Show

"Is time running out?" Area Bible students have interpreted this theme into a musical floral clock as the Chicago Bible Students' entry in the Chicago World Flower and Garden Show March 22 to 30 at the International Amphitheatre.

The Junior Edward Bush-luses of Addison, the Arthur Jezuits and Tim Jezuit s of Wood Dale and the John A. Nelsons of Prospect Heights all helped create the display.

The eight-foot floral clock will play sacred chimes on the quarter-hour. The clock's face will be a lily pond with underwater illumination of 12 fountain jets around the pond. Small gardens of hyacinths and azaleas will complement the pond.

Hawaiian Party

Members of Wood Dale Junior Women's Club hosted their husbands at a Hawaiian Luau recently in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Eli Hanney. Guests came in island costumes for the dinner party.

The menu consisted of appropriate dishes served Hawaiian style. Mrs. M. Glesser was chairman of the event.

Ward's Offer Course In Home Decorating

Montgomery Ward will introduce a professional home decorating course for customers and homemakers at its Chicago area stores starting the week of March 23.

The course also will be offered in other Ward's stores throughout the country.

In this area the classes will be held at the Ward store in Randhurst Shopping Center, Mount Prospect, and Old Orchard Center, Skokie.

Ward's coordinator for the course in the Chicago metropolitan district, Gloria Schweikert, has taught home decorating and has operated her own decorating business.

The course consists of eight one and one-half hour sessions at a cost of $15.

STUDENTS WILL be taught the elements of design, furniture styles, room arrangements, color and how to use it, fabrics, window treatments, floor coverings, lighting and accessories.

Graduates of the eight-week series will be eligible for enrollment in Ward's Home Fashions Forum, advanced courses that are being planned for later in the year.

Registration Opens for Teen Princess Hopefuls

Teen Princess pageant hopefuls vying for royal recognition, a trip to Mexico and a complete wardrobe may register at the Wendy Ward Charm School Boutique at all Montgomery Ward stores through April 1.

Candidates will be chosen on the basis of typically teen attributes — character, charm, poise, personality, appearance and intellect. The contest, sponsored by Wards, is conducted in cooperation with Teen Magazine.

THE WINNER of the Teen Princess-Chicago contest will compete in the Teen Princess-USA finals in Chicago May 1 through May 3 for a six-week scholarship to study in Europe this summer.

Ultimately, a cross section of the world's youth will be chosen International Teen Princess-1968 with the grand finale — a trip around the world.

WATCHING THE WIND

by MARILYN HALLMAN

When the March wind roars like a lion, check to see which direction it's blowing!

Tie the end of two-foot thread around the eraser end of a pencil. Stand outside in an open area, away from buildings, trees and bushes. Holding the pointed end of the pencil, raise it high above your head. The thread will blow away from the source of the wind. If it blows south, for instance, the wind is coming from the north.

Certain wind directions often bring certain kinds of weather. North, northwest, and west winds usually bring fair, cooler weather. South, southwest, and west winds often bring fair, warmer weather. Winds from the south, southeast, east and northeast often bring rain.

Talk on India For Cheer-Aids

Exotic India and its people will be the subject under discussion at the Wednesday, March 19, convocation of the Holy Family Hospital Cheer-Aids.

A guest speaker will relate experiences of his trip to the Far East at the 7:15 p.m. meeting.

Modeling aspirants for the hospital's May fashion show may pick up applications at this meeting.

Rainbow Girls Model Tonight

"Over the Rainbow" is the title of the fashion show sponsored by Bensenville Assembly 32, Rainbow for Girls, which takes place tonight at 8 in the local Fireman's Hall.

Fashions by Korvette will be modeled by the girls and their mothers.

Area Clubs To Exhibit At World Flower Show

Area garden and flower buffs planning to attend the Chicago World Flower and Garden Show will be interested in exhibits prepared by local garden clubs. The entries, all competing for ribbons, will be on display in the Illinois Garden Club's "Rhapsody in Bloom" at the International Amphitheatre March 22-30.

Entered in the Artistic classes are The Addison Community Garden Club, Garden Club of Bensenville, Inverness Garden Club, Mount Prospect Garden Club and the Wood Dale Garden Club; both the Addison Community Garden Club and the Garden Club of Addison are entered in the table arrangements class.

The table settings, all with a tuneful theme, will be appropriate for a christening or a wedding reception. Other tables will have song titles, while the lure of the islands will be noted in others.

"RHAPSODY IN BLOOM," will conform to the Flower Show's theme of music and flowers. Flowers, grass, driftwood, tree bark and other natural materials will be used to create the feeling of musical rhythm, harmony and melody. Some of the arrangements will be stamobiles, mobiles with firm bases and moving parts.

More About Those Precious Vitamins

by DR. LAURENCE HURSH

Today is the fourth of our series of columns on the fat-soluble and water-soluble vitamins. Of the latter, last week we covered the essential B-vitamins, thiamin and riboflavin. Today we'll talk about niacin, pyridoxine, pantothenic acid, folic acid, vitamin B12 and vitamin C.

Niacin is the vitamin that prevents pellagra, a dread disease that plagued the world until nutrition investigators, beginning in 1914, began to crack the mystery of its causes. Niacin helps keep the nervous system healthy, it helps the cells use other nutrients, and it helps keep your skin, your mouth and tongue and your appetite and digestive tract in good condition.

IMPORTANT food sources are peanut butter, meat, fish, poultry, enriched or whole grain breads and cereals and milk (which is high in an amino acid, tryptophan, which the body converts to niacin and is thus classified as a niacin equivalent).

Pyridoxine and pantothenic acid complete the five B vitamins (the others are thiamin, riboflavin and niacin) that serve as catalysts that have important and often related functions of helping us build up and maintain our body cells and tissues.

The best food sources of pyridoxine are muscle meats, liver, vegetables and whole grain cereals. Few foods are poor sources of this vitamin. Milk suffices to supply infants with adequate amounts. Pantothenic acid is available through a wide choice of foods. Liver and eggs are especially good sources. Broccoli, white and sweet potatoes, tomatoes, molasses are quite high in this vitamin.

FOLIC ACID and vitamin B12 work together to combat anemia. Folic acid is necessary if your bone marrow is to do its job of manufacturing blood cells. Vitamin B12 is essential for animal growth. We are not sure, but it may have a growth promoting effect in man.

Pernicious anemia is the serious disease due to too little vitamin B12. This is due not to too little vitamin B12 in the diet but, rather, to a failure of the intestinal tract to absorb this vitamin. A great deal more needs to be known to determine the full role of vitamin B12 in body processes and its absorption by the body from food. Meantime, its importance in preventing pernicious anemia suffices to class it essential in your diet.

GOOD FOODS for obtaining folic acid include liver, dry beans, lentils, asparagus, broccoli and spinach. Others include lima beans, cabbage, sweet corn, turnip greens, lettuce, beet greens and whole wheat products. Vitamin B12 is found in animal protein foods such as liver, kidney, muscle meats, milk, cheese, fish and eggs.

The variety of foods involved in giving you enough of these vitamins is an excellent demonstration of why nutritionists promote the four food groups for daily meal planning. All of us simply cannot be dietitians. So we need a more general approach to feeding our families adequately, including getting enough of every essential vitamin.

Exercise Before Skiing Weekend

Weekend skiers should set up a program of daily exercises that start before, and continue during, the skiing season. The majority of skiers lead a sedentary life during the week and then dash out to participate in one of the most strenuous of physical sports. Running, hiking, and swimming are all excellent conditioning exercises.

Keep Testing For Properly Cooked Fish

Most homemakers overcook fish and seafood.

So say the results of research conducted by Booth Fisheries, the world's largest producer and processor of frozen fish.

"Seventy per cent of women who dine out order fish or seafood," say company spokesmen. "But they often produce unpalatable results when they prepare fish at home. This discourages them from serving it to their families as a regular meal."

PROPERLY cooked fish is succulent, tender and flaky. The secret is to begin early in the cooking period to test for doneness. Remove the fish from heat as soon as the flesh flakes easily when touched with a fork. This may be anytime from six to 26 minutes after cooking begins.

Most package instructions tend to encourage overcooking, warn Booth authorities. The only way to be sure your family will eat fish at the peak of perfection is to test and test again.

THE ISLANDS WILL COME to the Holiday Inn, O'Hare Saturday, March 22 when Schaumburg Woman's Club presents its Mai-Kai Luau. Cocktails at 8:30 p.m., dancing and a mid-night Polynesian-American buffet are the evening's plans.

Wise Road Work Starts In 2 Weeks

Schaumburg Work on the Wise Road sewer interceptor project is scheduled to begin in about two weeks, Schaumburg village Pres. Robert O. Atcher said Tuesday.

It will be an all-tunnel project with only manholes showing, he said. Atcher worked with Metropolitan Sanitary District board about two years to get the project funded. The project opens the door to expansion in western and southern Schaumburg, including the Milwaukee Road industrial park and Levitt and Sons Strathmore subdivision.

Ask Study Contract For Street Projects

Preliminary steps toward a transportation study were taken by the Schaumburg Village Board Tuesday.

The board instructed Public Works Director Edwin Denman to ask the H. W. Lochner engineering firm to send a contract proposal.

THE LOCKNER firm of Chicago submitted a proposal several months ago for $26,000. The cost would come from motor fuel tax receipts.

The transportation study is essential in getting roads widened by the state and county, village Pres. Robert O. Atcher said.

"Until we get the study, the state and county must take my word that the need exists," Atcher said.

Prospect Thinclads Rule Conant, Crown Indoors

Slowly but surely the Prospect indoor track squad is gaining a sound reputation in the area.

Last weekend the Knight thinclads ruled a spirited Hersey squad, and Tuesday afternoon made it two in a row by taking first in a triangular with Mid-Suburban League opponent Conant, and non league foe Crown. The Knights finished with 59½ to 44½ for the Cougars and 33 for Crown.

Bill Treece set the pace for the Knights, copping first in the rugged two mile race and breaking the Prospect indoor record in the meantime. Treece was clocked in 9:58.8. Teammates Don Dall and Bill Allen followed up in second and third, squad grabbed the final blue ribbon.

Knight Thinclads Top Hersey

Taking eight firsts and an equal number of seconds, Prospect's varsity track squad swept to a win over Hersey last weekend on the Huskie indoor track.

Leading the Knight first place barrage were Bill Treece in the two-mile in 10:03, Art Bedsworth in the shotput with a heave of 43-4, Dick Paulson in the high hurdles in 7:25 and the 880-yard run in 2:06-4, Tim Loeffel in the pole vault at 10-6, Joe Baker with a 18-4½ in the long jump, Keith Matthews in the mile, and the 12 lap relay team.

The Knights swept 1-2-3 in the two mile, with Don Dall and Bill Allen following Treece across the line, and accomplished the same trick in the 880-run with Tom Klinker and Al Morrison taking second and third, respectively.

The Huskies took firsts on Skip Peterson's double effort, a first in the 50-yard dash in 5:55 and a first in the low hurdles in 6-4. Gary Gehr claimed a first in the 440 in 56-4, Don Spry a first in the high jump at 5-10 and the Hersey 4-lap relay

For the Cougars, Mike Peterson scored firsts in the high and low hurdles, Rick Stillmark in the 440-yard dash, Tom Weeks with a 2:06-5 clocking, Jeff Jeff Riggio captured first in the 50-yard dash.

Crown took firsts in the long jump and shot put.

The all-stars from the fifth, sixth, seventh, and eighth grades will play the Prospect Heights All-Stars at 9 a.m. Saturday, March 22, in the Holmes Jr. High gym.

Outdoors

Ahhh! That Fresh Air!

There are solid signs for a fresh air summer along the west shore of Lake Michigan. Judging by reports of commercial fishermen, the beaches may be almost clear of alewives, which two years ago piled in wretched heaps on both sides of the lake, severely taxing the sensitivity of swimmers, boaters and fishermen. The problem did not recur last year, when elaborate preparations were made to skim them off the surface, and this year promises to be equally alewife-free, with fishermen finding even fewer alewives in their nets.

Gobblers off Limits

Wisconsin's effort to revive the wild turkey as a game bird in the badger state have suffered a setback, severe enough for the department of Natural Resources to call off the gobbler hunting season this year. The turkeys have reproduced poorly the past two years, and the severe winter further reduced the flocks. It's so bad that only 20 birds have been showing up at feeding stations, compared to 500 previously. Last year, out of 1,300 permits issued, only 20 birds were bagged.

Kurth Comments

by Phil Kurth

The wheels are in motion, things are beginning to mesh, and now it only remains to be seen whether the whole project can start moving before the gates of opportunity close for good.

The project, of course, is American Legion baseball for the area this summer and every day the possibilities are looking better. Unfortunately, time is becoming the big factor now and a definite commitment must be made this weekend.

What's the problem?

For a while it seemed that money was going to be the big obstacle. Approximately $800 was needed — 400 from Roselle, 400 from Bensenville.

Ray Stuckey, a member of the Roselle legion post, says the post does have the money to pay its share.

The Bensenville Robert D. Clark post is financially strapped because of problems they encountered a while back with Charles Siragusa. But the town has rallied behind it. The Lions and the Kiwanis have offered to help raise the money, and Wednesday an unexpected hand was offered by Carl Walvogel and the Ken Hubbs Foundation.

"I saw this article about the town needing some money for this legion thing, and I came in to talk to Kinnaman this morning.

"We have a project around town here for the Ken Hubbs Foundation that brings in some money every summer. It's a sweet corn and tomato project and all the money the kids make they keep and the money I make goes into the Foundation. We have raised about $900 in the last two years.

"When we had legion ball here about five or six years ago my son won the most valuable player award which was presented by Hubbs. That's when I met him, and we got to be very good friends. He came out to Bensenville to talk to the athletic awards banquet — he was the only Mormon in the big leagues then.

"His older brother, Keith Hubbs, is president of the board of directors now, and the Foundation is interested in helping kids in Ken's tradition.

"A couple of months ago we took Lake Park's football coach (Bob Monken) to the sportswriters' annual diamond dinner in Chicago, and donated $200 to the Steger Foundation. Wilbur Wood, winner of the Ken Hubbs Memorial Award, presented the check to Monken.

"Anyway, I'm sure the Foundation would be glad to contribute the $400. In fact, I can guarantee the $400 if there is going to be a team — I just hope there's no trouble getting a coach or something like that."

Some thought that might be a problem. But Stuckey says he'd like to coach it, and several men in Bensenville have expressed an interest.

Will there be enough ball players?

Norb Wesolowski, baseball coach at Lake Park, says: "I don't think that will be any problem at all. I talked with the kids last Friday — the first day out this season — and a lot of them said they'd be happy to play. I think we have needed something like this for a long time.

Jim Monahan, Fenton baseball coach, says: "I shouldn't think there'd be any trouble. They did it in the past. We'd like to have everybody playing as much as possible."

Players, coach, money. What's the problem?

Simply one of coordination, of getting the people in Bensenville and Roselle together to talk, hash out any difficulties, and formulate solid and definite plans. There's precious little time left, however. It's now or never — at least for 1969.

DON MURPHY, publicity man for the Black Hawks, and Billy Reay, coach of said-same team, have pooled their efforts and shown just how "bush" a big-league team can be.

Marla Byl, a senior at Forest View, went down to the Chicago Stadium Tuesday morning to interview Billy. (I went along with a camera to take a few pictures and meet the players) for the school newspaper. Everything had been arranged with Murphy — in other words, nothing had been arranged. (Murphy is probably as ignorant and incompetent a publicity director as the world of sports has ever known.)

Billy left the ice immediately after practice, and like a little boy afraid to face the principal, he wouldn't come out. The Black Hawk's secretary called to see if he could come into the office for the interview — Billy said he'd be working in his office for a couple of hours and couldn't make it.

In a way, the man can hardly be blamed. He has a wife and children to support and he's probably going over the want ads to see where he can work next year.

(P.S. The Black Hawks players were friendly, cooperative, and in every way gentlemen. And, yes, Bobby Hull laughed or smiled every minute, on and off the ice.)

New Surface to Provide Challenge

The new asphalt surface at the Waukegan Speedway promises to be a real challenge to all of the past Speedway stars, starting with the season's opener April 12. At least one driver will have a head-start on the competition and that is veteran and past late model champion Dennis Burgan.

Burgan will campaign a 1967 Chevelle which finished high in the points at another area asphalt track last season. Leno Cigallio, of Kenosha, bought the car complete recently and plans to have Burgan behind the wheel every Saturday night at the Waukegan oval.

The car has impressive credentials. Bob Weyrauch of Des Plaines drove the car last season and finished in the top five at the track where he competed. The car is powered by a 395 cubic inch Chevrolet engine which should be ideally matched to Waukegan's quarter mile semi-banked speedway.

Burgan, one of the most popular pilots at the Waukegan track, also has an impressive record. Dennis was the Waukegan late model champion in 1963 and 1965, plus has finished second in points twice and fifth once. After a short year of modified racing in 1964, Dennis has won 62 races at Waukegan in four years driving Studebakers, Plymouths, Fords, and Dodges. This will be Burgan's first regular ride in a Chevelle.

The Burgan-Cigallio Chevelle team must be rated high in the powerful list of late model title contenders. Dennis hopes to displace the racer March 21, 22, 23 at the Waukegan Speedway race car show in the Belvidere Mall in Waukegan.

NO BUTZ ABOUT IT. Only about 265-pounds hovering over it — the ball — and Don Wright (23) of Wheeling whose intentions were to try a layout until Maine's Dave Butz sealed off all daylight. Butz and teammate Greg Schmelzer (44) right behind him accounted for most of the pointage as the Hawks downed the Wildcats 66-56 in sectional play Wednesday. (Staff Photo by Tom Grieger)

Cards Defend Team Honors

by CHUCK WILLOUR

It's vaguely reminiscent of one of those great old movies where an entire family — mom, dad, sis and little brother, plus a nefarious-looking cousin or two — sits around waiting for a rich old uncle to kick the bucket.

Like vultures they restlessly hover over him, waiting to collect their inheritance "at any time now." And then, of course, the old boy ends up outliving the whole bunch.

That plot is always worth a chuckle or two — except when you're a rich old uncle.

AND THAT'S exactly what Arlington is in gymnastics as far as the rest of Illinois is concerned, a rich old uncle. Last year Coach Tom Walthouse's Cards captured the state gym title after completing a perfect dual meet season. This year the Cards have again continued their domination of the state gym scene by rolling easily over every opponent and then capturing their own district title last weekend in convincing and impressive style.

Today and tomorrow the Cards will be out to make it two state titles in a row in the state meet at Niles West High in Skokie, with the preliminaries coming today at 2 p.m. and 7 p.m., and the finals tomorrow night at 7:30 p.m.

And, like the family in the movie, the rest of the state will be there to hover over the Cards, poised to swoop down on them at their first sign of faltering.

WHICH HAS brought a few smiles to the face of Coach Walthouse: "All week long coaches have been calling me. They'd ask if I thought my boys could do it again, wouldn't the pressure get to them, or after going through such a perfect season, wouldn't they have to miss sometime, like in the state meet?"

"It sounds like they're trying to jinx me, put a whammy on us," he chuckles. Then he seriously adds, "I'd like to think we're the best in the state, certainly we've proved it all season. But when you get to the state meet there are so many outstanding individuals that it's possible we could get beaten."

Not likely, though, feel most people and the coach: "I feel we have so much depth that only a few teams stand a chance of beating us — maybe Hinsdale Central or Niles East. The only thing that could stop us is injuries, and I'm not anticipating any injuries."

INDEED the Cards do have much depth. They led all squads by qualifying 11 men in 18 positions, while Hinsdale Central, the state's number two squad, qualified ten in a weaker district.

Leading the Cards will be all-around men Bob Gleichman and Jim Brousseau, who also qualified in five other events between them. Brousseau captured a first in the horizontal bar competition, but in all-around had to take third to Gleichman's second and New Trier East's first by Bob Roth. Both are capable of topping Roth in the state meet, though, if they hit well in all five all-around events.

In addition to Brousseau's first on the high bar, the Cards claimed three other district firsts: Terry Haines grabbed the honors on the trampoline. Steve Von Ebers in tumbling-free exercise, and Ron Jones on EASY TIME. Jack Bastable (41) had little trouble recording this layout for Wheeling early in the game with Maine South's Ralph Remus offering only token resistance. Times got a little tougher for the 'Cats later on though, and despite Bastable's 12-point effort Wheeling fell to the Hawks 66-56 in the Wednesday night sectional liftoff. Says Wheeling Coach After Setback

'We Needed A Perfect Game'

by KEITH REINHARD

Wheeling the time bomb, capable of exploding at any moment, had to be treated gently but firmly by Maine South's big and brawny cagers and everybody knew it.

Hawk mentor Bernie Brady knew it. He was aware of the ravaging Wildcat press and he knew that to detonate it could spell the difference between victory and defeat for his Central Suburban league entry.

Brady's charges knew it too. They recognized their superiority around the net and saw this as possibly one avenue of their route to suppressing any siege by the 'Cats.

THE FANS knew it and they were betting evenly that the press could discourage the Hawks enough at the start to prevent any big opening charge and nip away enough later on to give Wheeling a fair crack at the triumph.

Wheeling coach Mike Owens was more keenly aware of this situation than anybody. It was the one big weapon in his arsenal to contend with Maine South's size.

What nobody figured on, was for the time bomb itself not to know how to go off. This is what happened though. Via a rash of untimely turnovers, the Wildcats diffused their own best weapon Wednesday evening and all the hustling in the world then wouldn't allow them to catch up with the Hawks.

Wheeling fell to Maine in their sectional debut, after trailing all the way, 66-56.

THE WILDCATS committed eight bad passes, fumbled three times and were cited with five violations. They've had worse nights and won.

Twice during the regular campaign they turned the ball over to Palatine 20 times. Co-nant got 21 and 18 of the blessings and still fell two times to the Wildcats.

As recently as last week Hersey garnered 17 Wheeling turnovers and still could not contain the 'Cats in opening regional play.

WEDNESDAY though it was the Hawks that Wheeling had to contend with. "We knew we weren't going to get any rebounds. That was no surprise," Owens sighed afterwards. "We certainly didn't figure on giving the ball away so many times though."

Owens summed it all up by adding: "We had to play a near-perfect game tonight and we simply didn't get it."

The wonder perhaps was that the Wildcats were in the game at all. They netted only a dozen rebounds all night and were 18 for 53 from the field — one of their poorest showings in 25 contests this season.

WHAT WHEELING lacked in every other department, they made up for in pure desire. Don Wright and Jack Bastable sparked the gritty display, which saw a strikingly oversized opponent halted every time they tried to break the game wide open.

On defense, Wright would start as a hard pressing guard the moment Maine would bring the ball out of bounds, then dash back to the base line to bump heads with the towering Hawk forwards. On offense he riddled the bucket for 24 points to outscore everyone on the floor.

Bastable in the meantime, strapped with three early fouls, kept Wheeling jelling on offense when Wright wasn't in command. If he could have won the game single handedly with a 10-yard thrust up the middle over 265-pound tackle-turned-center Dave Butz, he would have tried.

BUT GUSTO and courage weren't enough. And even with Wright and Carl Fricke teaming up to neutralize Maine's giant all-stater in the middle, there was still lanky Greg Schmelzer to contend with.

Schmelzer canned 11 shots during the game, all from within eight feet of the hoop and just about every one timed to

State Gym Preview: Boys to Watch

by CHUCK WILLOUR

The gymnastics squad that Arlington coach Tom Walthouse has put together this year certainly rates as the best Illinois has seen in the past, and it may well be one of the strongest gym units this state — or any other, for that matter — will ever see.

Barring unforeseen catastrophe — a rash of injuries, a number of Card performers missing on their routines, or something similar — Arlington should capture its fourth state gymnastics title since the Illinois High School Association began sponsoring the meets in the mid-1950's, and its fifth overall.

It was just ten years ago this week that the Cards netted their first IHSA-sponsored title, upsetting a strongly favored Proviso East. The Cards qualified 13 men — a lucky 13 it turned out — for the meet, and nine of those made it to the finals. In all, the Card gymnasts earned 110½ points in the meet, while runner-up York totaled 97. Touted Proviso finished with 94½ in third.

THIS YEAR it's the Cards who are being touted, and it is possible that another school might sneak past the Cards into a state title, though not likely. But, to emphasize a point, it is possible.

And so that fans will have a fair idea of the competition Arlington will get in the meet, below is a partial rating of the state's best performers on each event, and the top teams in the state.

First the teams: Arlington heads the list with 11 boys qualified in 18 events, including two all-around. Next is Hinsdale Central, district winner at Glenbard East, with 10 boys qualified in 18 events and three all-around boys.

EVANSTON, Niles East and

Thornton probably rank next in the meet. The Wildkits finished second to Niles in the Elk Grove District, but qualified seven boys in eight positions, while Niles qualified only three gymnasts in nine positions. Thornton captured the district title at Oak Park, putting 11 men in 13 positions, one in all-around.

All-around will be particularly important this year with the new scoring system that awards 21 points to first, 19 to second, 18 to third, and so on. If, for example, Hinsdale places its three all-around men high, that could mean the state title.

At the same time, with 11 men qualified, the new point system gives Arlington a boost too: if the Cards can place at least one man in the top ten of every event, they should take the meet title easily. And in tumbling-free exercise, particularly, chances are good of Arlington placing three men in the top ten — which could mean 45-55 points for one event!

THE TOP competitors in each event most likely will be these:

TRAMPOLINE — Arlington's Terry Haines leads the list of trampolinists, but Frank Ramirez of Waukegan, Greg Moore of Thornton and Prospect's Jay Bensen have a good shot at the title. Hinsdale Central's Jim Liljig and Maine South's Steve Olson are two other boys to watch.

SIDE HORSE — Oak Park's Fulton Loebel is the favorite, but Ron Jones of Arlington looks like a definite challenger. Also look for Niles North's Chuck Citron, George Joseph of Glenbrook North and Downers North's Dennis Downes.

PARALLEL BARS — Seymour Rifkind of Niles East is the state's classiest performer in this event. Fremd's Gregg Fenske, thanks to his district performance has to be considered too, as does Cardinal Jim Brousseau. Terry Haines, also of Arlington, Maine South's Neil Hagen and Bob Quintanales of Niles East are other top contenders.

STILL RINGS — Elk Grove's Benny Fernandez has earned the favorite's role for this meet, with Niles East's Rifkind getting the nod for second spot. Also watch for Skip Frowick of Evanston, Dan Bruring of Waukegan and Arlington's Kevin Lindsey.

HORIZONTAL BAR — Arlington's Jim Brousseau heads the list coming out of the districts, with teammate George Creswell right behind. But it's going to be a battle royal for first in this event, with Rich Central's Van Etten, Frank Acquaviva of Thornton, Pete Laloggia of Niles West and Jim Janssen of Maine West all rating about equal.

TUMBLING-FREE EXERCISE — It's a tossup between two Arlington performers. Steve Von Ebers and Gary Drake. Drake won the state tumbling crown last year, but Von Ebers has improved so much this season that he's taken first over Drake in both the Mid-Suburban League and the district meets. Right behind those two are teammate Nick Isaacs, Hinsdale Central's Ward Black and Jim Lilling, and Bob Salstone of Niles North.

ALL-AROUND — Seymour Rifkind of Niles East is far-and-away the favorite for the all-around title, but after you get past him there's bound to be little agreement about who rates second best. Take your pick: Arlington's Bob Gleichman and Jim Brousseau, Hinsdale Central's Randy Balhorn and Carl Walin, Evanston's Bruce Keeshin, Elk Grove's Benny Fernandez, New Trier East's Bob Roth, Gary Morava of Hersey, or Niles East's Bob Quintanales. It'll be close.

Maine Ousts 'Cats

deflate a potential Wheeling surge. His biggest bag was his tenth field goal, at 3:53 of the final period after a pair of free throws by Fricke had lifted the 'Cats within six points with still enough time to quell Maine's dominance.

That two-pointer widened South's bulge to 59-51 and during the remaining frantic minutes, neither side made much of an impact upon the score.

AT THE OFFSET of the contest about the only impact felt anywhere was from the thumping off Maine's backboard. The Hawks served up 18 shots and cornered everything that didn't go in.

Little escaped though. Eleven attempts hit their mark and Brady's gang strutted off after the first period in command 23-15.

From then on it was Wheeling scrapping to cut the lead, followed by unnecessary 'Cat turnovers allowing the Hawks to build their advantage right up again.

Two-and-a-half minutes before halftime Fricke snagged a rebound and slipped it back up and in to save Wheeling's deficit to 30-25. Schmelzer kicked off a Hawk spurt 20 seconds later with a turn around jumper just outside the key and Wheeling headed to the dressing room trailing by 10.

JIM MILLAY and Bastable hit consecutively from outside to initiate period three and a Wright free throw had the margin quickly cut to five again. Once more Schmelzer whirled around and connected and when Bastable hit again from 15 feet to make it 38-33 Schmelzer countered from underneath for a seven-point spread.

Wheeling proceeded to fall behind 51-38 before rallying on Wright's inside shot and Fricke's tip in. When the third quarter closed though, they were still down by nine.

A three-point play by Wright trimmed Maine's lead to five points one last time early in the fourth stanza. Twice right after that Wheeling gained control of the ball, came down court and turned the ball over before getting a crack at the net.

IN FACT Wheeling registered no more from the field during the last five minutes of the game and only managed to stay in contention through free throws.

When it was over Maine South had earned their third straight win over Wheeling in five seasons, their second berth in the sectional finals in as many years and had enhanced their overall mark to 19-5—the same as Wheeling's record prior to the night the time bomb didn't quite go off.

ALSO QUALIFYING for Arlington were: Larry Larson on the side horse (4th), Gary Drake (2nd) and Nick Isaacs (3rd) in tumbling-free exercise, Kevin Lindsey (2nd) and Gleichman on the still rings (tie 3rd), Isaacs (4th) and Bruce Mechling (6th) on the trampoline, Haines (tie 2nd) and Brousseau (tie 2nd) and Gleichman (6th) on the parallel bars, and George Creswell (2nd) and Gleichman (6th) on the high bar.

The Paddock area will also boast other fine gymnasts from other schools. Prospect qualified six men, Fremd, and Elk Grove qualified three each, Hersey two, and Wheeling placed one man in the state meet.

Prospect's chances for honors will rest on the trampoline and the horizontal bar. Jay Bensen captured third in the Arlington District and Bob Todd eighth on the trampoline, while Ron Wold took second to Brousseau on the high bar.

ALSO QUALIFYING for Rich Chew's Knights were Kurt Hendershot (7th) and Bob Todd (6th) in tumbling-free exercise, and Mike Ossowski (6th) on the still rings.

Coach Len Witter's Fremd Vikings will be led into the state meeting by Gregg Fenske, who mildly surprised district fans by capturing first in the high bar and sixth all-around. The Vikings will also have Mike Moore (8th) and Brad Craig (3rd) in the meet.

Elk Grove was the only area hosted district at East Leyden, led by Benny Fernandez. Fernandez qualified in all-around (3rd), grabbed a first on the rings with the top area score of the year, a 8.7, and also copped fifth on the parallel bars. He'll be joined by fellow Grenadiers Wayne Olson on the side horse (tie 3rd) and Al Mitsos on the trampoline (8th).

HERSEY'S Huskies will see Gery Morava pacing their effort. Morava qualified at Arlington in all-around (4th), plus on the parallel bars (5th) and tumbling-free exercise (8th).

Kurt Woodbridge will join him after a tie for fourth on the side horse.

Bob McCully will be the lone Wheeling representative at the meet, making it to Niles on the strength of a tie for third on the still rings.

Final Mt. Prospect Boys Baseball Sign-Up Slated

There will be "one more" registration for the 1969 Mount Prospect Boys Baseball Association season.

Although registration for the new season ended two weeks ago for the Mount Prospect Boys baseball program, league officials after hearing two weeks of "I forgot" and "I didn't know about it," have set up a "last time" registration for Saturday, March 15, for all boys still desiring to participate in the '69 Mount Prospect season.

Registration will be held in the Mount Prospect Country Club Community Center's Fountain Room from 10:00 a.m. to 12:00 a.m.

Bob Welch, President of the Mount Prospect Boys Baseball Association, pointed out that any boys requesting entrance to the program after the Saturday registration will be registered, but placed on a waiting list pending openings in the program.

"Registration fees are the same as they have been for the past several seasons," Welch added. "Cost for one boy from a family enrolled in the program is $15.00, while two or more boys from the same family can register for a total of $23.00."

The Mount Prospect baseball program is open to all boys from the ages of 9 to 15.

General Manager Roger Spielman indicated the 1969 season would undoubtedly be the most extensive in the 15 year history of the association.

"By the end of tomorrow's registration," Spielman said, "we will have surpassed our estimates for this coming season. Already we have enough boys for our 36 Bronco League teams. Boys we add during tomorrow's registration will be assigned to a new system giving us more teams than we have ever had."

League officials are quick to point out one of the outstanding features of the Mount Prospect program. Besides furnishing each boy with a uniform, bats, balls, and catcher's equipment, each boy who registers in the program and is assigned to a team must, by league rule, play in at least two innings and bat at least once in each scheduled game.

Complete Accident Insurance is provided for all players, managers, coaches, and other volunteer workers in the program.

Arlington Tennis Club Meeting

The Arlington Heights Tennis Club will hold its annual meeting Saturday at 3:30 p.m. at the Arlington High School cafeteria.

The Tennis Club will elect a president, vice president and treasurer during the meeting. All tennis fans are invited to attend the meeting.

Weekly Feature

Zikes on Tour

Les Zikes Jr., manager of Beverly Lanes in Arlington Heights, cashed for $420 with a 5050 pin-fall for 24 games in the $70,000 Miller High Life Open.

Zikes was up among the leaders but faltered over the final games in his latest stop on the Professional Bowlers Association tour. He finished 29th over-all in the competition.

Currently the hottest item on the PBA tournament tour, Billy Hardwick of Louisville won the Miller championship and the $10,000 first prize in a thrilling finale with Mike Limongello, 220-215.

The $10,000 check from Miller officials upped Hardwick's official earnings for the year to $24,790 and gave him top spot in the official money standings of the PBA.

Zikes is currently competing in the $50,000 Buckeye Open in Toledo, Ohio.

Falcons Fall in Track

A first, second and third by Terry Shakon wasn't enough to lead the Forest View indoor track team to victory as they fell before West Leyden last Monday afternoon, 67-41.

Shakon was the big winner for the Falcons winning the 60 yard high hurdle (8.7), finishing second in the 60 lows (18.2) and taking third in the 60 yard dash (16.9).

Beating out Skakon for the first in the 60 lows was teammate Mike Keen with a 7.8.

Other top spots won by the Falcons were the 440 yard dash with Tom Vaughn posting a 55.6 and the 880 yard run with Dan Bell winning with a 2:04.9 time. Runnerup spots were taken by Bill Stark in the shot put (39-11) and Don Hammer in the pole vault.

The Falcons split in the relay events. They won the eight lap event with a 2:39.6 turned in by Vaughn, Bell, Tony Carnesecci and Mark Ennes.

The frosh-soph team also didn't have much luck going down to defeat 85-19.

Meeting Set March 21 Elk Grove Boys Baseball Expands

Managers and coaches for Elk Grove Boys Baseball, Inc. will look to the past and then to the future when Commissioner Ronald A. Foster, 245 Placid Way, conducts the years first general meeting at 8 p.m., March 21, at the Salt Creek Country Club.

Over 1,100 boys are registered to play baseball this year which is quite a contrast to the 60 boys who first started playing organized baseball in 1958 under the guidance of Jaycee Baseball. The following year, Elk Grove Boys Baseball, Inc. was formed under the direction of the first President Vince Gagliano. At that time, Major and Minor Leagues were formed to accommodate the increased enrollment.

This season will see the expansion of the Leagues to include two new team organizations... the Mets and the Twins, making a total of four-team organizations. Each team organization has a Major team, a Class A team and a Class B team for boys 9 to 12 years of age. The Pony League for 13 and 14 year old boys will have 10 teams. For the first time Elk Grove will have a five team Colt League for boys 15 to 16 years old.

An instructional league of 14 teams is provided for 8 year old boys who are then drafted into a team organization when they start their second season of baseball.

The elected Board of Directors assisting Commissioner Ronald A. Foster are: Assistant Commissioner, John Herman; Treasurer, Ted Czarnecki; Secretary, John Geiger; Field Manager, Dick Cromer; Equipment Manager, Jack Clark; Public Relations, John Carmen; Umpire in Chief, Bernie Santowski.

Pirates Lose Track Meet

Jim Verburg won two events and Mark Visk ran another sensational mile but Palatine's track team fell to Maine East 74-35 in an indoor track meet Tuesday.

Verburg won the 50-yard dash in 5.7 seconds and the low hurdles in 6.4 seconds. Visk ran a 4:23.1 mile. Last week Visk had a 4:18.9.

Don Giancespro nabbed first in the 440-yard dash with a 54.3 time. He edged out Steve Bahfleth who also was timed in 54.3. The mile relay team of Jeff Olshurg, Bahfleth, Fred Miller and Giancespro took first in 3:37.1.

First All-America

The first All-America football team selected by Walter Camp was made up entirely of Princeton, Yale and Harvard players.

Grove Whips Rebels

It was a record day in more ways than one for Elk Grove's indoor track team.

Coach Rich Bader led his thincads against Ridgewood, never having beaten the Rebels since taking the Grove post. He can't say that any longer. The Grenadiers went out and soundly whipped the visiting Norridge team, 78-31, and they set some records doing it.

Pat Texidor was involved in both new marks for Elk Grove. He erased the school mark he and Roy McClellan had shared last season in the 60 yard high hurdles (8.4) with a new standard of 8.2. This tied the field-house record set in 1968 by Ridgewood's Cirignani.

Then he teamed up with Mike Brown, John Flesch and Mike Michella to chalk up a new mark in the eight lap relay — 2:38.9. The old school record was notched in 1968 when Bob Texidor, Pat's twin brother, along with Flesch, Bob Bachus and Bob Uselding ran the distance in 2:39.

Ridgewood finished far behind with a timing of 2:46.5. Then Brown teamed up with Lichter, Dave Whedon and Larry Bachus to win the four lap relay with a clocking of 1:27.6. One of the Ridgewood team fell.

John Flesch was also in on the only sweep of the meet when he just edged out brother Bob to win the 880 yard run in 2:13.6. Bob had a 2:14.7. Gary Shick finished third with a 2:15.0.

Two Grenadiers finished with a pair of wins — Michella and Texidor. Michella, who is undefeated so far this year, captured the long jump and 440 dash again this time with marks of 19-4 and 55.4, respectively.

Texidor won both 60 yard hurdle events notching an 8.2 in the highs and a 7.8 in the lows. Other winners for the Grove were Brown in the 50 dash (6.0), Wayne Wille in the two mile (10:14.5) and Howard Marquillis in the pole vault (11-6).

Taking seconds were Richard Hess in the shot put (39-1), Brown in the long jump (18-7½), Mel Greathouse in the pole vault (11-0), Lichter in the 10 highs (8.9) and the 60 lows (8.2) and Bob Bachus in the mile run (4:53.1).

The frosh-soph team also won big for the Grove — 93-16.

Bader's boys will face highly regarded Wheeling, there, this Saturday in a triangular with Crown starting at noon.

Joe Jolts the Pins for a 601

Bensenville has a joltin' Joe of the bowling lanes in 14-year-old Joe Ruffolo.

Rolling in the Bensenville Junior Boys' League at the Bensenville Bowl last Saturday, Joe fired a blazing 601 series, including opening games of 228 and 205. In the first game he countered six straight strikes, in the second he racked up five.

A 149-average bowler, Joe rolled a 567 the week before.

The 1969 State Gym Meet—How to Watch It

by TOM WALTHOUSE with CHUCK WILLOUR

ARLINGTON'S RON JONES

SIDE HORSE — On the side horse the performer must possess excellent timing and balance. The entire exercise involves the intricate changing of balance from hand to hand. Routines should include fluid movements using all three parts of the horse and facing both directions. Movements are predominantly double leg circles with single leg variations. Major faults are breaks in continuity and touching of the horse with the body.

ARLINGTON'S TERRY HAINES

TRAMPOLINE — In trampolining the performer must possess an excellent sense of relocation. A routine consists of a sequence of ten to twelve tricks. Exercises include variations and combinations of front, back and twisting movements, under control and with maximum height. A routine should include one landing other than on the feet. The routine is terminated immediately if the performer touches any other part of the trampoline other than the bed.

ARLINGTON'S STEVE VON EBERS

STRIP FLOOR EXERCISE or tumbling — free exercise — In strip floor exercise, the gymnast moves up and down the mat, combining elements of balance, strength, flexibility, and tumbling agility into a harmonious routine. The gymnast makes three to four trips down the mat.

(Tom Walthouse is the highly successful coach of the equally successful Arlington gymnastics team which today and tomorrow bids for its second straight gymnastics state championship at Niles West. After his squad captured the state title last year, Walthouse was named Illinois Coach of the Year. This year another honor has come his way; he has been invited by the International Gym Federation to the World coaches Symposium in Switzerland, one of only three American gymnastics coaches to be so honored.)

To enhance the fan's appreciation of gymnastics, Walthouse explains some of the factors that determine a gymnast's score:

Half the value of a performer's exercise is based on the execution of his routine, other vital factors entering into the judging of a routine are the degree of difficulty of the tricks the performer includes in his routine and the originality of his routine.

Since a routine consists of 10-12 tricks, you will have an ample number of opportunities to observe execution.

For example, watch for pointed toes. If they are not pointed, then 0.1 points is deducted. Also watch for feet together, if they're not, it's another 0.2-0.3 points deduction. If a performer's arms are not straight in the execution of his tricks, the penalty is 0.2-0.5 points deducted from his score.

Also watch for outstanding mounts and dismounts. They can make a superior routine out of an average one. For example, a boy who mounts or dismounts his apparatus with a high difficulty trick can add considerably to his chances of a higher score. If a dismount is executed particularly well, 0.3 points can be added by the judges to the overall value of his performance. If the boy falters, however, deduct 0.1 point for every step.

It should also be noted that in district and state meets, any boy who comes off the apparatus, or misses, can remount and take a one point deduction from his score.

Now, what to look for in each event:

On the trampoline, watch for the boy who works high and has excellent form. As in all gymnastics events, the performer on the trampoline should keep his legs straight, toes pointed. Included in his routine should be some double and twisting somersault work, going both forward and backward. Watch particularly the mounts and dismounts, they could make the difference between a state champion and a second or third place performer.

On the side horse, execution is of prime importance. The performer isn't allowed to touch his legs on the sides of the horse, though he must work all areas of the horse, up and down and both sides. High work again is important, as when the performer is executing the scissors, a required movement. The higher he kicks his legs, toes straight and arms unbraced at the elbows, the higher his score.

On the high bar, the performer should predominantly do giant swings. A hint: notice his grip on the bar, whether his hands are in an inverted position. If so, he will earn a higher score from the judges, since this is a difficult trick. The performer should work both sides of the bar, and there should be a release where the performer glides over the bar to a regrasp — this is very difficult. Again watch the mount and dismount for high degrees of difficulty.

On the parallel bars the boy should perform mostly swinging moves with at least one held position and a strength movement where he presses into something like the handstand. He should also include a release of the bars with a high element of risk — element of risk, or difficulty, is one of the prime things a performer is judged on. Again, watch his dismount, see if he earns an extra 0.3 points for a high-value dismount.

On the still rings, the performer's routine should include some swinging, some strength and, of course, good mounts and dismounts. Watch for the boy who shows a giant swing — which starts from the hand stand position and comes down in a swing back into a hand stand. A hint: the boy who can do that twice in his routine will capture a lot of points. But just to show a move without any execution or style isn't enough, it has to be performed well. Also, a boy who has too many strength moves in his routines and not enough swing will be penalized. Swings should be 60% or more of a routine. Again watch for that dismount — if a boy can finish off a high difficulty routine with a high difficulty dismount, he'll collect those extra 0.3 points.

The tumbling-free exercise competition lasts about 45 seconds to a minute, with the performer making three or four trips down the mat. In tumbling, you need quickness, grace, showmanship and poise. The boy must show strength with a handstand that lasts at least two seconds. Watch the mounts and dismounts again, but particularly the dismounts. If a boy can go through a basically difficult routine and polish it off with a very stylish and difficult dismount, and still look fresh, then he'll get those 0.3 points again.

Also look for originality in the performer's routine. If he does something that none of the other competitors has done, he'll get and deserve more points from the judges.

ARLINGTON'S JIM BROUSSEAU

PARALLEL BARS — Strength and balance are the prime requisites for the performer on the parallel bars. Routines should include at least one trick below and one trick above the bars in which the grip is momentarily released. Movements are predominantly swinging. Major faults are breaks in continuity and touching of the bars with the body.

ARLINGTON'S BOB GLEICHMAN

STILL RINGS — Ring performers must possess balance and an unusual amount of strength. Routines should include two handstands and at least one hold move requiring strength. Exercise should include a combination of strength, moves, swinging moves and still position. Major faults include bending of the arms and touching the straps while in handstands, lack of holding still positions the required three seconds, and swinging of the rings.

ARLINGTON'S GEORGE CRESWELL

HORIZONTAL BAR — On the horizontal or high bar, the performer must possess strength, timing and a great amount of daringness. Routines should include variations between giant swings and "in-bar" moves. Movements are predominantly swinging and vaulting without pause or hesitations. Breaks in the continuity of the routine are major faults on the horizontal bar.

Here's a real Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde!

Keith Johnson is a pre-ministerial student at Judson College. A soft-spoken boy dedicated to the Christian philosophy, he is youth director of an inner-city church in Chicago, and a leader in the work of gospel missions.

But for two evenings he will assume the role of an obnoxious boy, an over-sexed intellectual snob. That's because Johnson will play Alex in Tri-Village Theatre Guild's production of "Take Her, She's Mine."

Quite an assignment!

Close your eyes. Then walk into any room in your home. No matter how well you think you know that room you are bound to experience some difficulty getting around.

This is the world of Suzy Hendrix. Unlike you, she can't open her eyes after bumping into a piece of furniture. She's blind.

Suzy is the main character in "Wait Until Dark," the Fredrick Knott drama which was one of Broadway's best a few seasons back and which became one of last year's top movies.

The story is good. The Guild Players performance in Streamwood wasn't.

The setting is the Hendrix's Greenwich Village apartment. Suzy's husband, Sam, had met a woman at the airport who asked him to deliver a doll for her. Unknown to him, the doll was filled with heroin.

Sam has to go out of town on business leaving Suzy alone and at the mercy of three men desperate to get their hands on the doll.

Although a few of the Guild actors are good in spots, the entire production suffers from a general lack of talent. Four of the five biggest parts were carried by actors new to the Guild stage.

If you can force yourself to sit through the stiff, talky first act, the suspense and action of act two will take over and compensate you somewhat for your early boredom. Much of the second act is done in darkness as Suzy removes some fuses and puts psychopathic killer Harry Roat Jr. on her own level of vision.

Rosemary Tengler is not very convincing as a blind woman. At times she walks through the apartment like a zombie and moments later she's flitting around like a suburban housewife. Her line delivery lacked skill and feeling.

I liked Walter Gleason in the role of Roat. Gleason is quite small and this added to the sinister quality of his character. A big man could not have played the cool psychopath as well. Generally speaking he handled the role with poise and style.

William Schumacher as gangster Mike Talman had a monotonous, whiney voice that really played on my nerves.

I suppose my favorite in the cast was eleven-year-old Lisa Dunler who played Gloria, the little girl upstairs. Lisa seemed perfectly natural as a child who is at times belligerent, at times sympathetic, and at times excited about helping Suzy do some sleuthing.

In all fairness, the production crew deserves much credit, even if the cast doesn't. The set was well constructed (the door, which plays an important role, always closed tight and never caused the walls to wobble) and the lighting was effectively handled.

M and S Dinner Play Opens in Bensenville

"Tango Eddie" Frecker, Obbe Zwick, Fatto Kleest, Miss Prose and Mr. Wong. These are some of the unlikely — yet singularly descriptive — names given by the author to the cosmopolitan cast of kooky characters in the comedy romp, "Harold," Elk Grove Masque and Staff's dinner-play offering opening tonight at Bensenville's Green Tree Inn.

Commenting on the closing days of rehearsal of the heavily-male cast, Bob Johnson, who effects a wind-swept coiffure and white buck shoes in his interpretation of "Tango Eddie," says, "if the play is half as funny as these guys think they are (modestly excluding himself in his description of pre-curtain 'messing around') it ought to be the laugh riot of the century. There are no straight men anymore!"

Director Shirley Johnson agrees. But, somewhat hardened to these cutting up sessions from long experience is the canvas back chair, and confident of the "panic" that will cool down the cut-ups come opening night, she shows admirable restraint as the finishing touches are applied to the show.

The seventh play produced by Masque and Staff in this format, "Harold" will be presented on a platform immediately following a full-course buffet supper served in the downstairs banquet room at the Green Tree Inn.

Additional performances will be held on March 15, 16, 21, 22, 23, and 28, 29 and 30. Dinners are served from 7 p.m. on Fridays and Saturdays, and from 6 p.m. on Sundays.

Performances on Saturday evenings are restricted to patrons and guests. Reservations may be made by calling 437-8707 between 4 and 9 p.m.

MISS PROSE (Loretta Tomaselli) is an English teacher pressed into service by "Amalgamated Harold" to help give social polish to young Harold Selbar (Bob Farber) and prepare him for his planned foray into the upper strata of New York society, in this scene from the comedy, "Harold," opening tonight at Ehlen's Green Tree Inn in Bensenville.

THE ACCEPTED INFLUENCE IN THE NORTHWEST SUBURBS

Standards, Advertising Built Image for Realtors, Says Tite

Northwest Suburban Realtors have upgraded the image of their profession through a sustained public and community relations work, high ethical standards, constant advertising and promotion and dignified sales offices and personnel.

That was the assessment of Wayne Tite, director of promotion for Paddock Publications, when he spoke before the Northwest Suburban Board of Realtors at Rolling Green Country Club last night.

TITE TOLD the monthly assemblage of a growing need for effective promotion, he critiqued past efforts, offered tips to overcome difficulties in advertising and promotion, and offered suggestions to improve advertising results through follow-up.

Realtors' efforts have given them an image of "strict professionalism" in the community, Tite said.

At the same time, he added, advertising techniques have grown more sophisticated today. Advertising is "a multi-billion dollar industry that is so powerful and influential it actually changes our thoughts, our habits and our lives. The successful advertising agencies... have equipped their staff with the most accomplished psychologists money can buy. These psychologists actually study the products and the markets, then through the process of motivation determine the best advertising program for the specific product."

SINCE REALTORS "basically sell service," they are restricted from using the "more dynamic" wordage of some industries.

"You do not have the advantage of new model changes every year like the auto industry has, and you cannot use to any great effect the invention of clearance sales or inventory close-outs." One alternative Realtors have used, Tite pointed

WAYNE TITE

Vogel Joins Kemmerly

John A. Vogel, a resident of Prospect Heights for the past 12 years, recently returned from Lake Havasu City, Ariz., where he has an interest in a North American Van Lines agency, to join the new Kemmerly Real Estate office in Prospect Heights. This is the newest of five Kemmerly offices in the Northwest area.

Vogel had eight years of service with the Prospect Heights Post Office. Vogel, an avid amateur pilot, and his wife Patricia, a grammar school teacher, reside at 10 Elaine Circle West, Prospect Heights.

out, is volume advertising. Consistent, everyday appearance of collective real estate advertising has created a market where "you have persuaded the great percentage of customers to rely on Realtors in general. It now becomes your job to entice customers individually."

... I am the basis of all wealth, the heritage of the wise, the thrifty and the prudent. I am the poor man's joy and comfort, the rich man's prize, the right hand of capital, the silent partner of many thousands of successful men.

I am the solace of the widow, the comfort of old age, the cornerstone of security against misfortune and want. I am handed down to children, through generations, as a thing of greatest worth. I am the choicest fruit of toil. Credit respects me. Yet I am humble.

I stand before every man bidding him know me for what I am and possess me. I grow and increase in value through countless days. Though I seem dormant, my worth increases, never failing, never ceasing. Time is my aid and populations heap up my gain. Fire and the elements, I defy, for they cannot destroy me. My possessors learn to believe in me; invariably they become envied. While all things wither and decay, I survive.

The Centuries find me younger, increasing my strength. The thrifless speak ill of me. The charlatans of finance attack me. I am trustworthy. I am sound.

Unfailingly I triumph and my detractors are disproved. Minerals and oils come from me. I am the producer of food, the basis for ships and factories, the foundation of banks. Yet I am so common that thousands, unthinking and unknowing, pass me by.

I AM REAL ESTATE!

ComEd Sales Up 8.6 Per Cent

Commonwealth Edison Co.'s electricity sales to ultimate consumers in 1968 gained 8.6 per cent over 1967, reflecting a 12.1 per cent upsurge in residential sales and a 10.2 per cent increase in average residential use. Chrmn. J. Harris Ward said in his annual report to stockholders.

He said ultimate consumer sales in 1968 soared to an all-time high of 39.7 billion kilowatt-hours.

Earnings in 1968 were $2.99 a common share on net income of $131,763,906, compared with $2.98 on a net of $131,007,757 in 1967. Without the federal income tax surcharge, it was noted, earnings would have risen to $3.23 a common share.

Pugnacious

A mongoose the size of a small house cat will challenge a seven-foot cobra to combat.

In 1968, according to Ward, Commonwealth Edison provided $202,310,655 of local, state and federal taxes for electric operations. The amount of taxes, he said, is equal to $81 for every customer on the company's lines.

In reviewing company plans for increasing generating capability to 15,800,000 kilowatts by 1974, Ward pointed to anticipated savings from nuclear power generation.

"Four of our six nuclear units on order were purchased on firm price, turnkey contracts for an average of $118 per kilowatt, including all overheads," he said. "The two others, at our Zion station, are expected to cost a third to a half more, depending on future construction costs. In all, these six nuclear units have a total capacity of over 5,000,000 kilowatts at prices which look more and more attractive in the light of today's market."

Smith Corp. Tells Shares

Directors of A. O. Smith Corp. Monday have approved an increase in authorized common shares from three million to six million and authorized one million shares of preferred stock.

L. B. Smith, chairman and chief executive officer, said that although there are no immediate plans to issue the additional common stock or the preferred shares, "they will give the company greater flexibility for possible acquisitions or other corporate purposes." At the end of 1968, the company had 2,490,442 shares of common stock outstanding. It presently has no preferred stock.

Population Explosion Triggers 2nd Blast

The world's population explosion is causing another type of chain reaction — an electrical explosion, according to Frank H. Roby, president of Sola Basic Industries.

Addressing more than 300 representatives of the electrical trades gathered to observe National Electrical Week, Roby pointed out that while the world's population is expected to soar 76 per cent to 6 billion by the year 2000, the consumption of electricity per person by that time will be 20,000 kilowatts, over three times the present usage.

As the standard of living throughout the world improves, people are demanding more electricity to do everything from heating, cooling and lighting their homes and to powering ski lifts and space capsules, Roby noted.

Milwaukee is a quartered Sola Basic has 16 domestic and 10 internationally located manufacturing facilities, including one in Elk Grove Village.

Pre-tax profit was up over 15 per cent. Earnings for the final quarter were 77 cents, compared with 67 cents for the final period in 1967.

The Board of Directors declared the regular quarterly dividend of 20 cents per share, payable March 31 to shareholders of record March 14.

Des Plaines Bank Dividends Increased

G. Rex Wilson, president of Des Plaines National Bank, announced this week that the Board of Directors of the financial institution has voted to increase the regular quarterly dividends to the bank's shareholders by 25 per cent this year.

"This means," says Wilson, "that effective with the dividend payments to be made on March 20th, stockholders will receive 25 cents per share instead of the 20 cents per share which they were paid in the last half of 1968, and reflects the optimism the directors feel about the future growth of the bank predicted at the beginning of 1968."

Miller Reports $18 Million Home Sales

Over $18 million in new home sales last year were reported by Miller Builders, Inc.

It was an all-time company record of 508 sales which topped 1967, its next best year when 378 homes were sold for over $12 million.

Pres. Albert J. Miller said the firm's apartment division currently has two major developments underway which will contain over 1,800 units when completed. Several other apartment developments will be announced soon and construction will be started this Spring, he said.

MILLER'S planned apartment projects are: Greenbrier Apartments in Arlington Heights and Yorktowne Apartments just north of the new Yorktown Shopping Center in Lombard. Construction is scheduled to begin on Yorktowne this Spring, and the development as planned will be the largest suburban apartment complex yet announced in the Chicago area. When completed, it will have almost as many apartments as now are in Carl Sandburg Village.

MILLER'S commercial division completed the $2 million Fairway office building in Skokie, which is 92 per cent leased. Plans were completed for a $35 million commercial development on the southeast corner of Skokie Blvd. and Golf Road in Skokie, and construction will begin this year on its first phase. To be known as The Concourse, it will consist of a 580 room hotel, four highrise office buildings containing 600,000 square feet of space, a 1,200 seat motion picture theater, and a 60,000 square foot shopping arcade, as well as a multiple story parking facility.

The firm is also developing two industrial parks: Plum Grove Industrial Estates and Rolling Meadows Industrial Park.

The single-family home division is currently building five subdivisions, three of which were opened in 1968: Surrey Ridge West and Northgate in Arlington Heights and Willow West in Glenview. During the year they continued to build in Wil O Way in Naperville and Reseda West in Palatine. In all, the firm offers 36 different home plans priced from $29,000 to $50,000.

Bank Cites Top Growth

John J. Woods, president of the Bank of Rolling Meadows, Rolling Meadows, announces that the bank had its greatest growth during 1968. Assets increased $1,169,087 during the year, or 21.1 per cent to $6,715,105 from $5,546,018 as compared to 1967's increase of 15.8 per cent or $758,962. Total deposits increased $1,032,084 during the year, or 21.5 per cent to $5,843,619 from $4,811,535 as compared to the previous year's gain of 17.4 per cent of $714,360.

A second walk-up service window facility was installed and is now operated on Mondays with the other window when the bank lobby is closed. This helps to relieve customers' demands on the existing two drive-up windows. Improved burglary and holdup systems to provide maximum protection and security were installed in 1968, also.

Plans are now underway for enlarging and remodeling the present facilities. This expansion, which includes additional drive-up windows and enlarged lobby, should be completed during the latter part of 1969. The bank also plans a Tenth Anniversary Celebration later this year.

Approval Urged For School Levy

For the third time in less than a year the Bloomingdale School District is asking its voters to increase the educational fund levy 21 cents to $1.59 per $100 of assessed valuation.

And for the third time "political" problems — some of them petty — threaten to drown out the great need for solving the educational problems.

Of four elementary school districts posing similar referenda last June, only Bloomingdale's was defeated in an apathetic 270 total vote count.

Apathy killed the referendum by 46 votes. Forty-six persons made the decision for the approximately 1,600 registered voters in the district.

In the second try in September, Catholic voters, incensed over the school board's decision not to participate in a shared-time physical education program for St. Walter's students to take in the Roselle School District, got out a less apathetic "no" vote and helped defeat the referendum in a 2-to-1 total vote of 565.

No doubt, apathy and such "partisan" interests were not the only reasons the referenda were defeated.

Add to that list older persons whose children are grown and educated and therefore feel no responsibility to help educate other children as other taxpayers helped educate their children; young homeowners so shortsighted they are not willing to make an investment in education for their future children; and worst, the petty few who can't overlook personality differences for the good of the whole.

It costs $590 to educate each child each year — and the district is operating on a $104,000 deficit budget.

Since the first two referenda were defeated, the district has had to eliminate remedial reading classes and advanced education classes.

The "free busing" issue, even though it was caused by financial problems in another fund, threatens to scuttle passage of the referendum Saturday by persons who do not understand the issue.

Passage or defeat of Saturday's referendum will have no effect on the curtailment of free busing for district children living within 1½ miles of their school.

This involves another one of the eight separate funds set up by law under the school code, and is another problem with another set of possible solutions.

Even if the referendum was to be passed Saturday, the financial benefits would not be felt next year or the next, and more program cutbacks will undoubtedly come.

Passage of the referenda tomorrow is the only way to pull the district out of an ever-deepening hole.

The Register joins the Citizen's Advisory Council in urging Bloomingdale voters to approve the 21-cent educational fund tax rate increase tomorrow.

Not To Bury a Foe But To Honor An Athlete

by PHIL KURTH

Gary Steger has visited Bensenville before.

But it was always in the uniform of a "hated" opponent, Lake Park.

Last spring in Bensenville he hammered a dramatic home run to end the second game of a double-header with Fenton and give the Lancers a clean sweep. Gary was a villain that day.

TOMORROW night Gary will visit Bensenville again, under tremendously different circumstances. The bitter Lake Park-Fenton rivalry will be forgotten; the Milwaukee Bell will be forgotten.

Remembered will be a great athlete and a great gentleman who suffered a crippling injury on the football field and is starting the long, slow road to recovery.

The town of Bensenville wants to help. Fred Steger, village president, has proclaimed March 15 Gary Steger Day.

A nightful of basketball action and entertainment is planned tomorrow at Fenton to honor Gary and help raise money for the rehabilitation ahead.

AN HONOR guard from the Fenton letter club will form a line and escort Gary in.

Between the first and second games of the evening, Gary and his family will be presented a national plaque by the Bensenville Tioga VFW Post 2149.

Prior to the opening game, Steger will read his proclamation and the Blackhawk Junior High School band will lead the crowd in the National Anthem.

Rev. Gordon Ingram will lead the invocation. Ralph Schultz, commander of the Tioga Post, will lead the pledge of allegiance.

Later in the evening the Tioga VFW Ladies Auxiliary will present a $25 donation and an American flag to the Steger family.

And the local Indian Guides will present a donation and put on a little demonstration.

The junior high band will play during halftime of the first game and the Fenton choir will entertain at halftime of the second game.

LAKE PARK High School will get into the action with a presentation at halftime of the final game.

John Varble, Bensenville park commissioner, will present small trophies to each of the boys participating as a moment of Gary Steger Night in Bensenville.

Ken Kaufman, assistant superintendent of schools, will act as master of ceremonies for the night.

A special guest will be Brian Piccolo, hard-driving halfback and fullback of the Chicago Bears.

During the evening, a moment of silence will be observed for Art Koopman, coach in the Bensenville Boys' Athletic Association (BBAA), who died recently.

THE BENEDICTION at evening's end will be given by Father Jim Brommel of St. Alexis Catholic Church.

Hardcourt fans will see three basketball games, the first starting shortly after 6 p.m.

Game one will pit the Fenton faculty basketball team against a squad made up of all-stars from the Bensenville men's church league.

In game two, the seventh grade team from Blackhawk will face an all-star team from the BBAA's major league.

The main attraction of the evening will feature a showdown between Blackhawk's eighth grade team and the St. Charles Borromeo eighth grade team (undefeated in the Suburban Catholic League).

MORE THAN 2,100 tickets already have been sold, according to Will Davidson of the BBAA, and it's expected that another 500 will go before tomorrow night.

The town of Bensenville wasn't always too happy to see Gary — not with a football or a bat in his hands, anyway.

But tomorrow a couple of thousand people will turn out to honor and applaud him and let him know that they're rooting for him, too.

Lake Street Repaving Planned—At No Cost

Lake Street through Bloomingdale will be repaved at no cost to the village, Stanley Haverkamp, village president, said Wednesday.

The expected $1 million project will include resurfacing and left turn bays at Roselle-Bloomingdale Road, according to Sigmond Ziejewski, Illinois Dist. 1 highway engineer.

Resurfacing of Lake Street or Route 20 will begin east of Bartlett and continue along a 7½-mile stretch to about Swift Road, said Ziejewski.

Bids will be let in July or August with the project getting underway in late summer or early fall.

HE SAID the state is financing the project.

Other improvements in the Bloomingdale area will include curbing through parts of Bloomingdale at the intersection with Roselle-Bloomingdale Road and Lake Street.

Upon a request from the state highway department, the village board voted to direct its attorney to prepare an ordinance prohibiting parking on Lake Street from Maple to Ridge.

In other action, the board instructed its attorney to prepare an ordinance covering recom-

45 Acts Perform

In Show Tonight

A 45-act talent show will be held tonight at 7:30 in Wood Dale Junior High School.

SPONSORED by the Wood Dale Junior Woman's Club, the show will feature performances by youngsters from Wood Dale, Bensenville, Itasca and Addison.

"It's going to be a marathon," said Mrs. Jerry Jacobs.

The program was arranged by Mrs. Richard Dhooge and Mrs. Robert Jensen, ways and means committee chairmen.

mentations made by the zoning board of appeals for a 36-acre 400-unit apartment complex in what was formerly known as Block's Grove.

THE ZONING board is asking that the apartment complex by developer James Refram be limited to 400 units, 300 two-bedroom and 100 one-bedroom apartments.

Also it is recommended that the height of eight 50-unit buildings be limited to four stories or 37.3 feet, provide 600 parking spaces, five-foot screening, and that special use be granted for one year.

If no construction begins within a year the zoning would revert from R-5 (multiple dwelling) to R-1 (single family).

In other business, Robert Homola, 358 Cardinal Drive, an engineer for Western Electric, was appointed to fill a vacancy on the plan commission created by the retirement of Bud Franz.

Taxpayers Hear Park Vote Plea

The Roselle Park District will present plans tonight at a Roselle Taxpayers League meeting for the upcoming March 29 $400,000 park improvement referendum.

THE GATHERING will be held at the home of Figg Nyborg, 317 Brookwood Terrace, Roselle, at 8:30 p.m.

The public is invited to attend.

Park plans include vast improvements at Turner Pond Park and Community Park.

A community swimming pool complex and other recreational facilities would be constructed.

Zoning Asked For Westlake

Petitions for pre-annexation zoning for the 477-acre Hoffman-Rosner Corp. complex, proposed for an area southeast of Bloomingdale, were presented to the village board Wednesday.

Lowell Siff, of the firm, based in Hoffman Estates said a petition for zoning with DuPage County would be withdrawn.

THE PROPOSED development, known as Westlake, is in an unincorporated area near Army Trail, Bloomingdale, and Glen Ellyn roads.

A commercial-residential development expected to cost $70 million, it would include 860 homes, 539 condominiums, and 1,030 apartment units in addition to a shopping center, theaters, parks, and a lake.

Siff presented petitions for pre-annexation zoning, a partial and preliminary annexation agreement, and a petition for public hearing.

THE PETITIONS were referred to Trustee Robert McLaughlin, chairman of the zoning and planning committee.

Stanley Haverkamp, village president, told the 30 visitors at the meeting that the "public will have time to have its say at the public hearing."

Since the first two referenda were defeated, the district has had to eliminate remedial reading classes and advanced education classes.

The "free busing" issue, even though it was caused by financial problems in another fund, threatens to scuttle passage of the referendum Saturday by persons who do not understand the issue.

Passage or defeat of Saturday's referendum will have no effect on the curtailment of free busing for district children living within 1½ miles of their school.

This involves another one of the eight separate funds set up by law under the school code, and is another problem with another set of possible solutions.

Even if the referendum was to be passed Saturday, the financial benefits would not be felt next year or the next, and more program cutbacks will undoubtedly come.

Passage of the referenda tomorrow is the only way to pull the district out of an ever-deepening hole.

Not To Bury a Foe But To Honor An Athlete

by PHIL KURTZ

Gary Steger has visited Bensenville before. But it was always in the uniform of a "hated" opponent, Lake Park.

Last spring in Bensenville he hammered a dramatic home run to end the second game of a double-header with Fenton and give the Lancers a clean sweep.

Gary was a villain that day. TOMORROW night Gary will visit Bensenville again, under tremendously different circumstances. The bitter Lake Park-Fenton rivalry will be forgotten; the Milwaukee Bell will be forgotten.

Remembered will be a great athlete and a great gentleman who suffered a crippling injury on the football field and is starting the long, slow road to recovery.

The town of Bensenville wants to help. Fred Steger, village president, has proclaimed March 15 Gary Steger Day.

A nightful of basketball action and entertainment is planned tomorrow at Fenton to honor Gary and help raise money for the rehabilitation ahead.

AN HONOR guard from the Fenton letter club will form a line and escort Gary in.

Between the first and second games of the evening, Gary and his family will be presented a national plaque by the Bensenville Tioga VFW Post 2149.

Prior to the opening game, Steger will read his proclamation and the Blackhawk Junior High School band will lead the crowd in the National Anthem.

Rev Gordon Ingram will lead the invocation. Ralph Schultz, commander of the Tioga Post, will lead the pledge of allegiance.

Later in the evening the Tioga VFW Ladies Auxiliary will present a $25 donation and an American flag to the Steger family.

And the local Indian Guides will present a donation and put on a little demonstration.

The junior high band will play during halftime of the first game and the Fenton choir will entertain at halftime of the second game.

LAKE PARK High School will get into the action with a presentation at halftime of the final game.

John Varble, Bensenville park commissioner, will present small trophies to each of the boys participating as a memento of Gary Steger Night in Bensenville.

Ken Kaufman, assistant superintendent of schools, will act as master of ceremonies for the night.

A special guest will be Brian Piccolo, hard-driving halfback and fullback of the Chicago Bears.

During the evening, a moment of silence will be observed for Art Koopman, coach in the Bensenville Boys' Athletic Association (BBAA), who died recently.

THE BENEDICTION at evening's end will be given by Father Jim Brommel of St. Alexis Catholic Church.

Hardcourt fans will see three basketball games, the first starting shortly after 6 p.m.

Game one will pit the Fenton faculty basketball team against a squad made up of all-stars from the Bensenville men's church league.

In game two, the seventh grade team from Blackhawk will face an all-star team from the BBAA's major league.

The main attraction of the evening will feature a showdown between Blackhawk's eighth grade team and the St. Charles Borromeo eighth grade team (undefeated in the Suburban Catholic League).

MORE THAN 2,100 tickets already have been sold, according to Will Davidson of the BBAA, and it's expected that another 500 will go before tomorrow night.

The town of Bensenville wasn't always too happy to see Gary — not with a football or a bat in his hands, anyway.

But tomorrow a couple of thousand people will turn out to honor and applaud him and let him know that they're rooting for him, too.

Lake Street Repaving Planned—At No Cost

Lake Street through Bloomingdale will be repaved at no cost to the village, Stanley Haverkamp, village president, said Wednesday.

The expected $1 million project will include resurfacing and left turn bays at Roselle-Bloomingdale Road, according to Sigmond Ziejewski, Illinois Dist. 1 highway engineer.

Resurfacing of Lake Street or Route 20 will begin east of Bartlett and continue along a 7½-mile stretch to about Swift Road, said Ziejewski.

Bids will be let in July or August with the project getting underway in late summer or early fall.

HE SAID the state is financing the project.

Other improvements in the Bloomingdale area will include curbing through parts of Bloomingdale at the intersection with Roselle-Bloomingdale Road and Lake Street.

THE ZONING board is asking that the apartment complex be limited to 400 units, 300 two-bedroom and 100 one-bedroom apartments.

Also it is recommended that the height of eight 50-unit buildings be limited to four stories or 37.3 feet, provide 600 parking spaces, five-foot screening, and that special use be granted for one year.

If no construction begins within a year the zoning would revert from R-5 (multiple dwelling) to R-1 (single family).

In other business, Robert Homola, 358 Cardinal Drive, an engineer for Western Electric, was appointed to fill a vacancy on the plan commission created by the retirement of Bud Franz.

Taxpayers Hear Park Vote Plea

The Roselle Park District will present plans tonight at a Roselle Taxpayers League meeting for the upcoming March 29 $400,000 park improvement referendum.

THE GATHERING will be held at the home of Firg Nyborg, 317 Brookwood Terrace, Roselle, at 8:30 p.m.

The public is invited to attend.

Park plans include vast improvements at Turner Pond Park and Community Park. A community swimming pool complex and other recreational facilities would be constructed.

Zoning Asked For Westlake

Petitions for pre-annexation zoning for the 477-acre Hoffman-Rosner Corp. complex, proposed for an area southeast of Bloomingdale, were presented to the village board Wednesday.

Lowell Siff, of the firm, based in Hoffman Estates said a petition for zoning with DuPage County would be withdrawn.

THE PROPOSED development, known as Westlake, is in an unincorporated area near Army Trail, Bloomingdale, and Glen Ellyn roads.

A commercial-residential development expected to cost $70 million, it would include 850 homes, 539 condominiums, and 1,030 apartment units in addition to a shopping center, theaters, parks, and a lake.

Siff presented petitions for pre-annexation zoning, a partial and preliminary annexation agreement, and a petition for public hearing.

THE PETITIONS were referred to Trustee Robert McLaughlin, chairman of the zoning and planning committee.

Stanley Haverkamp, village president, told the 30 visitors at the meeting that the "public will have time to have its say at the public hearing."

Chief Tett Toils Hard For Degree

Why would a man spend three years taking courses at night school at the College of DuPage and Triton College?

Bensenville Police Chief Walter Tett is already an established police officer, having been chief for eight years.

He started 15 years ago with the Bensenville police force when Harry Kolze was chief.

Still, he decided on taking correspondence courses and attending regular college classes.

Tuesday, those hours in class paid off when he received an associate degree in police science from the National Law Enforcement Academy.

TETT, 43, said he wanted to make himself a better administrator and law enforcement officer.

So, he went back to school. There's a little more to it than that, though.

"I believe all police departments will require two years of college," Tett said.

It's done in many places in California, he said, adding that it could be required here within three to five years.

Police will have to be college trained, Tett said, in order to stay abreast of the rest of society.

"More and more people are getting college degrees," Tett said, adding that police also must become more knowledgeable.

DURING HIS schooling, Tett took courses in criminal law, juvenile delinquency, fingerprint identification, and classification, and administration, just to mention a few.

He also took courses in sociology, psychology, and criminology.

Tett's desire to go to school is also something he has stressed to the other members of the department.

Officers in Bensenville average over 1,000 hours in courses designed to improve them in their field.

SGT. DONALD Jensen, and Patrolmen Leonard Mendoza, James Bock, Robert Stueve, and Peter Bloode, are currently enrolled in courses.

Cpt. Rolf Hodel recently began a three-week eight-hour-a-day course in police supervision and management.

Lt. Arthur Garcia and Sgt. Lawrence Bieneman completed a two-day course in the handling of explosives Tuesday. Educating oneself is also important for a monetary reason, Tett said.

To be paid more one has to become better at his profession, according to Tett.

A combination of experience in police work and college credits will make good police officers, he said.

WALTER TETT, Bensenville police chief, received an associate degree in police science Tuesday at a National Law Enforcement Academy luncheon at Sheraton O'Hare Inn. Chief N. Lee Tucker, right, chairman of the American Federation of Police Training Committee, presented the degree. Bensenville Village Pres. Fred Steging, center, also attended the luncheon.

'UPLIFT' IS VICTIM OF VOTE

"Project Uplift" at Fenton High School, a 100 per cent federally refunded project for "culturally deprived" students, was spread a little thinner by the school board Tuesday night.

The action was taken in an effort to replace a special program that will have to be curtailed as a result of a recent 21-cent educational fund referendum defeat.

The board voted to submit a two-part proposal for an anticipated $5,300 grant.

Thirty per cent of the money will be used to develop a program to help freshmen with reading deficiencies instead of using all of the money only for "Project Uplift," as in the past.

THIS WILL take the place of special English and world prob-

Purpose of the project was twofold, according to administrative assistant James Riebock: To show students the two extremes of life — wealth and poverty — and to show them what wealth they have.

The group met for six weeks during the summer and toured such places as the Chicago slums, the North Shore area and Elgin State Mental Hospital, and ate in fancy restaurants and attended plays.

FUNDED UNDER Title I of the National Defense Education Act, the program was aimed at the "culturally deprived" Fenton students.

Principal Norman West said there are degrees of being disadvantaged.

"Only three of the 25 kids had been to Wrigley Field. It was the first time for many of the kids to visit the Lincoln Park Zoo... these are deprived kids," West said.

He also felt that today's students are only observing personal interaction on television rather than learning to get along with other people themselves.

"Project Uplift," he felt, was a way to introduce students to other ways of life.

Kathleen Axman, a senior who had participated in the project, told the board she was "kinda stuck in middle class Bensenville" and the project helped her realize other people's problems from actual experience rather than through a text book.

"I LEARNED that Negroes are really the same as us — we even laughed at the same jokes," she said.

"The whole project opened my eyes on a lot of things — it was really shocking," said senior Richard Snyder. He said the field trip that impressed him most was the one to Elgin Hospital.

Senior Ken Lindholm said it was valuable to take the field trips as a whole.

Faculty sponsors John Pavlovich and Rick Orsinger said the attitudinal tests given the students at the beginning and the end of the six-week project showed marked changes in attitudes.

West said that in the two years of the project there has been only one "incident" — and that happened the first day of the first year of the project.

"ONE GIRL liked Old Town so much she stayed," he said. She was subsequently suspended from the program, he added.

The students, Pavlovich and Orsinger all agreed on one criticism of the project — not enough time for discussion of the things the students saw on the tours.

The students participating in the project were carefully screened after as many as three interviews.

To develop this program, two teachers and a consultant will be hired this summer.

For the past two summers, "Project Uplift" has taken 25 carefully selected students into both the Chicago inner-city slums and the "Gold Coast."

Purpose of the project was twofold, according to administrative assistant James Riebock: To show students the two extremes of life — wealth and poverty — and to show them what wealth they have.

Dist. 7 To Stand Pat For 'Unknown' Growth

No immediate building expansion is planned in Wood Dale Elementary School Dist. 7, according to a projected enrollment report by the superintendent.

Supt. Warren B. Carson recently reported to the school board that he does not want to recommend a building program until he has a better indication which way the village will grow.

Carson said Wednesday there are "some very critical unknowns" that must be answered before a building program can be started.

Two thirds of the district is open land, Carson said. "Any decision on what to put where better be right," he said.

THE DISTRICT has a seven-acre site near the Mohawk Manor subdivision off Illinois 83. However, it appears that area is leaning toward industrial development, Carson said.

Elk Grove Village recently annexed a 208-acre industrial tract south of Devon Avenue.

The Moody Wood Dale Airport south of Thorndale Avenue also has been considered as an industrial site after the airport closes.

Carson said there will be little gain in enrollment in the district's four schools, possibly fewer than 50 students, by September. Dist. 7 currently has 1,575 students.

The superintendent said he had been considering portable classrooms but, with only a small increase in enrollment, this would be unlikely.

"IF WE squeeze for a year maybe we'll have better direction," Carson said.

He explained that he believes the "tight money market" has prevented young couples with one child from moving into the suburbs.

This factor coupled with the lack of any major residential subdivisions in Wood Dale's school district has led to only a small increase in enrollment over the past school year.

The planned 3,500-unit Brookwood apartment complex on 215 acres recently annexed to Wood Dale is not, for the most part, within the Dist. 7 school boundaries.

Lake Street through Bloomington will be repaved at no cost to the village, Stanley Haverkamp, village president, said Wednesday.

The expected $1 million project will include resurfacing and left turn bays at Roselle-Bloomington Road, according to Sigmond Ziejewski, Illinois Dist. 1 highway engineer.

Resurfacing of Lake Street or Route 20 will begin east of Bartlett and continue along a 7½-mile stretch to about Swift Road, said Ziejewski.

Bids will be let in July or August with the project getting underway in late summer or early fall.

HE SAID the state is financing the project.

Other improvements in the Bloomington area will include curbing through parts of Bloomington at the intersection with Roselle-Bloomington Road and Lake Street.

Upon a request from the state highway department, the village board voted to direct its attorney to prepare an ordinance prohibiting parking on Lake Street from Maple to Ridge.

In other action, the board instructed its attorney to prepare an ordinance covering recommendations made by the zoning board of appeals for a 36-acre 400-unit apartment complex in what was formerly known as Blecke's Grove.

BOARD PONDERERS QUITTING COG

A move to quit the Cook County Council of Governments (COG) was tabled for one week by Elk Grove Village board members Tuesday night.

It was spearheaded by Trustees Eugene Keith and James Gibson, but the decision to table the matter received unanimous support. In making the motion to discontinue membership in the organization, Keith noted that the Des Plaines village board had unanimously agreed to drop from COG.

AFTER THE board meeting, it was noted by several that the Elk Grove Park District had nearly dropped out but decided to stay in the council for at least one more year as "a courtesy" to Elk Grove Village Pres. Jack Pahl. Pahl is the chairman of COG. The village president was absent from Tuesday's board meeting, and Keith, a presidential aspirant in the April 15 municipal elections, was selected chairman pro tem.

table Keith's move; it was seconded by McGreenera. But voting or the tabling action didn't show the strength or weakness of Keith's position on the matter; the vote to table was unanimous.

A tabled motion must come up for action at the next regular board meeting, and presumably Pahl will be present to defend the council and rally supporting board members to accept his viewpoint.

Price for membership in the council was increased to $210 annually for Elk Grove Village, with the membership fee based on population.

The Des Plaines City Council voted 16-0 on Feb. 17 to discontinue membership. One alderman was absent.

REASONS cited by the council were duplication of services between the Northwest Municipal Conference and the council, as well as the increase in membership fee from $75 to $278.

Council members said they would have probably continued membership if the fee had not risen.

Elk Grove Village paid $75 last year, according to finance director Donald Eppley. He estimated the price on the council's new rate schedule of $1 per 100 population would place the new fee at between $190 and $210.

Lions Club To Present Candidates

A "Meet Your Candidates Night" sponsored by the Elk Grove Village Lions Club will be held at 7:30 p.m. April 9 in the cafeteria of Grove Junior High School.

Candidates for municipal, park district and School Dist. 59 offices will be invited to attend the session and speak briefly to the audience, after which questions may be directed to candidates.

A GROUP spokesman said the Lions Club session will be the last opportunity for voters to see all candidates together prior to April 12 school board and April 15 municipal elections.

Co-chairmen of the event, Lionel Bogut and Vincent Lawrence, of the club's civic improvement committee, said the public is invited.

CHARRED DISPENSARY: Fire swept the main dispensary at the Arlington Heights Air Defense Site Thursday morning, gutting most of the one story quonset hut in which the medical facility was housed. Injured in the incident was Sgt. E-5 Thomas Baumgartner, who cut his wrist trying to enter the burning building. The blaze which struck about 1 a.m. was put out by the Arlington Heights fire department. Sgt. Baumgartner was treated at Northwest Community Hospital and then transferred to Great Lakes Naval Hospital.

Keith Wants To Debate

Leaving date and place open, didates without the protective Eugene Keith challenged two smokescreen which is thrown other Elk Grove Village presi-

Keith, a village trustee, said in a release. "There is only one possible way that the village can observe the abilities and sincerity of all presidential can-presidential candidates Pahl, (Robert) Fleming and myself." Saying he would pay the bill, Keith said, "He (Pahl) may choose any date between now and election day."

Rules for the debate, Keith said, would be simple: "Each candidate will be allowed 10 minutes for opening statements, five minutes for rebuttal, and each will be allowed to direct three questions to each of the other candidates with two minutes permitted for reply."

He added, "So that each individual may be judged on his specific knowledge, intellectual ability and alertness, each candidate will speak extemporaneously without notes or other reference material."

THE DISSIDENT trustee defended his actions at a Jaycee-sponsored candidate's forum last week by contending that it was "a stacked deck."

"With due respect to Chairman (Robert) Koop of the Jaycee's endorsement committee, who by the way is a Pahl appointee to a village committee, I recognize a stacked deck when I see one."

"I had the alternatives either do the accepted political humble act and meekly accept this insult to my intelligence or let the full membership know that they were being used by Pahl as pawns in his 'political' game," Keith said.

THE TRUSTEE added that if there had been research into the candidates' backgrounds as announced, "the meeting was meaningless."

"If they chose Pahl based on his statements at this meeting, I can only say that we reported no programs which would not have been accomplished due to the normal osmosis of government," Keith added, "and would have happened if Goldie Hahn of (the television program) Laugh-In had held the gavel."

Keith also announced that James Holmes, 80 Lonsdale Road, will serve as his campaign manager.

Keith said, "His decision to get involved in this election was triggered by the fear that a political machine was quietly being built here in Elk Grove Village designed to serve the interests of those in power, rather than the public which elects them."

For those who want to help, Keith said, Holmes is available at 437-5388.

D. C. Bound — On a Bicycle

CARBONDALE, ILL. (UPI) — Four Southern Illinois University students, including an Elk Grove Village resident, will leave tomorrow on an 830-mile bicycle trip to Washington, D.C., where they hope to present a plaque to President Nixon.

The plaque will denote SIU's centennial observance beginning this year and the trip has been recognized as part of the university's centennial observance activities.

Holden said arrangements to see President Nixon have the assistance of Senators Everett Dirksen and Charles Percy, and the group has had a call from a White House secretary about time of arrival.

The group expects to pedal into the nation's capital March 26, the 12th day of the trip. The students will leave here at 8 a.m. tomorrow after receiving the plaque from SIU Vice Pres. Charles Tenney, chairman of the centennial committee.

CAMPUS ORGANIZATIONS have contributed $185 and the centennial committee will underwrite other necessary costs of the trip.

The cyclists will travel through Marion, Harrisburg and Mount Carmel in Illinois. From Princeton, Ind., they will go to Washington, Ind., and then ride on U.S. 50 into Washington, D.C.

For a change of pace, they will fly back to school.

Powell To Leave Position

Major changes in the organizational structure of Elk Grove Village Community Services will result in the loss of Glenn Powell, the group's current executive director, and the organization's headquarters, The Farmhouse.

At a village board budget committee meeting Wednesday night, Allan Broten, chairman of the Community Services Board, said that Powell will

Film Showing Set for Sunday

To be featured Sunday in a continuing series of major motion pictures sponsored by the Elk Grove Park District will be the film, "The Unsinkable Molly Brown."

The movie will be shown at Grant Wood School in Elk Grove Village at 3 and 6:30 p.m. There is no admission charge.

Park district officials said that the current series will include two more films, and that attendance at the programs ranges from 150 to 200 persons.

Rally Set Sunday For Hunger March

Preparations for a mammoth "March for Hunger" through the Northwest suburbs now include a rally and "new form of expression" planned for Sunday afternoon at the St. Peter Lutheran Church, 111 W. Olive, Arlington Heights.

According to Steven Sonnenberg, minister of youth of the church, Sunday's services will include a rally between 2 p.m. and 4 p.m. and a worship service between 5 p.m. and 6 p.m., which will include a performance by a rock band, a slide show and Beethoven songs.

The "free expression service" will be held to create interest in the hunger march planned for Good Friday, April 4.

SONNENBERG said the march has received good response from churches and organizations in the area. Sponsors of the march now hope to attract between 5,000 and 10,000 persons, who will march between Park Ridge and Palatine.

Money, donated by sponsors for each mile walk, will be used for three projects: relief of hunger in Biafra, sponsorship of a community project in Ecuador, and funds for the local Northwest Opportunity Center in Rolling Meadows.

THE MARCHERS will meet at 9 a.m. on Good Friday near Maine Township East High School and will walk through the suburbs, roughly following the route of the Northwest Highway.

Sonnenberg said the marchers have their permits now and will be marching through the residential neighborhoods of each community. An initial idea to walk down Northwest Highway was abandoned for safety and traffic reasons.

Call Sensitivity Training A Way to Gain Self-Esteem

Sensitivity training, according to Dr. Donald Thomas, Superintendent of schools for Dist. 59, is not presently being planned — to his knowledge — as part of the curriculum for district schools.

He said this during a meeting of the district's school community council, during a lecture aimed at defining "sensitivity training."

Ideally, Thomas said, it's a method for people to enhance, through group participation, their own values. Properly conducted, directed by qualified leaders, Thomas feels sensitivity training can be wholesome.

IT'S NOT therapy, but a mind expanding experience, he indicated. Thomas said the concept is ancient: Socrates used it in Greece when scholars were asked to explain their definition of many key words.

Sensitivity training, according to Thomas, is a process by which a person solidifies his own self-image, and realizes that his individuality is precious. Once the person is convinced that he is a valuable human commodity, he also realizes that every human life is equally valuable.

He also pointed out some pitfalls of sensitivity training. "In its violent extreme," Thomas said in response to a question from the audience, "it is the North Korean brand of brainwashing. They submitted prisoners to extreme physical and mental torture. Permitted no rest. Eventually, the prisoners were ready to say and believe anything the 'leader' directed."

Thomas emphasized that such sensitivity training is not wholesome.

THE VALUE OF sensitivity training can be disturbing if not conducted under the right circumstances and with properly trained personnel.

DR. DONALD THOMAS, superintendent of Dist. 59, spoke on the use of sensitivity training Wednesday night to a group of about 70 persons. Thomas warned that the experience of sensitivity training can be disturbing if not conducted under the right circumstances and with properly trained personnel.

Sensitivity Training — Way to Gain Self-Esteem

training, Thomas said, is determined by the leader. He explained the "T-group" technique now in use by American industry, education, and some entrepreneurs he labels as quacks.

Basically, a group of volunteers meet under the direction of an allegedly qualified leader. They talk. Express their feelings about many things. Discussions get quite personal, people unburden their minds.

"Like hypnotism, it can be used for good purposes or quackery. A qualified person can use hypnotism to help a patient. Or he can get on a stage and put subjects into a trance for a profit," Thomas said.

"A SENSITIVITY training can operate either way, also. No certification is necessary — as for a doctor or psychiatrist — for a person to practice in sensitivity training sessions."

Thomas said there are certain guidelines that can indicate whether a sensitivity training program will be wholesome. The rationale behind the technique he explained, is based on answering four questions.

1. Is man good or evil? If the practitioner feels man is evil, he will try to improve the subjects by emphasizing their failures, through self punishment.

If the leader believes man is basically good, he will attempt to pinpoint the positive aspects of the individual, feeling that the person will reduce his weaknesses by basing his actions on his strengths.

2. CAN HUMAN behavior be modified by attacking and destroying his personal values? Thomas said that is the type of brainwashing used by Communists against American servicemen.

Another approach is the Freudian Theory that all males have an Oedipus complex. Human behavior can't be explained that simply, Thomas said.

3. Can man change his behavior or does he have to be influenced by an outside force? Negative sensitivity training practitioners, Thomas explained, feel that a man does not know good from evil unless he is told.

4. SHOULD BASIC behavioral changes be attempted early in life, or when a person is mature? Thomas feels it can be harmful to try and change the value structure of older people.

"I could make $1,200 a week, working weekends only, by conducting sensitivity training sessions," he said he has attended a workshop on the subject in Bethel, Maine. He does not feel that institution provides the type of training to prepare a session leader to operate on the positive side of the fence.

He offered some points to consider when evaluating a sensitivity training program. "Select a highly competent leader. Such a person needs at least a master's degree in psychology, a doctorate in philosophy, or a doctorate in divinity."

"No adult should enter such a session under any form of pressure. He should sincerely desire to attend, not be shamed into it by colleagues."

"AS SOON AS anyone in the group starts practicing psychology, get out. Sensitivity training is not therapy, but a way to gain self-esteem."

Thomas said participants in sensitivity training should not attend "marathon sessions," which can last 24, 48, or 56 hours. "Such sessions lead to fatigue, people drop their guard excessively and say things they regret later. This can lead to guilt, shame, and destroy any positive value the program might otherwise have."

A man asked, "Couldn't such sessions tend to reduce a group to a common denominator? Wouldn't persons with higher values tend to think they are trying too hard to be good, and lower their standards?"

Thomas answered, "It's like a classroom situation. It depends on the teacher. The better teacher will have a group, say four and five. When the term is over, he will have a wider spread — probably fours and tens. The poor teacher, on the other hand, will cause the group to be more nearly equal."

THOMAS SAID that any use of sensitivity training in schools, in his opinion, should be restricted to children with strong behavioral problems. He stresses that such programs are not to his knowledge, in Dist. 59's plans.

He reported, however, that about 30 faculty members are now involved in related sessions. Three of them are principals: Richard Jenness of Holmes; Harold Hoeksema of Grant Ward and Tom Powers of High Ridge Knolls.

With faculty members, they are attending weekend sensitivity training sessions conducted and funded by the Stone Foundation.

The programs cover two hour sessions, three times over the weekend. The leaders are psychologists employed by the Stone Foundation.

About 70 residents attended the meeting to hear Thomas' presentation. If any had strong objections to the concept, they remained silent.

"It's not something to be doled out to the student body, like a gym program," Thomas emphasized.

probably work for the group no longer than June, and that operations will be moved elsewhere.

Powell employed by the Metropolitan YMCA, gets paid by Elk Grove Village through the YMCA that group, while willing to provide counseling services on a contractual fee basis, is not planning to continue an extensive involvement as in the past three years.

ACCORDING to Broten, Powell was asked to stay with Community Services, but has chosen to remain with the YMCA. He will most likely be transferred elsewhere in YMCA operations.

At the same time, Broten said St. Alexius Hospital, which owns the land and buildings currently used by Community Services will be needing the facility to house a number of new employees beginning this summer.

Consequently, they will be renovating the residential structure on the land near Leicester on Beisterfield Road, and Community Services will have to move elsewhere.

In asking for a $44,000 budget from the village next year, Broten said the group is planning to hire a director to expand Community Services' efforts into areas other than youth counseling, and is seeking office space in the village.

AS TO meeting places for group work services, the Community Services Board will be seeking out help from schools and churches.

The group wants to hire a full-time referral secretary, and purchase supplementary contract services that will include family and individual counseling as well as the youth work on which Powell has concentrated his efforts during the past three years.

Broten had high praise for Powell's efforts, and expressed regret that concurrent developments with YMCA involvement, St. Alexius ownership of The Farmhouse, and the desire on the part of the Community Services Board to expand efforts is resulting in the loss of Powell.

IN POWELL'S place, the group in planning on hiring an administration-oriented director to coordinate the variety of services the group is planning, as well as efforts of other local agencies as related to social work.

Salary for the position would be $14,500 per year.

Broten and other Community Services Board members who appeared before the budget committee Wednesday found support for their ideas.

Trustee Eugene Keith suggested that instead of the $44,000 budget request, the group be appropriated as much as $50,000 and budgeted $39,000.

This, he said, would encourage Community Services to spend only what is necessary, but would have funds available if they were needed.

KEITH'S suggestion came after Trustee Ronald Chernick began suggesting that some of the items be budgeted, but others only appropriated until Community Services determines its exact needs.

Broten said yesterday morning that the extent of need for social work beyond "alienated youth" is not precisely known.

"It would be difficult to compile statistical data as to need," he said, but nevertheless he believes need to exist. Consequently, the idea of having some extra cash reserve beyond clearly defined needs is appealing to him.

The budget committee, a special three-man panel set up by the village board to compile the annual Elk Grove budget, took no action on the requests from Community Services.

Board permission on the requests of the group will not formally be given one way or the other until actual passage of the budget and the amounts allocated to the agency — and that is not expected until the end of next month.

Township Office: Home for Geriatrics?

Is township government to serve "the several communities of Mount Prospect, Arlington Heights, Des Plaines and Elk Grove Village, or continue to use our township offices as a headquarters and a home for the geriatric set?"

That was the query posed by Jack Ivans, an Active Citizen's Party (ACP) candidate for Elk Grove Township collector, while calling for a change in Republican control of the township.

IVANS SAID, "These offices (are) occupied by a group whose families' names are synonymous with the early beginnings of the community."

He added that "their perpetual entrenchment and tenure of office is equivalent to a self-imposed seniority system."

Contending that this doesn't represent "democratic processes that are representative of the people new to the community," Ivans contended, "The only basis they can offer for their re-election is that to date they have at least functioned within the existing legislative framework of township government and nothing more."

Ivans would like to see "revitalized township government," with "more active involvement on the part of the citizenry."

He also proposed a citizens committee "relating to the elected in a para-political environment whereby involvement on the part of the citizenry is a constant rather than a quadrennial variable."

HE CHARGED, "To date there has not been a single statement" by the GOP, "not even a fragmentary indication as to what direction they would take or what they could offer the people of Elk Grove Township."

Why? Ivans added, "This is because they have nothing to offer. They have no platform."

They prefer the status quo."

To the contrary, he said, the ACP "belittles the residents of the unincorporated areas are recipient of inadequate and duplicated county and township services, best served by local villages or municipal government."

To that end, the ACP advocates annexations to local government units.

This, Ivans said, could result in real estate tax cuts at the township level or greater channeling of funds into municipal governments to ease cost burdens there.

Emotion and Disease: Which Causes Which?

by SANDRA COMSTOCK

Peptic ulcers, high blood pressure, migran headaches and rheumatoid arthritis were cited as "models of psychosomatic syndromes" during a speech at Lutheran General Hospital last week.

Dr. Monte Meldman, a psychiatrist on the hospital's staff, spoke on psychosomatic diseases during a general meeting sponsored by Lutheran General's Men's Association.

Meldman received his medical degree from Marquette University and is on the faculty of Northwestern University.

REFERRING to the "peculiar marriage" of mind and body, Meldman said research in psychosomatic illnesses is difficult. "It is hard to tell if the disease causes the personality traits or the personality traits cause the disease," he said.

"If you have an ulcer for five years, you aren't the same person you were when you first got it," he said.

Meldman said it is "unlikely" that emotions cause disease. He said depressed people "often develop concomitant physical disorders, but I wouldn't go so far as to say emotion causes the condition."

PEOPLE HAVE misconceptions about psychosomatic illnesses, he said. A hypochondriac, a person who "imagines" he is sick, does not have a psychosomatic illness.

"Hysteria is another disease that doesn't fit into the psychosomatic category," he said. People who have hysteria have powerful control over their attention. They can subconsciously choose to ignore certain functions. Thus, they can make themselves blind, have amnesia and create paralysis," Meldman said.

Describing generally a patient who might suffer from psychosomatic related disorders, the doctor said they have a dependent personality and have lost someone they loved. "They become angry, frustrated and this can bring about illness," he said.

The doctor said children's asthmatic attacks could be called a repressed cry for their mother's attention.

"THE CRITICAL problem is why do some people develop ulcers, some asthma and others high blood pressure?" he asked. Research has not given the answer to the question but has suggested early life training, overworked organs and heredity might be factors.

The common cold could be used as an example of psychosomatic illness, the doctor said. When a person is happy, he is less likely to catch a cold. When he is depressed, his resistance is lowered and he is more likely to catch cold.

"Interest in psychosomatic illness is a cry against the impersonality of today's impersonal medical treatment," Meldman said.

A doctor should attempt, when treating a patient, to take into account the personality of the patient, the role of the disease in his life and those psychological factors that can affect physical disorder, he said.

"MANY DOCTORS, because of the demands made on their time, are unable to take all these factors into account when treating patients," he said.

Explaining traits of patients with rheumatoid arthritis, they are very gentle, sweet, kind people that everybody loves.

"However, behind this facade they are sadistic, hostile and can be very difficult patients to handle," he said.

Answering a question from the audience, Meldman said each person should know when they need medical help.

"Each person has his own warning signal and you should know it and not ignore it," he said.

MELDMAN TOLD the group he has a friend on the staff of Northwest Community Hospital.

This friend said his warning signal is "when I start misplacing my pen all the time, I know I have to slow down and take care of myself before something happens."

After Cancer, 'Second Life'

Second of Two

By VIRGINIA GRAHAM

NEW YORK (UPI)—On June 21, 1951, I had an operation for cancer. It was the start of what I call my second life. Was I a better person for the dreadful experience? I doubt it. But I do know that I was a more appreciative one.

My second life started the moment I awoke from the anesthesia. I had sworn in those terrible days of fear that if I had an opportunity to continue living I would never miss a chance to help others.

I soon discovered that there was a special way for me to help. All I had to do was open my mouth and talk about having been cured of cancer. Strangely enough, I made the discovery in the course of working on a television for arthritis.

It wasn't going well, funds were just not forthcoming. I looked at the people in the audience, waiting to be entertained, waiting to be given a good reason for giving money and sympathy.

I found myself saying "Can you imagine looking at yourself in the mirror after you'd been told you had cancer?"

And the bargains you make with yourself, with God? What could you say to yourself if you'd been told you only had a few weeks to live—what had you done with your time?"

Milton Berle, who had been talking to the leader of the band stopped and turned around; stagehands stopped moving things about; the telephones began to ring.

The point I want to make is this: Cancer used to be a shock word. No one mentioned it aloud if it could be helped. Now some forms of cancer are preventable and other forms are highly curable if detected early. How on earth are you going to get people to know these things if they are frightened by the word cancer?

This has been part of the job of the American Cancer Society. Recently, an attitude study showed that most people connect the society's name with research. Well that's proper association because the society is a powerful force in cancer research. But that is only part of its program. Education of the public is another crucial responsibility.

Cured cancer people help meet that responsibility. During the Eisenhower years, 80 of us went to Washington, D.C., to symbolize the 800,000 people then alive and cured of cancer (today there are 1.5 million of us). Shortly thereafter I was talking about my personal experience on a television show when we got a frantic call from a 29-year old housewife.

"Tell me you are not lying," she said, "I had the gas jets open. I've just turned them off." She had come from the doctor's office where she was told that she had cancer of the colon. She didn't realize that television was on as she prepared to kill herself. She heard what I had to say and called the studio. Forty minutes later I was at her house.

I tell you about this because this woman became one of the most enthusiastic volunteers for the society. Now I am National Crusade Chairman of the Society's 1969 fund raising and educational drive. That means I'm the figurehead for 2.3 million volunteers, an inspiring experience.

What better cause can there be than the conquest of cancer? When will it be? We dare not say. But let me tell you this, 30 years ago uterine cancer—the kind I had—was the leading cause of cancer death among women. The death rate has been cut in half thanks in part to the Pap test for early detection of uterine cancer and also to improved treatment.

Women are being taught how people heeded early warning early signs of cancer; children are being taught that the person who never starts smoking cigarettes leads a longer, healthier life; adults are being taught that having a proctosigmoidoscopic examination for cancer of the colon and rectum can save many lives.

Today one in three people are being saved from cancer. Believe it or not one-in-two could be saved with the knowledge we have today if people heeded early warnings signals and made health check-ups including cancer tests a must.

That's why Cancer Crusade is more than a fund appeal. The army of volunteers I lead is armed with educational materials. Ammunition to save lives. It is a fight everybody wants to win.

Mrs. Bender Will Head Teacher Group

DuPage County's, and particularly Bensenville's, penetration into the field of statewide education professionalism was tied into a neat package Saturday.

That was the day Miriam Bender, a classroom teacher in Bensenville's Grade School Dist. 2 for more than 17 years, was named president-elect of the Illinois Association of Classroom Teachers.

Her election follows by almost a year the naming of Vivian Turner, Blackhawk Junior High School principal, as president-elect of the Illinois Junior High Principals Association.

A third DuPage County dignitary, Dwight Knous of Glen Ellyn, soon will begin serving his term as president-elect of the Illinois Education Assn.

THOUGH KNOUS will be given a year's leave of absence to fulfill his official duties, Mrs. Bender, and Mrs. Turner will continue as fulltime classroom teacher and principal while serving their elected offices.

Mrs. Bender's professional career started more than 25 years ago, when she began teaching after graduating from Whitewater State Teacher's College.

She later earned a master's degree at National College of Education, Evanston.

After teaching several years in Bensenville, she became one of the founders of the Bensenville Elementary Teachers Association, now renamed the Bensenville Education Association.

She is past president of the DuPage Valley division of the Illinois Education Association, immediately preceding the recent term of Knous in that position.

Walter Rundle of Fenton High School in Bensenville is the association's next president.

MRS. BENDER has taught at Green Street, Mohawk and Johnson Schools, all in Bensenville, and currently teaches fourth grade at Tioga School.

Last April Mrs. Bender was named "Woman of the Year" by the Business and Professional Woman's Club of North DuPage.

Mrs. Turner, who has served 28 years in the Bensenville grade school district, formerly was affiliated with the DuPage County Elementary School Principals Association, a group for which Bensenville principal Janis Freeman is past president.

Mrs. Turner currently works on the boards of the Illinois Principals Coordinating Council and the National Advisory Council of Secondary School Principals.

Prior to becoming president-elect of the Illinois Junior High Principals Association, Mrs. Turner served on that organization's research committee and was editor of a statewide newsletter.

Go Fly A Kite

With spring officially just around the corner, Walter C. Lambert, superintendent of Commonwealth Edison Co.'s Northwest District, has his eye to the sky.

Lambert urges kite enthusiasts who will be out in force with the gusty winds of March to follow five basic rules to have fun safely.

- 1 Use only ordinary kite string, don't substitute wire or metallic cord.
- 2 Never attach metal or tin to any part of the kite.
- 3 Fly kites in unobstructed areas where traffic is light and trees and utility lines can be avoided.
- 4 Never fly kites during storms or when the string is wet.
- 5 Don't put yourself out on a limb by trying to retrieve a tangled kite. If your kite becomes snagged and you can't tug it free, abandon it rather than risk injury by climbing a pole or tree, or entering a hazardous area.

"The basic rule of course, is to use common sense," Lambert said, "and to keep your kite in the air and your feet on the ground."

DON'T FLY A kite near those overhead wires or trees, and never attach wire or metal to any part of the kite. That's some of the advice a Commonwealth Edison Co. lineman gives to these space pilots. Kite flying can be both fun and safe if these simple rules are followed. (B10)

Newest Thing In Cruising

By JACK WOLLSTON

NAPLES, Fla. (UPI)—For the boating family that likes to cruise but doesn't like to cruise alone, Evinrude Motors has come up with a plan which may solve the problem.

The Milwaukee outboard firm has announced it will organize cruises on various scenic waterways in North America which will permit a number of families to cruise in company.

As Evinrude sales director Robert N. West Jr. explained it: "Many boatmen are reluctant to strike out and seek new cruising grounds on their own. Some are a little skittish about venturing forth alone. However, they welcome the chance to seek travel and adventure in the company of other boatmen."

As a result, West said, Evinrude has worked out a long range program in which the company will organization, we have had a series of "test runs" for such a program. They've proved extremely successful.

So far, West said, Evinrude dealers have conducted cruises for groups on such waterways as the Atlantic intracoastal, the lakes of the Tennessee Valley, the Lake of the Ozarks, the Texas intracoastal, and the Illinois River.

"We believe outboard boatmen will welcome guidance in planning this type of vacation," West said. "Look at the success in other fields of travel. For example, camera safaris and guided tours through Europe. We think the same principle can be applied with equal success to boating."

The boating writers were brought here by Evinrude to inspect the research center which its parent Outboard Marine Corporation maintains at this booming Gulf of Mexico resort.

In its 27,000 square feet of shops and laboratories, OMC conducts tests to determine durability of its present products and to explore and evaluate new products or components.

The company took the occasion to introduce one of its new Evinrude boats, a 16-foot runabout dubbed the Explorer. According to West, the Explorer, powered by a 155-horsepower stern drive engine, is an economy fishing version of the company's 16-foot Sportsman.

The boat's cockpit area has been opened up completely by moving the walk-through center section windshield all the way forward and including two folding jump seats aft. Almost all the 55 square feet of cockpit space is usable.

Steering and full instrumentation are mounted on a small column forward on the starboard side. The standard convertible top is offered, and an anchor locker is built into the forepeak. There is an 18-gallon fuel tank in the stern, also standard.

He Took a Chance, And Now He Soars

FAIRFIELD, Conn. (UPI)—Ever wonder what happens to those lucky people who win fabulous prizes in drawings and contests?

For some, it changes their whole lives; others take their good luck in stride.

For one winner, Arthur Burrows, an aircraft sales executive, it hasn't changed things much, but for his wife and three children it has opened a whole new world.

Two years ago, Burrows won the first annual "Fly Free For Life" sweepstakes staged by American Express' Credit Card Division.

Burrows had an option—$25,000 in cash—but he decided to accept the free-flying prize, even though he himself, in his aircraft job, has traveled just about everywhere in the world.

Burrows' prize allows him up to $5,000 in air travel each year.

So far, he and his family have visited Montreal, Hawaii, Los Angeles, San Francisco, New Orleans and a few other cities.

What lies ahead? Since the prize also includes escorted tours, Burrows has in mind a trip to Florida and a Caribbean cruise: a tour of the Greek Islands, Japan, Australia and New Zealand.

"We don't really try hard to use up the $5,000 every year," he reports. "We're mostly looking for trips the whole family can enjoy."

As for this year's Fly Free For Life Contest, Burrows got his entry in early. If he wins this time, he'll take the $25,000 — "to pay taxes."

AESOP SAYS:

The Boar and the Fox

A wild Boar was whetting his tusks against the stump of a tree when a Fox happened by. Thinking to make fun of his neighbor, he made a great show of looking anxiously about, as if in fear of some sudden enemy. But the Boar kept right on with his work.

"Why are you doing that?" asked the Fox at last with a grin. "I see no reason for it; there is neither hunter nor hound in sight nor any other danger."

"True," replied the Boar. "But when that danger does arise, I shall have something else to do than to sharpen my weapons."

It is too late to whet the sword when the trumpet sounds to draw it.

Every generation since Aesop 2,500 years ago has known the wisdom of his lesson of preparedness. Today, as we enjoy increased financial income, is the time to put some of it away—for old age, illness, or emergency.

Another sage put it this way: "It wasn't raining when Noah built the ark."

Mothers Warned Of False Calls

Chicago-area mothers have been warned to be on the alert for phone solicitors who falsely claim to be conducting a survey on children for the National Safety Council.

John D. Lawlor, executive vice president of the council, said that the safety organization has received numerous calls from concerned parents who have been contacted by persons claiming to represent the council.

THE CALLERS have inquired about the number of children in the family and their habits, such as when they leave for and arrive from school, Lawlor said.

Anyone receiving such calls should immediately notify their local police department, he said.

Show to Feature New Scout Dress

A new "mod" uniform for adult Girl Scout leaders and winning posters and three-dimensional displays selected from hundreds of contest entries will highlight the Girl Scouts of Chicago exhibit at the Chicago World Flower and Garden Show, March 22-30.

The colorful exhibit will be spotlighted on opening day, designated Girl Scouts Day at the flower show. Marking its 11th anniversary, the show will be held in the International Amphitheatre.

The new leaders' uniform is described as shorter and more up-to-date than the old one, but perhaps not quite so "mod" as some new airline stewardess dresses. It will be displayed on a mannequin.

Mrs. Dennis Moore, of Arlington Heights, was named executive director of a proposed new volunteer bureau for the Northwest suburban area at a meeting of school, church and organization representatives Monday.

She will serve in an advisory capacity until the bureau is in operation.

The finance committee, headed by the Rev. Leon Haring, First Presbyterian Church of Arlington Heights, is continuing a study of possible funding methods for the bureau.

PLANNED to serve as a clearing house for residents wishing to donate time to schools and agencies, the bureau will promote, enlist, screen and train potential workers and refer them to organizations currently in need of additional assistance.

A committee of the Arlington Heights Clergy Fellowship began exploring the need for a bureau last year. Questionnaires returned from 19 agencies showed high interest among groups in the formation of a clearing house.

Steering committee chairmen include Mrs. Marge Haugen, housing; Mrs. Lou Walton, personnel; Mrs. Nita Dreger, public relations; and Mrs. Norma Barnes, organization.

State Gymnastics Meet Begins Today

Kickin' It Around

By BOB FRISK

A Measure of Cage Success...

Success can be measured in many ways. For the Galesburgs, Collinsvilles, and Quincy in this wonderful world of high school basketball in Illinois, the success of any season is dictated on the progress in the state tournament.

An early exit — early, in this case, means any time before the state finals — places the players, coaches, schools, and communities in a state of shock. "Where'd we go wrong?" they mumble to themselves after falling in a triple overtime in the Super-Sectional.

Just reaching the "Super" would be a cause for celebration, for a ticker tape parade in most towns, but for these perennial schoolboy powers, there's only one place to spend the third weekend in March — at the monstrous mushroom, the Assembly Hall in Champaign.

Some schools are satisfied just to knock over their arch-rival up the road. Others would be happy with a league title and nothing more. Still others have that regional prize as the primary goal of any season.

Success can be measured in many ways for any high school basketball team, for any particular area.

In our immediate area it's no big secret that you don't start your season thinking about the Elite Eight, the pressure-packed finals in Champaign.

There's no tradition of basketball excellence on which to build your hopes in this area. They don't talk about that great state champ in '45 or that classy state finalist in '56 because they don't exist. We've never had a club escape the sectional.

Numerous splits have broken up many promising area basketball teams. Balance in an athletic program is of primary concern here, and the administrators should be congratulated for that.

The schools are striving for the well-balanced programs with something for everyone. That's the way it should be. There's more to a high school sports program than just basketball, but you'd have a hard time convincing anyone from a town like Collinsville, for example.

There can be no question that basketball is king, basketball is the money-maker, basketball is the sport in which the most people become absorbed, the sport which commands the most publicity because of this interest.

But gymnastics and wrestling — booming high school sports — and swimming, just waiting for the chance to become an accepted part of the area sports scene — hold important positions in any winter program.

Although the Paddock area has had its share of strong basketball clubs through the years, it's an unfortunate fact that when tourney time rolls around, we just don't have anything to brag about.

Wheeling had a chance to become only the second sectional finalist in area history, but the Wildcats fell before Maine South Wednesday.

Even that great Prospect team of 1960-61, regarded by many as the finest ever to play in the area, couldn't make it past that first sectional appearance. The Knights lost to Crystal Lake in sudden death and finished 25-2 for the year.

Arlington's record-setting 20-4 club under coach Ted Wissen, featuring Steve Allen, Dave Lockwood and associates, was bumped in the regional title contest by Antioch.

Palatine had those great clubs with All-Stater Ron Kozlicki, the

INMAN BORK

Pirates reached the sectional, but they couldn't survive that opening game.

Those outfits with the fancy records couldn't achieve what one amazing, rags-to-riches entry did in March of 1960. It's a story they still talk about whenever tourney time approaches. It's a story of an Arlington team that had to reach the final game of the sectional tournament just to achieve a mediocre 13-12 record for the season.

Arlington, laboring in the regular season, got hot in the "second season" and drove past two conference champs and two other opponents in reaching the sectional finale. They launched tourney play with a 9-11 mark, were seeded third in the regional and eventually fourth in the sectional, and they almost crashed into the elite "Sweet Sixteen" club of Illinois basketball.

George Bork remembers it well. Now a coach at Prospect, he was the scoring star on that club and a spectacular performer in the tourney competition with a 21.6 average through regional and sectional scuffling.

Bork never played a better high school game than when he dumped in 27 points and personally took charge in Arlington's thrilling 57-56 overtime victory over Prospect for the regional title.

Carl Massa remembers it well. Now a coach at Wheeling, Carl was a hero in the clutch in the frantic closing minutes of that Arlington win over Prospect.

Other important performers on that club coached by Frank Bohac were steady Bob Inman, a 6-foot-4 southpaw with a nice touch and some fine moves, collector of 25 points in the sectional triumph; Gene Dahlquist, a fine outshooter and tremendous competitor; Rick Johnston, a center slowed by illness who did hit eight straight shots in one regional tourney success; and Jim Clabaugh, who was called on to fill in for the ailing Johnston and who responded well under pressure.

Nobody expected them to get as far as the sectional title game, but they disregarded the odds, they shook off Johnston's illness and Inman's lingering back problems, they battled their way past some highly regarded opponents, and they gave touted Elgin fits before succumbing, 53-49, before 4,000 screaming fans.

Here was a club that struggled in league play, opened its regional competition with a lackluster 9-11 record, and wound up playing for the sectional championship.

For the Galesburgs, Collinsvilles, and Quincy, this may not have been termed a season to remember.

But for this area, an area admittedly lacking many big basketball moments, this was a season — a team — they'll remember for a long time.

Success can be measured in many ways.

Ten Years Ago This Week...

Arlington won the state gymnastics title... Individual winners were Arnie Harvey on the parallel bars and Tom Geocaris on the rings... Waukegan rocked Maine 75-61 for the Arlington sectional basketball crown.

NO BUTZ ABOUT IT. Only about 265-pounds hovering over it — the ball — and Don Wright (23) of Wheeling whose intentions were to try a layup until Maine's Dave Butz sealed off all daylight. Butz and teammate Greg Schmelzer (44) right behind him accounted for most of the pointage as the Hawks downed the Wildcats 66-56 in sectional play Wednesday. (Staff Photo by Tom Grieger)

Cards Defend Team Honors

by CHUCK WILLOUR

It's vaguely reminiscent of one of those great old movies where an entire family — mom, dad, sis and little brother, plus a nefarious-looking cousin or two — sits around waiting for a rich old uncle to kick the bucket.

Like vultures they restlessly hover over him, waiting to collect their inheritance "at any time now." And then, of course, the old boy ends up outliving the whole bunch.

That plot is always worth a chuckle or two — except when you're a rich old uncle.

AND THAT'S exactly what Arlington is in gymnastics as far as the rest of Illinois is concerned, a rich old uncle. Last year Coach Tom Walthouse's Cards captured the state gym title after completing a perfect dual meet season. This year the Cards have again continued their domination of the state gym scene by rolling easily over every opponent and then capturing their own district title last weekend in convincing and impressive style.

Today and tomorrow the Cards will be out to make it two state titles in a row in the state meet at Niles West High in Skokie, with the preliminaries coming today at 2 p.m. and 7 p.m., and the finals tomorrow night at 7:30 p.m.

And, like the family in the movie, the rest of the state will be there to hover over the Cards, poised to swoop down on them at their first sign of faltering.

WHICH HAS brought a few smiles to the face of Coach Walthouse: "All week long coaches have been calling me. They'd ask if I thought my boys could do it again, wouldn't the pressure get to them, or after going through such a perfect season, wouldn't they have to miss something, like in the state meet?"

"It sounds like they're trying to jinx me, put a whammy on us," he chuckles. Then he seriously adds, "I'd like to think we're the best in the state, certainly we've proved it all season. But when you get to the state meet there are so many outstanding individuals that it's possible we could get beaten."

Not likely, though, feel most people and the coach: "I feel we have so much depth that only a few teams stand a chance of beating us — maybe Hinsdale Central or Niles East. The only thing that could stop us is injuries, and I'm not anticipating any injuries."

INDEED the Cards do have much depth. They led all squads by qualifying 11 men in 18 positions, while Hinsdale Central, the state's number two squad, qualified ten in a weaker district.

Leading the Cards will be all-around men Bob Gleichman and Jim Brousseau, who also qualified in five other events between them. Brousseau captured a first in the horizontal bar competition, but in all-around had to take third to Gleichman's second and New Trier East's first by Bob Roth. Both are capable of topping Roth in the state meet, though, if they hit well in all five all-around events.

In addition to Brousseau's first on the high bar, the Cards claimed three other district firsts: Terry Haines grabbed the honors on the trampoline, Steve Von Ebers in tumbling-free exercise, and Ron Jones on EASY TIME. Jack Bastable (41) had little trouble recording this layup for Wheeling early in the game with Maine South's Ralph Remus offering only token resistance. Times got a little tougher for the 'Cats later on though, and despite Bastable's 12-point effort Wheeling fell to the Hawks 66-56 in the Wednesday night sectional lifeline. Says Wheeling Coach After Setback

by KEITH REINHARD

Wheeling the time bomb, capable of exploding at any moment, had to be treated gently but firmly by Maine South's big and brawny eagles and everybody knew it.

Hawk mentor Bernie Brady knew it. He was aware of the ravaging Wildcat press and he knew that to detonate it could spell the difference between victory and defeat for his Central Suburban league entry.

Brady's charges knew it too. They recognized their superiority around the net and saw this as possibly one avenue of their route to suppressing any siege by the 'Cats.

THE FANS knew it and they were betting evenly that the press could discourage the Hawks enough at the start to prevent any big opening charge and nip away enough later on to give Wheeling a fair crack at the triumph.

Wheeling coach Mike Owens was more keenly aware of this situation than anybody. It was the one big weapon in his arsenal to contend with Maine South's size.

What nobody figured on, was for the time bomb itself not to know how to go off. This is what happened though. Via a rash of untimely turnovers, the Wildcats diffused their own best weapon Wednesday evening and all the hustling in the world then wouldn't allow them to catch up with the Hawks.

Wheeling fell to Maine in their sectional debut, after trailing all the way, 66-56.

THE WILDCATS committed eight bad passes, fumbled three times and were cited with five violations. They had worse nights and won.

Twice during the regular campaign they turned the ball over to Palatine 20 times. Conant got 21 and 18 of the blessings and still fell two times to the Wildcats.

As recently as last week Hersey garnered 17 Wheeling turnovers and still could not contain the 'Cats in opening regional play.

WEDNESDAY though it was the Hawks that Wheeling had to contend with. "We knew we weren't going to get any rebounds. That was no surprise," Owens sighed afterwards. "We certainly didn't figure on giving the ball away so many times though."

Owens summed it all up by adding: "We had to play a near-perfect game tonight and we simply didn't get it."

The wonder perhaps was that the Wildcats were in the game at all. They netted only a dozen rebounds all night and were 18 for 53 from the field — one of their poorest showings in 25 contests this season.

WHAT WHEELING lacked in every other department, they made up for in pure desire. Don Wright and Jack Bastable sparked the gritty display, which saw a strikingly oversized opponent halted every time they tried to break the game wide open.

On defense, Wright would start as a hard pressing guard the moment Maine would bring the ball out of bounds, then dash back to the base line to bump heads with the towering Hawk forwards. On offense he riddled the bucket for 24 points; to outscore everyone on the floor.

Bastable in the meantime, strapped with three early fouls, kept Wheeling jelling on offense when Wright wasn't in command. If he could have won the game single handedly with a 10-yard thrust up the middle over Dave Butz, he would have tried.

BUT GUSTO and courage weren't enough. And even with Wright and Carl Fricke teaming up to neutralize Maine's giant all-stater in the middle, there was still lanky Greg Schmelzer to contend with.

Schmelzer canned 11 shots during the game, all from within eight feet of the hoop and just about every one timed to

State Gym Preview: Boys to Watch

by CHUCK WILLOUR

The gymnastics squad that Arlington coach Tom Walthouse has put together this year certainly rates as the best Illinois has seen in the past, and it may well be one of the strongest gym units this state — or any other, for that matter — will ever see.

Barring unforeseen catastrophe — a rash of injuries, a number of Card performers missing on their routines, or something similar — Arlington should capture its fourth state gymnastics title since the Illinois High School Association began sponsoring the meets in the mid-1950's, and its fifth overall.

It was just ten years ago this week that the Cards netted their first IHSA-sponsored title, upsetting a strongly favored Proviso East. The Cards qualified 13 men — a lucky 13 it turned out — for the meet, and nine of those made it to the finals. In all, the Card gymnasts earned 110½ points in the meet, while runner-up York totaled 97. Touted Proviso finished with 94½ in third.

THIS YEAR it's the Cards who are being touted, and it is possible that another school might sneak past the Cards into a state title, though not likely. But, to emphasize a point, it is possible.

And so that fans will have a fair idea of the competition Arlington will get in the meet, below is a partial rating of the state's best performers on each event, and the top teams in the state.

First the teams: Arlington heads the list with 11 boys qualified in 18 events, including two all-around. Next is Hinsdale Central, district winner at Glenbard East, with 10 boys qualified in 18 events and three all-around boys.

EVANSTON, Niles East and

Thornton probably rank next in the meet. The Wildcats finished second to Niles in the Elk Grove District, but qualified seven boys in eight positions, while Niles qualified only three gymnasts in nine positions.

Thornton captured the district title at Oak Park, putting 11 men in 13 positions, one in all-around.

All-around will be particularly important this year with the new scoring system that awards 21 points to first, 19 to second, 18 to third, and so on. If, for example, Hinsdale places its three all-around men high, that could mean the state title.

At the same time, with 11 men qualified, the new point system gives Arlington a boost too: if the Cards can place at least one man in the top ten of every event, they should take the meet title easily. And in tumbling-free exercise, particularly, chances are good of Arlington placing three men in the top ten — which could mean 45-55 points for one event!

THE TOP competitors in each event most likely will be these:

TRAMPOLINE — Arlington's Terry Haines leads the list of trampolineists, but Frank Ramirez of Waukegan, Greg Moore of Thornton and Prospect's Jay Bensen have a good shot at the title. Hinsdale Central's Jim Lillig and Maine South's Steve Olson are two other boys to watch.

SIDE HORSE — Oak Park's Fulton Loebel is the favorite, but Ron Jones of Arlington looks like a definite challenger. Also look for Niles North's Chuck Citron, George Joseph of Glenbrook North and Downers North's Dennis Downes.

PARALLEL BARS — Seymour Rifkind of Niles East is the state's classiest performer in this event. Fremd's Gregg Fenske, thanks to his district performance has to be considered too, as does Cardinal Jim Brousseau. Terry Haines, also of Arlington, Maine South's Neil Hagen and Bob Quintanoles of Niles East are other top contenders.

STILL RINGS — Elk Grove's Benny Fernandez has earned the favorite's role for this meet, with Niles East's Rifkind getting the nod for second spot. Also watch for Skip Frowick of Waukegan and Arlington's Kevin Lindsey.

HORIZONTAL BAR — Arlington's Jim Brousseau heads the list coming out of the districts, with teammate George Creswell right behind. But it's going to be a battle royal for first in this event, with Rich Central's Van Etten, Frank Acquaviva of Thornton, Pete Laloggia of Niles West and Jim Janssen of Maine West all rating about equal.

TUMBLING-FREE EXERCISE — It's a tossup between two Arlington performers. Terry Haines, also of Arlington, Maine South's Neil Hagen and Bob Quintanoles of Niles East are other top contenders.

ALL-AROUND — Seymour Rifkind of Niles East is far-and-away the favorite for the all-around title, but after you get past him there's bound to be little agreement about who rates second best. Take your pick: Arlington's Bob Gleichman and Jim Brousseau, Hinsdale Central's Randy Balhorn and Carl Walin, Evanston's Bruce Keeshin, Elk Grove's Benny Fernandez, New Trier East's Bob Roth, Gary Morava of Hersey, or Niles East's Bob Quintanoles. It'll be close.

New Sport for Former Football Star at Arlington

Tom Fageron, a former all-conference football halfback at Arlington High School, is now engaged in a different type of sport.

TOM FAGERSON

Fageron, Class of 1964 at Arlington, is competing in the sport of parachuting at the United States Air Force Academy. He will graduate in June.

Upon graduation from Arlington High, Fageron went into the prep school of the Air Force Academy in Colorado Springs. He then entered the Air Force Academy.

Fageron gave up football in his sophomore (third class year) to take up a "safer" sport which will aid him in his future profession in the Air Force. He is a certified jumpmaster and at present has over 500 jumps to his credit, including water jumps and night jumps in full pack.

Last fall the Air Force team, of which Tom is a member, won the coveted first place at the National Collegiate Parachute meet in Florida, making them National college champions.

There were 48 schools and several hundred jumpers competing, and points in the meet were given for accuracy and style, accuracy involving hitting bulls-eyes from a drop of 3000 to 5000 feet, while style involved delayed free-fall and figures performed while falling free.

Fageron plans on an Air Force career and upon graduation, he will go into combat control, where he hopes to make use of his jump training.

ORIENTAL OUTLOOK of seventh grade geography students at Helen Keller School is shown in their art creations. The seventh graders have been studying about the Far East.

Pupils Create Models

Art for Geography's Sake

Art activities are playing an important role in the class projects of seventh grade geography students at Helen Keller Junior High.

Pupils in Caroline Buchanan's geography class recently spent three weeks studying the Far East, and pupil art projects reveal an oriental outlook.

THREE dimensional art creations of pupils range from a Japanese pagoda to a miniature oriental village. There is also a model of a Japanese home

The class also kept a scrapbook of clippings on current events in the Far East.

In the geography class of Stephen Sauer, pupils are studying about the northeastern U.S. And each pupil created a 'collage' of items about one particular state and its products.

SAUER'S CLASS is now in the third week of the unit on the northeastern states.

The art projects are designed to illustrate factual knowledge about the geographical areas studied.

HAWKEYE STATE is depicted in this art collage representing Iowa and its role in the United States. Seventh grade pupils in Stephen Sauer's class at Helen Keller have been learning

POOL PROPOSAL UP TO PARKS

High School Dist. 211's proposed swimming pool program is almost entirely in the hands of three Palatine and Schaumburg Township park districts.

Dist. 211 board member Lyle Johnson this week told residents of the district that his proposal, which would result in construction of indoor pools at the three existing schools in the district and also at the proposed Schaumburg High School, would involve building of the pools by the park districts on land deeded to them by Dist. 211.

THE SCHOOL district would pay an annual fee to the park district for use of each pool, and agreements would be reached between the two districts concerning scheduling and availability of the pool.

The three park districts — Palatine, Hoffman Estates and Schaumburg — have not been approached officially by the school district, Johnson said.

"Following our meetings this week, we intend to sit down and discuss this with them," he said. Public meetings were held at Conant High School Tuesday and at Palatine High School Wednesday.

CONSTRUCTION of the pools could be financed best through a park district sale of general obligation bonds, which would result in a tax levy against residents of that park district. Cost of an indoor pool was estimated at about $600,000.

Dist. 211 does not have the bonding power to build the pools, Johnson said, adding that the new school is being built with a loan from the Illinois School Building Commission.

Johnson said the rapid growth of the district has forced the addition of more and more classrooms but the physical education facilities in the district have not kept pace.

A FORMER president of the Conant Booster Club, Johnson said the shortage of facilities would be most evident at Conant High School next fall.

Under a priority list announced when Johnson first proposed the pool program in January, Conant would be first to get a pool, followed by Fremd, Palatine and the new Schaumburg school. This week, however, Johnson said it would be more economical for a pool to be included at Schaumburg High School while it is being built.

Preliminary architect's drawings by Fridstein & Fitch, Dist. 211 architects, show that the same basic style pool could be built at all four high schools. The design allows storage space for both the school district and the park district bleachers and a gymnasium area, and a warming shed for ice skaters.

'Howie' Project Draws Summons

Again this week Hoffman Estates officials appear to be in more hot water over special assessments levied to pay for sewer, water and related facilities in Howie-in-the Hills.

A court summons for non-payment of debt in construction of a water tower in the development was served on the village Saturday at the request of American Bridge and Iron Corp., a division of U. S. Steel.

Although Village Pres. Roy L. Jenkins and finance officer Mrs. Laura Reedy were both unavailable for comment yesterday, Village Clerk Mrs. Dolores Ward confirmed receipt of the subpoena.

"I SIGNED FOR it but nobody told me what to say if I was asked about it," Mrs. Ward said, explaining that she "is really not familiar with it anyway."

According to one village official, representatives of American Bridge and Iron Corp. claim they were not made aware of the village's intention to pay for the water tower with special assessment bonds.

Trustees hope to reach an amicable "accommodation" before next Tuesday in a fraud suit instituted by the Teamsters Pension Fund in connection with three special assessments totaling more than $1 million in construction of other sewer and water facilities in the same development.

The land, totaling about 155 acres owned by Suburban Life Builders and George Washington Capital Corp., is involved in foreclosure suits filed nearly one year ago by the Teamsters, who hold mortgages on the parcels.

FUND OFFICIALS are suing because they say, as mortgages, they were never advised of the special assessments.

They also charge "public funding of private contracts" since most of the improvements were in when the special assessment was levied last March.

Atty. Russell J. Topper is acting as special counsel for the village since Hoffman Estates Atty. Peter G. Schultz is one of a number of firms and individuals named in the petition.

Both Topper and the village maintain that the assessment was levied, in part, to satisfy contractors' liens on the land.

Special assessments are handled by the village's board of local improvements (BOLI), of which Jenkins serves as president. Current village trustees also serve as BOLI members.

March 21, 1968, BOLI meeting, which lasted three minutes, bids on one of the special assessments involved in the Teamsters suit were reviewed and a $541,783 contract awarded to Tri-W Construction Co.

Tri-W Construction was the lowest of three bidders.

Exactly one week later at a BOLI meeting, lasting five minutes, the first payout, totaling $250,656, on the special assessment authorized at the earlier

Trustees Move To Curtail Vandals

To curtail vandalism to Schaumburg's Great Hall during teen dances, chaperons must sign certificates agreeing to pay for damages.

Tuesday, the Schaumburg village board asked Village Atty. Jack M. Siegel to draw up an appropriate certificate that adult chaperons must sign.

THE PROBLEM was brought to the attention of the village board by Public Works director

Edwin Denman. He said, "I'm not against God and motherhood, but there has been tremendous damage to this building during dances."

He said examples include a bottle pushed through a wall, doors yanked off hinges, and damage to lavatories.

Village Clerk Sandy Carsello said the groups have not provided sufficient chaperons for dances. She said the building is so large that chaperons must be placed strategically, including one in each bathroom.

THE BOARD discussed requiring one chaperon for each 10 or 20 teens attending the dance, but decided it would be difficult to enforce.

Trustee Gordon Mullins said the number of chaperons should be determined by the group sponsoring the dance. "But make it clear that they are responsible for damage," he said.

Mrs. Carsello said four groups have been renting the hall on a regular basis for teen dances. Adults must sign a permit to rent the hall, but a damage deposit isn't required.

The groups have not been notifying the police department of dances in advance, Denman said. Reserve policemen have been used at large dances.

"YOU HAVE TO have police checking the parking lot. Often some older ones with a jug come to these dances and try to entice the teens out to a car for a nip," Village Pres. Robert O. Atcher said.

Trustees emphasized that policemen are not to be a substitute for chaperons.

Trustees approved a motion to send damage bills to two groups. Groups who do not pay for damages will not be allowed use of the hall again.

Will Man Triumph Over Machine?

If tentative pupil scheduling plans for next year at Robert Frost Junior High are approved by the board of education, then man will triumph over machine.

Frost Principal William Lit-

witz will propose to the Dist. 54 board at their March 20 meeting that the daily schedules of Frost pupils for 1969-70 be outlined by school personnel instead of with a computer service.

Computers have been used in previous years in scheduling seventh and eighth grade pupils at Robert Frost and Helen Keller junior high schools.

Scheduling of pupils by hand could result in savings of at least $600. Cost of the computer service is $1 per pupil or more.

NEXT YEAR there will be an estimated enrollment of 600 pupils at Robert Frost, with a slightly larger enrollment at Helen Keller.

Jane Addams Junior High is also scheduled to be ready for use next fall in Dist. 54.

"We have been through it (scheduling program) four times," said Litwitz, "and everything seems satisfactory."

The daily schedule at Frost is divided into 17 time periods or modules of 25 minutes each.

Teacher schedules will fit smoothly in the total school schedule.

In working out the scheduling of all pupils, school officials mapped out 24 different group schedules to accommodate the subjects taken at each grade level, plus school activities such as band or orchestra.

Individual schedules were then fitted into this pattern in determining what each pupil would be doing in each module.

Friday, March 21, is the deadline for filing nominations by Dist. 54 school board candidates. The election will be held April 12.

Five school board positions will be filled by voters in April. Vacancies include two three-year terms, one two-year term and two one-year terms.

Nominating petitions must be signed by 50 registered voters of the district.

THREE CANDIDATES have filed for three-year terms so far: Gerald J. Lewin, 613 S.

Springguth Road, and Mrs. Mary Hannon, 1407 Hampton Lane, both of Schaumburg; and Gordon Thoren, 577 Edgefield Lane, Hoffman Estates.

Candidates announced for the two-year term are John McGill, 723 Crest Avenue, Roselle (Pleasant Hills); Edward D. Mozal, 1103 Lowell Lane, and Harry E. Mamch, 625 Norwood, both of Schaumburg.

Seeking one-year terms are Martin Stanton, 1411 S. Weyers Court, Schaumburg; and John M. Stencil, 7946 Brookside Drive, Hanover Park.

Builder Promises Funds for Park

Funds to develop a six acre park site in the Timbercrest subdivision of Schaumburg were promised by Morwell Builders, Village Pres. Robert O. Atcher said Tuesday.

George Shapiro, attorney for Morwell, sent a letter stating that $20,000 for fixtures and equipping the park site in unit 8 of the subdivision would be donated to the village.

Money for the park development was a stipulation included by the zoning board of appeals last June when the builder received approval for cluster development.

WILFRED Meyer reminded the village board that the developer also agreed to adequately drain the site at his expense and grade, seed and plant with trees and shrubs in an amount necessary to properly landscape the area.

The $20,000 will be administered by the village.

"If we turn the $20,000 over to the park district, they wouldn't be restricted to use it only for this park site as the village is. I think the village should administer it," Mayor Robert O. Atcher said.

Filing in Dist. 54 To Close March 21

Friday, March 21, is the deadline for filing nominations by Dist. 54 school board candidates. The election will be held April 12.

Five school board positions will be filled by voters in April. Vacancies include two three-year terms, one two-year term and two one-year terms.

Between the Lines Boundary Shifts Are Only Natural

by DON BRANNAN

Schaumburg Township is now experiencing a building boom, and the pupil population in Dist. 54 continues to increase. An estimated enrollment of 12,000 pupils is expected in the district's schools next September.

It is only natural that there will be some shifting of school boundaries in the future in order to balance the number of pupils in the district's available classrooms.

Dist. 54 parents should understand this fact and accept it.

Contractors are presently hurrying to get Nathan Hale School completed so that pupils can move in after spring vacation. These pupils have been attending Campanelli and Dooley schools for half a day only.

ALTHOUGH SOME families may be inconvenienced by changes in school boundaries, many gripes of parents have to be taken with a grain of salt. Opinions of certain district residents are like concrete — all mixed up and permanently set.

It would be nice if there were a school within a block of each home in Dist. 54, but this is not possible. The district is presently building classrooms as fast as it can to meet its needs. Double shifts are being avoided as much as possible.

Township residents are acting responsibly in being concerned about new school locations and safety of children in getting to and from school. Perhaps an additional crossing guard or a traffic light is required at certain schools.

But it is unreasonable to maintain that because school boundaries are now drawn a certain way, they must remain that way.

DECISIONS ABOUT SCHOOL boundaries should properly be made only on the basis of what will benefit the district's educational program as a whole. One must draw the line between what will benefit one pupil or family and what will benefit the majority of pupils.

Until the student enrollment in Dist. 54 reaches its peak, there are going to be changes in school boundaries for the district. Moreover, there will continue to be bus-ing of students from an overcrowded area to a less crowded one.

Dist. 54 administrators are now making plans for school boundaries in the coming year. These plans will become more definite late this summer when a more reliable estimate of pupils expected in fall is available.

It is impossible in the next few years to avoid having shifting school boundaries in the district.

Because of the number of pupils to be educated, convenient neighborhood facilities cannot be provided for all students in Dist. 54.

SOME PUPILS ARE GOING to have to travel a mile or more to school. But just remember that the successful pupil is usually the one who "goes the extra mile."

Since teachers are often expected to make certain personal sacrifices in time and effort to do the best job possible, it is not asking too much to expect parents of pupils to make some sacrifices also.

There are bound to be some boundary changes in Dist. 54 in the future, and Dist. 54 parents should learn to live with them.

Schaumburg Township cannot now have shift-less school boundaries. And it is more important to avoid having shiftless people.

Park Likes the Idea — If Residents Do

Schaumburg Park District would like to cooperate with High School Dist. 211 in construction of an indoor pool at the proposed Schaumburg High School if — on the basis of re-sults of an attitudes and interest study — this is what residents are discovered to want.

"I think this could be a mar-velous program," Paul Derda, director of parks and recrea-tion, told the Herald yesterday.

Derda commended Lyle John-son, a member of the high school district board of educa-tion and chairman of its devel-opment committee, on presenta-tion of "an excellently done and well-thought-out study" on the pool proposal at a meeting this week.

HE SAID, however, that the park district would like to have been in on the ground floor planning outlined in Johnson's proposal.

"My concern as park director is what our people, as a whole, want out of the district," he said noting that the Park Dis-trict has operated as a taxing body only for the past two years.

"Presently we have only one park and one outdoor pool and we want to do as much as we can on a districtwide basis. Our people are going to have to de-termine whether they want us to provide one indoor pool as opposed to more outdoor pools," Derda explained.

HE SAID future planning also calls for neighborhood parks and other recreational facilities in the rapidly expanding vil-lage.

A consensus among residents will be taken from a University of Illinois-developed attitudes and interest study which the park board is expected to ap-prove next month, Derda said.

The study deals with over-all park planning and should be ready for presentation to a sci-entific sampling of approxi-mately every eight families in the village within the next four to six weeks.

Derda said a complete read-ing and evaluation of the infor-mation found in the feasibility study will not be ready for three or four months.

HE SAID desires of the park district residents will be in-corporated into the master de-velopment plan wherever pos-sible on a priority basis to be determined by available funds.

He also said the park district has only a little over $1 million in available bonding power and indicated that the cooperative pool venture, "which I really feel is a tremendous idea, may be a little bit premature."

The school is expected to be completed and ready for oc-cupancy by September, 1970.

Under the terms of Johnson's proposal, the pool will be de-signed by the school district and paid for by the park district.

the proposed site of the pool.

SPACE IN the pool building would also allow development of a teen center or other large rec-reational facility.

Dave Robertson, swimming director at New Trier East High School, told the audience that swimming is "an activity sec-ond to none for body conditioning for children and adults."

"Pools are the only recrea-tional facility in a school that can be used by people from 6 to 66 and by girls as well as boys," Robertson said.

The coach of 14 Illinois High School swimming champions said competitive swimming plays a very secondary role to the educational and recreational uses of a pool.

Teacher Union Head To Speak at Harper

The president of the Cook County College Teachers Union will speak this morning at a Harper Junior College faculty meeting.

The union spokesman is the first of two nationally-affiliated teachers' organizations invited to speak to the community col-lege faculty.

A representative of the Na-tional Education Association's National Faculty Association will appear at the college next week.

ARRANGEMENTS were made through the Faculty Sen-ate, whose new president is Martin J. Ryan, an English teacher.

Ryan was elected unani-mously at a senate meeting yes-terday afternoon.

Other new officers elected were Tom McCabe, president pro tem, and Michael Bartos, secretary.

Bartos is also a member of the English department and McCabe is a mathematics teacher.

Ryan succeeds John Birkholz, who served a one-year term.

Birkholz, named last week as assistant dean of transfer pro-grams, resigned Wednesday as a senate member.

One of the first duties of the new senate officers will be to arrange for a special election to fill Birkholz' at-large senate seat.

BOLI meetings are called by Jenkins when the group has matters to discuss; they do not meet on any regular schedule but are considered public meet-ings.

This week, for the first time, the Herald was advised of a BOLI meeting scheduled for 7:30 last night.

Jenkins claims that all sched-uled BOLI meetings are an-nounced at the preceding vil-lage board meeting, however, a partial check of minutes of regular board meetings during 1968 failed to note any mention of the announcement of a BOLI meeting.

meeting was approved.

BOLI also approved the fol-lowing fees for professional ser-vices on the special assess-ment: Robert Burke (commis-sioner of BOLI), $12,500; Peter G. Schultz (BOLI and village at-torney), $18,500; and Clorba, Spies Gustafson & Co. (village engineers), $37,000.

CONTACTED BY the Herald last week for an explanation of special assessment fees, Schultz said that under law, all fees cannot exceed 6 per cent of the total assessment.

Schultz explained that while there is no legal limit for engi-neering fees, attorney's fees of 6 per cent of the total are charged on all special assess-ments.

Schultz also confirmed that, in his opinion, the Hoffman Es-tates BOLI is operating fully within the confines of the law.

Residents Will Vote on Budget

Today is the birthday of town-ship government in the United States.

On March 14, 1743, the first town meeting in the U.S. was held in Boston.

Today, 226 years later, the township level of government still survives as one of the last vestiges of direct democracy.

Schaumburg Township resi-dents will act on their own leg-islators in approving the town-ship budget for the coming year at the town meeting April 1.

BUDGETS FOR the town fund, road and bridge fund, li-brary fund, general assistance fund, and mental health fund will be approved by voters at the town meeting.

Reports from the township of-ficers will also be presented at the annual town meeting.

The 1969-70 township budget provides for the transfer of $14,000 to the general assistance fund and about $27,000 to the mental health fund. Town fund expenses will total $65,650.

Schaumburg Township will re-ceive an estimated $100,000 in excess commissions from taxes collected locally in 1969.

The April 1 town mee-ing will be held at Helen Keller Junior High School at 8 p.m.

Elk Grove May Quit COG — Group's Second Loss in Year

A move to quit the Cook County Council of Governments (COG) was tabled for one week by Elk Grove Village board members Tuesday night.

It was spearheaded by Trustees Eugene Keith and James Gibson, but the decision to table the matter received unanimous support.

In making the motion to dis-continue membership in the or-ganization, Keith noted that the Des Plaines village board had unanimously agreed to drop from COG.

AFTER THE board meeting, he said, "I move that Elk it was noted by several that the Elk Grove Park District had Des Plaines and not renew our nearly dropped out but decided to stay in the council for at least one more year as "a cour-tesy" to Elk Grove Village." Pres. Jack Pahl.

Pahl is the chairman of COG. The village president was ab-sent from Tuesday's board meeting, and Keith, a presiden-tial aspirant in the April 15 mu-nicipal elections, was selected chairman pro tem.

At the end of the meeting, Keith handed the gavel to Vil-lage Clerk Eleanor Turner and made the motion.

Without elaboration, he sim-ply said, "I move that Elk the Grove Village follow the lead of Des Plaines and not renew our membership in the Council of Governments."

AFTER A brief pause, Gibson seconded the motion. Other board members ap-peared surprised at the action, but in the brief discussion that followed, Trustee George Coney noted, "We ought to review a lot of organizations we belong to."

The expressed concern was that little benefit is being de-rived from membership in COG.

Trustee Richard McGrenera said, "It's an area of concern for consideration, but since Pres. Pahl isn't here, I suggest we defer action."

"I'm not trying to sneak it through," Keith said, but he did want the matter discussed.

WITH THAT, Trustee Ronald Chernick made a motion to table Keith's move; it was sec-onded by McGrenera.

But voting or the tabling ac-tion didn't show the strength or weakness of Keith's position on the matter, the vote to table was unanimous.

A tabled motion must come up for action at the next regular board meeting, and presumably Pahl will be present to defend the council and rally supporting board members to accept his viewpoint.

Price for membership in the council was increased to $210 annually for Elk Grove Village, with the membership fee based on population.

The Des Plaines City Council voted 16-0 on Feb. 17 to dis-continue membership. One eld-erman was absent.

REASONS cited by the coun-cil were duplication of services between the Northwest Muni-cipal Conference and the council, as well as the increase in mem-bership fee from $75 to $278.

Council members said they would have probably continued membership if the fee had not risen.

Elk Grove Village paid $75 last year, according to finance director Donald Eppley. He esti-mated the price on the council's new rate schedule of $1 per 100

Will Man Triumph Over Machine?

If tentative pupil scheduling board at their March 20 meeting plans for next year at Robert Frost Junior High are approved by the board of education, then man will triumph over machine.

Frost Principal William Lit-

itz will propose to the Dist. 54 board that the daily schedules of Frost pupils for 1969-70 be outlined by school personnel instead of with a computer service.

Computers have been used in previous years in scheduling seventh and eighth grade pupils at Robert Frost and Helen Keller junior high schools.

Scheduling of pupils by hand could result in savings of at least $600. Cost of the computer service is $1 per pupil or more.

NEXT YEAR there will be an estimated enrollment of 600 pupils at Robert Frost, with a slightly larger enrollment at Helen Keller.

Jane Addams Junior High is also scheduled to be ready for use next fall in Dist. 54.

"We have been through it (scheduling program) four times," said Litwitz, "and everything seems satisfactory."

The daily schedule at Frost is divided into 17 time periods or modules of 23 minutes each.

UNDER THE proposed scheduling program, all study halls and the task of supervising them will be eliminated. Instead, there will be small workshops in various subject areas with individual teachers.

Teacher schedules will fit smoothly in the total school schedule.

In working out the scheduling of all pupils, school officials mapped out 24 different group schedules to accommodate the

Filing in Dist. 54 To Close March 21

Friday, March 21, is the deadline for filing nominations by Dist. 54 school board candidates. The election will be held April 12.

Five school board positions will be filled by voters in April. Vacancies include two three-year terms, one two-year term and two one-year terms.

Nominating petitions must be signed by 50 registered voters of the district.

THREE CANDIDATES have filed for three-year terms so far: Gerald J. Lewin, 613 S.

Springinguth Road, and Mrs. Mary Hannon, 1407 Hampton Lane, both of Schaumburg; and Gordon Thoren, 577 Edgefield Lane, Hoffman Estates.

Candidates announced for the two-year term are John McGill, 723 Crest Avenue, Roselle (Pleasant Hills); Edward D. Mozal, 1103 Lowell Lane, and Harry E. Mamch, 625 Norwood, both of Schaumburg.

Seeking one-year terms are Martin Stanton, 1411 S. Weyers Court, Schaumburg; and John M. Stencil, 7546 Brookside Drive, Hanover Park.

To curtail vandalism to Schaumburg's Great Hall during teen dances, chaperons must sign certificates agreeing to pay for damages.

Tuesday, the Schaumburg village board asked Village Atty. Jack M. Siegel to draw up an appropriate certificate that adult chaperons must sign.

THE PROBLEM was brought to the attention of the village board by Public Works director

Edwin Denman. He said, "I'm not against God and motherhood, but there has been tremendous damage to this building during dances."

He said examples include a bottle pushed through a wall, doors yanked off hinges, and damage to lavatories.

Village Clerk Sandy Carsello said the groups have not provided sufficient chaperons for dances. She said the building is so large that chaperons must be placed strategically, including one in each bathroom.

THE BOARD discussed requiring one chaperon for each 10 or 20 teens attending the dance, but decided it would be difficult to enforce.

Trustee Gordon Mullins said the number of chaperons should be determined by the group sponsoring the dance. "But make it clear that they are responsible for damage," he said.

Mrs. Carsello said four groups have been renting the hall on a regular basis for teen dances. Adults must sign a permit to rent the hall, but a damage deposit isn't required.

The groups have not been notifying the police department of dances in advance, Denman said. Reserve policemen have been used at large dances.

"YOU HAVE TO have police checking the parking lot. Often some older ones with a jug come to these dances and try to entice the teens out to a car for a nip," Village Pres. Robert O. Atcher said.

Trustees emphasized that policemen are not to be a substitute for chaperons.

Trustees approved a motion to send damage bills to two groups. Groups who do not pay for damages will not be allowed use of the hall again.

Special assessments are handled by the village's board of local improvements (BOLI), of which Jenkins serves as president. Current village trustees also serve as BOLI members.

POOL PROPOSAL UP TO PARKS

High School Dist. 211's proposed swimming pool program is almost entirely in the hands of three Palatine and Schaumburg Township park districts.

Dist. 211 board member Lyle Johnson this week told residents of the district that his proposal, which would result in construction of indoor pools at the three existing schools in the district and also at the proposed Schaumburg High School, would involve building of the pools by the park districts on land deeded to them by Dist. 211.

THE SCHOOL district would pay an annual fee to the park district for use of each pool, and agreements would be reached between the two districts concerning scheduling and availability of the pool.

The three park districts — Palatine, Hoffman Estates and Schaumburg — have not been approached officially by the school district, Johnson said.

"Following our meetings this week, we intend to sit down and discuss this with them," he said. Public meetings were held at Conant High School Tuesday and at Palatine High School Wednesday.

CONSTRUCTION of the pools could be financed best through a park district sale of general obligation bonds, which would result in a tax levy against residents of that park district. Cost of an indoor pool was estimated at about $600,000.

Dist. 211 does not have the bonding power to build the pools, Johnson said, adding that the new school is being built with a loan from the Illinois School Building Commission.

Johnson said the rapid growth of the district has forced the addition of more and more classrooms but the physical education facilities in the district have not kept pace.

A FORMER president of the Conant Booster Club, Johnson said the shortage of facilities would be most evident at Conant High School next fall.

Under a priority list announced when Johnson first proposed the pool program in January, Conant would be first to get a pool, followed by Fremd, Palatine and the new Schaumburg school. This week, however, Johnson said it would be more economical for a pool to be included at Schaumburg High School while it is being built.

Preliminary architect's drawings by Fridstein & Fitch, Dist. 211 architects, show that the same basic style pool could be built at all four high schools. The design allows storage space for both the school district and the park district bleachers and a gymnasium area, and a warming shed for ice skaters.

'Howie' Project Draws Summons

Again this week Hoffman Estates officials appear to be in more hot water over special assessments levied to pay for sewer, water and related facilities in Howie-in-the Hills.

A court summons for non-payment of debt in construction of a water tower in the development was served on the village Saturday at the request of American Bridge and Iron Corp., a division of U.S. Steel.

Although Village Pres. Roy L. Jenkins and finance officer Mrs. Laura Reedy were both unavailable for comment yesterday, Village Clerk Mrs. Dolores Ward confirmed receipt of the subpoena.

"I SIGNED FOR it but nobody told me what to say if I was asked about it," Mrs. Ward said, explaining that she "is really not familiar with it anyway."

According to one village official, representatives of American Bridge and Iron Corp. claim they were not made aware of the village's intention to pay for the water tower with special assessment bonds.

Trustees hope to reach an amicable "accommodation" before next Tuesday in a fraud suit instituted by the Teamsters Pension Fund in connection with three special assessments totaling more than $1 million in construction of other sewer and water facilities in the same development.

The land, totaling about 155 acres owned by Suburban Life Builders and George Washington Capital Corp., is involved in foreclosure suits filed nearly one year ago by the Teamsters, who hold mortgages on the parcels.

FUND OFFICIALS are suing because they say, as mortgages, they were never advised of the special assessments.

They also charge "public funding of private contracts" since most of the improvements were in when the special assessment was levied last March.

Atty. Russell J. Topper is acting as special counsel for the village since Hoffman Estates Atty. Peter G. Schultz is one of a number of firms and individuals named in the petition.

Both Topper and the village maintain that the assessment was levied, in part, to satisfy contractors' liens on the land.

Builder Promises Funds for Park

Funds to develop a six acre park site in the Timbercrest subdivision of Schaumburg were promised by Morwell Builders, Village Pres. Robert O. Atcher said Tuesday.

George Shapiro, attorney for Morwell, sent a letter stating that $20,000 for siting and equipping the park site in unit 8 of the subdivision would be donated to the village.

Money for the park development was a stipulation included by the zoning board of appeals last June when the builder received approval for cluster development.

WILFRED Meyer reminded the village board that the developer also agreed to adequately drain the site at his expense and grade, seed and plant with trees and shrubs in an amount necessary to properly landscape the area.

The $20,000 will be administered by the village.

"If we turn the $20,000 over to the park district, they wouldn't be restricted to use it only for this park site as the village is. I think the village should administer it," Mayor Robert O. Atcher said.

Will Man Triumph Over Machine?

If tentative pupil scheduling plans for next year at Robert Frost Junior High are approved by the board of education, then man will triumph over machine.

Frost Principal William Litwitz will propose to the Dist. 54 board at their March 20 meeting that the daily schedules of Frost pupils for 1968-70 be outlined by school personnel instead of with a computer service.

Computers have been used in previous years in scheduling seventh and eighth grade pupils at Robert Frost and Helen Keller junior high schools.

Scheduling of pupils by hand could result in savings of at least $600. Cost of the computer service is $1 per pupil or more.

NEXT YEAR there will be an estimated enrollment of 600 pupils at Robert Frost, with a slightly larger enrollment at Helen Keller.

Jane Addams Junior High is also scheduled to be ready for use next fall in Dist. 54.

"We have been through it (scheduling program) four times," said Litwitz, "and everything seems satisfactory."

The daily schedule at Frost is divided into 17 time periods or modules of 23 minutes each.

UNDER THE proposed scheduling program, all study halls and the task of supervising them will be eliminated. Instead, there will be small workshops in various subject areas with individual teachers.

Teacher schedules will fit smoothly in the total school schedule.

In working out the scheduling of all pupils, school officials mapped out 24 different group schedules to accommodate the subjects taken at each grade level, plus school activities such as band or orchestra.

Individual schedules were then fitted into this pattern in determining what each pupil would be doing in each module.

Filing in Dist. 54 To Close March 21

Friday, March 21, is the deadline for filing nominations by Dist. 54 school board candidates. The election will be held April 12.

Five school board positions will be filled by voters in April. Vacancies include two three-year terms, one two-year term and two one-year terms.

Nominating petitions must be signed by 50 registered voters of the district.

THREE CANDIDATES have filed for three-year terms so far: Gerald J. Lewin, 613 S.

Springguth Road, and Mrs. Mary Hannon, 1407 Hampton Lane, both of Schaumburg; and Gordon Thoren, 577 Edgefield Lane, Hoffman Estates.

Candidates announced for the two-year term are John McGill, 723 Crest Avenue, Roselle (Pleasant Hills); Edward D. Mozal, 1103 Lowell Lane, and Harry E. Mamch, 825 Norwood, both of Schaumburg.

Seeking one-year terms are Martin Stanton, 1411 S. Weyers Court, Schaumburg; and John M. Stencil, 7546 Brookside Drive, Hanover Park.

Builder Promises Funds for Park

Funds to develop a six acre park site in the Timbercrest subdivision of Schaumburg were promised by Morwell Builders, Village Pres. Robert O. Atcher said Tuesday.

George Shapiro, attorney for Morwell, sent a letter stating that $20,000 for siting and equipping the park site in unit 8 of the subdivision would be donated to the village.

Money for the park development was a stipulation included by the zoning board of appeals last June when the builder received approval for cluster development.

WILFRED Meyer reminded the village board that the developer also agreed to adequately drain the site at his expense and grade, seed and plant with trees and shrubs in an amount necessary to properly landscape the area.

The $20,000 will be administered by the village.

"If we turn the $20,000 over to the park district, they wouldn't be restricted to use it only for this park site as the village is. I think the village should administer it," Mayor Robert O. Atcher said.

After 92 Years, The Herald Returns

This is the last edition of the Palatine Enterprise.

Beginning Monday, Palatine readers will have a brand new newspaper with an "old-new" name.

The Palatine Herald, established in 1873 as an edition of the Cook County Herald, will return to Palatine after an absence of 92 years.

The Herald's name was changed in 1877 when it was sold and the new owners, apparently to avoid confusion with the former parent paper, changed its name to Palatine Enterprise.

THE LATE Hosea C. Paddock purchased the Enterprise in 1898 as the first link of the newspaper chain which today includes 16 suburban tri-weekly papers bearing his name.

He then acquired the Cook County Herald the following year, reuniting the two papers under common ownership.

However, he never restored the name Herald to the Enterprise.

The Herald returns to Palatine as a daily newspaper, to be published Monday through Friday mornings.

It and three other Heralds, in Rolling Meadows, Arlington Heights and Mount Prospect, are Paddock Publications' first venture into the daily newspaper field.

IN ADDITION to the name and frequency changes, The Herald will take on an entirely new look.

The modern six column format will replace the present eight column style, enabling increased ease in reading and better display of news and advertising.

Paddock Publications' 17th newspaper, the Buffalo Grove Herald, also will make its debut Monday. It will be published three times a week.

CHARRED DISPENSARY: Fire swept the main dispensary at the Arlington Heights Air Defense Site Thursday morning, gutting most of the one story quonset hut in which the medical facility was housed. Injured in the incident was Sgt. E-S Thomas Baumgarner, who cut his wrist trying to enter the burning building. The blaze which struck about 1 a.m. was put out by the Arlington Heights fire department. Sgt. Baumgarner was treated at Northwest Community Hospital and then transferred to Great Lakes Naval Hospital.

POOL PROPOSAL UP TO PARKS

High School Dist. 211's proposed swimming pool program is almost entirely in the hands of three Palatine and Schaumburg Township park districts.

Dist. 211 board member Lyle Johnson this week told residents of the district that his proposal, which would result in construction of indoor pools at the three existing schools in the district and also at the proposed Schaumburg High School, would involve building of the pools by the park districts on land deeded to them by Dist. 211.

THE SCHOOL district would pay an annual fee to the park district for use of each pool, and agreements would be reached between the two districts concerning scheduling and availability of the pool.

The three park districts — Palatine, Hoffman Estates and Schaumburg — have not been approached officially by the school district, Johnson said.

"Following our meetings this week, we intend to sit down and discuss this with them," he said. Public meetings were held at Conant High School Tuesday and at Palatine High School Wednesday.

CONSTRUCTION of the pools could be financed best through a park district sale of general obligation bonds, which would result in a tax levy against residents of that park district. Cost of an indoor pool was estimated at about $600,000.

Dist. 211 does not have the bonding power to build the pools, Johnson said, adding that the new school is being built with a loan from the Illinois School Building Commission.

Johnson said the rapid growth of the district has forced the addition of more and more classrooms but the physical education facilities in the district have not kept pace.

A FORMER president of the Conant Booster Club, Johnson said the shortage of facilities would be most evident at Conant High School next fall.

Under a priority list announced when Johnson first proposed the pool program in January, Conant would be first to get a pool, followed by Fremd, Palatine and the new Schaumburg school. This week, however, Johnson said it would be more economical for a pool to be included at Schaumburg High School while it is being built.

Preliminary architect's drawings by Fridstein & Fitch, Dist. 211 architects, show that the same basic style pool could be built at all four high schools. The design allows storage space for both the school district and the park district bleachers and a gymnasium area, and a warming shed for ice skaters.

An ice skating rink is to be built on athletic fields outside

7-Hour Delay, Then Surgery

A 12-year-old Palatine boy is recovering well in Northwest Community Hospital after surgery last night for a severe leg cut, following an agonizing seven-hour delay before the operation could begin.

The delay was caused by hospital's inability to contact James Martin's parents in Miami for permission to perform surgery.

Permission for surgery is necessary for a boy under 21. That law caused the agonizing and painful delay last night.

JIM, WHO attends St. Thomas School in Palatine, spent about seven hours waiting for that permission to arrive.

When his parents were contacted at 6:35 p.m. the operation began immediately in the hospital's emergency room. Orthopedic surgeon Dr. Rollo J. Neset sewed up the laceration, using a local anesthetic.

Jim received the injury while playing baseball at the school.

League Lunch To Feature Wigs

Immanuel Lutheran Parent-Teacher League will hold its annual spring luncheon March 22.

Highlight of the event will be a wig demonstration by Cherties' Wigs, with models displaying the hairpieces. A wiglette will be offered as the door prize.

The luncheon begins at 11:30 a.m. in the school cafeteria.

Tickets are $1.50 and may be obtained from PTL members or at the school office.

School Aid Is 'Obligation'

Howard Olsen, Palatine Township supervisor, told members of the Dist. 15 school board, Wednesday that township officials have "a moral obligation" to give financial aid to the school district when this year's surplus funds are allocated.

Surplus funds amount to $42,756 for 1969-70, a drop from previous years. The surplus is generally distributed to schools, mental health funds and other organizations which make requests.

Although Olsen told the board, "Our obligation still exists," he in effect said the school board would have to be satisfied with the amount it and other agencies receive. "We will try for adequate funds," he told them, but said other agencies will be asking for a fair share.

IT WAS suggested that "$14,000 or so," might be a realistic figure for the school board. Board Pres. Walter Sundling said he thought Olsen's remarks were a very fair presentation of the financial situation. The board thought its funds would be "down to zero" at one time, he said.

Mental health requests along with the school board, originally totaled $45,000, but came down to $28,000. "We applied some persuasion" to them to get them to cut their original figure, Olsen said, adding there "would be no surplus if the request was granted."

After meeting with all agencies and hearing their requests, the township "hammered away at it" to get at reasonable figures. Mental health last year received more than $36,000, almost as much as this year's surplus.

OLSEN told the school board that mental health will get "as near rock bottom" as would allow it to continue. He frankly told the board, "We didn't think of election expenses" when planning the budget. Olsen pointed to "one-time expenses," such as work on new additions to town hall.

Olsen also pointed to miscalculations in the cost of the original building. He told the board that the Palatine board of auditors asked school officials to "give us more time" to get adequate funds for the school board.

Sundling asked Olsen if there are "any surprises or planned projects" in the budget that would cut school funds. Olsen said there "are no surprises, but planned projects," such as tearing down the old roof on town hall and building a new one.

THAT, HE said, is the type of "one-time expense" he was referring to.

On March 25, the town budget will be reviewed and figures will be suggested for the April 1 town meeting. It was agreed earlier in the week to suggest appropriate figures for voters, rather than have them try to decide at the town meeting.

Chamber's New Committee Attuned to Village Events

by MARTHA KOPER
(Last of a series)

In the often apathetic world of suburbia, it's good to know there's a committee specially appointed to know what's happening in Palatine.

Members of the Chamber of Commerce's legislative committee are making sure they, as well as all chamber members, are informed of actions by the village board of trustees.

A representative from the committee, usually Ken Eriksen, chairman of the group and the chamber's executive director, can be found at the Village Hall almost every Monday evening.

IT'S THE committee's job not only to hear about government actions pertaining to business in the village but to represent the commercial community when important legislation is being discussed by Palatine's ruling body.

"All we want is a chance for participation in the discussion, not a vote," Eriksen emphasized. "Village trustees often say, 'Give us an idea of how the merchants feel, Ken,' and most of the time I can."

"If I can't tell them right on the spot, I'll find out for them," he added.

A GROUP like this didn't exist until a few months ago. Before Eriksen was named as director and the new legislative committee was formed, it was difficult for village officials to know the feelings of the business community.

"But now, by getting to know them and expressing genuine interest, we've built an understanding with the village board," Eriksen said.

"We want to do what's right for the people and also right for the business community," he added.

THIS philosophy dominates the current controversy over the village sign ordinance.

Eriksen admits the board should be cautious about the future and put restrictions on new businesses coming to Palatine. At the same time, he doesn't want to see a sign ordinance cost existing merchants hundreds of dollars.

"Somewhere there has to be a happy medium and I hope I can help the board find it."

WORKING closely with another chamber committee, the legislative group, including Harry Bernstein, Dave Hanner, and Rex Walker, Eriksen also can bring new members to the chamber.

Since the committee has been in operation, businessmen with problems have called Eriksen for advice and assistance.

"They primarily have wanted information or finding out what the village board is doing," Eriksen explained. "It's surprising how many people don't know there's an agenda for every board meeting."

BECAUSE OF the assistance they've found at the chamber, it doesn't take long for them to join the membership roster.

Eventually, the committee would like to expand its interest beyond the local level. Although there's an active state chamber of commerce, Eriksen thinks Palatine representatives could take a more active role in watching state legislation.

Closer to home, he also is thinking about beginning a Northwest suburban council that could focus on problems and solutions unique to the area.

BUT ALL THIS is farther in the future, after the foundation of the newly-formed legislative committee is firmly set in the village.

"The village board cannot always listen to only one man, but they will listen to the Chamber of Commerce, if it's active," Eriksen said.

Owner Asks Zoning For Housing Project

A request for a pre-annexation zoning hearing considered to be the first step toward construction of 24 acres of apartments, has been denied by the Palatine board of trustees.

Although the property owner has received multi-family zoning from the county board, annexation to the village is needed in order to provide water and sewer facilities to the tract.

AT THE TIME county zoning was granted in August, 1967, the developer, Lee Romano, showed plans for a project of 378 apartment units on property at the corner of Quentin Road and Cornell Avenue, south of the railroad tracks.

Romano is also proposing a $150 million project including a 113-story building in Schaumburg.

Now, Edmund Kulma, owner of the property is requesting R-3 zoning to accompany the land as it is annexed. David Bridewell, attorney for the petitioner, asked the village board to call a pre-annexation zoning hearing.

However, trustees decided to deny the request since plans for the development have not changed in the past two years.

BOTH Palatine and Inverness objected to the plan when the project was before the county zoning board in 1967.

"We're being asked to buy something the county created," Trustee Clayton Brown said. When the project was presented to the county zoning board, witnesses testified water would be provided by a private utility company and sewer service would be provided by extending a Metropolitan Sanitary District sewer to the land, according to Village Mgr. Berton Braun.

"THE ONLY reason this is coming before the village now is because there are no utilities available to the land," he said. "I frankly think someone is trying to use us."

Palatine's master plan designates the land as a single-family residential area.

Board Tables Offer To Annex School

The Dist. 15 school Board, less Plum Grove is in city limits.

Wednesday delayed making a decision on a written request by Rolling Meadows, signed by Mayor Roland J. Meyer, inquiring if the school board wants the city to annex Plum Grove School.

Board members agreed the matter requires further study.

Meyer told Paddock Publications that since Rolling Meadows provides police protection on a "volunteer" basis, it might be "advantageous" to both parties if the school were annexed. If, however, school officials wish to stay unincorporated, "we would have no objections."

MEYER CITED the fact that the school has "the need for school crossing guards and our police can't furnish them," unless Plum Grove is in city limits. Parents, Meyer said, have requested school crossing guards from Rolling Meadows.

The Plum Grove school was strip annexed by Palatine and Rolling Meadows challenged this in court. After the matter was involved in litigation, it was ruled that the Palatine move was illegal.

When Plum Grove School reverted to an unincorporated area, it lost Palatine police and fire service, except for rural protection.

In another action Wednesday board members decided to request a Palatine village hearing on their desire to continue to use village fire and police protection for the Marion Jordan School, which also is in an unincorporated area.

Several have been due many happy returns of the day since the last column appeared. Among them are: Cheryl Lem-mond's "How to be Healthy with Yoga" or Yogi Vitalitas; "The Yoga System of Health and Relief from Tension."

Meyric R. Rogers' "American Interior Design" is divided into five parts, taking the history of decoration from early days in this country to the present time. With two exceptions, the interiors shown in the book are taken from American Rooms in Miniature, made by Mrs. James Ward Thorne of Chicago and given by her to the Chicago Art Institute.

For sentimental reasons, are you dusting grandmother's old glass picture, which she presented to you so lovingly, or grandfather's shaving mug or silver wine labels? They just may be valuable antiques. "A Handbook of Popular Antiques," written by Katherine Morrison McClinton, will help you to evaluate some of the lesser-known small trinkets of value.

As you sigh and sit down with that much-needed second cup of coffee, are you looking at the room and wishing it might look more like the pictures in House Beautiful or Better Homes and Gardens? If so, you might like to dash over to the library and check out Helen-June Bonelli's "Introduction to Interior Design." Subjects from proper lamps to floor coverings are discussed in this new book of design. Before throwing out what you have, decide if just a change of wall cover will give your home a complete new decor.

Want to impress friend husband by your knowledge of high finance? Then borrow Colleen Moore's new book, "How Women Can Make Money in the Stock Market." Miss Moore states that she couldn't ever balance her check book until her husband asked her if she was too stupid to do sixth grade arithmetic. The book is informative and simple to digest.

Learning to Swim Is Boating Safety

Although some 40 million Americans have taken up water sports, Roberta Turcotte of the Countryside YMCA in Palatine said most of them "know more about revving up the outboard motor than about swimming."

Mrs. Turcotte, program director of the "Y," points out that learning to swim is "the first rule of safe boating." She cautions those who cannot swim to "stay out of boats, even if it's just a park pond."

The YMCA has developed a set of rules for enhancing pleasure boating, based on 80 years of water safety experience. Mrs. Turcotte stated that "just as in swimming, you should take a buddy with you, when boating."

All boats should have an "approved life preserver on board. A floating seat cushion or a 'Mae West' jacket." The type of life preserver doesn't matter, but she reminds parents to "secure them on children as soon as they jump aboard."

INEXPERIENCED boaters should never sail in bad weather. The "Y" urges boaters to learn nautical danger signals and check with their weather bureau.

If a storm or rough weather is imminent, it's safer to keep

Dave Robertson, swimming director at New Trier East High School, told the audience that swimming is "an activity second to none for body conditioning for children and adults."

"Pools are the only recreational facility in a school that can be used by people from 6 to 66 and by girls as well as boys," Robertson said.
The coach of 14 Illinois High School swimming champions said competitive swimming plays a very secondary role to the educational and recreational uses of a pool.

Elk Grove May Quit COG — Group's Second Loss in Year

A move to quit the Cook County Council of Governments (COG) was tabled for one week by Elk Grove Village board members Tuesday night.
It was spearheaded by Trustees Eugene Keith and James Gibson, but the decision to table the matter received unanimous support.
In making the motion to discontinue membership in the organization, Keith noted that the Des Plaines village board had unanimously agreed to drop from COG.
AFTER THE board meeting, it was noted by several that the Elk Grove Park District had nearly dropped out but decided to stay in the council for at least one more year as "a courtesy" to Elk Grove Village Pres. Jack Pahl.

But voting or the tabling action didn't show the strength or weakness of Keith's position on the matter; the vote to table was unanimous.
A tabled motion must come up for action at the next regular board meeting, and presumably Pahl will be present to defend the council and rally supporting board members to accept his viewpoint.
Price for membership in the council was increased to $210 annually for Elk Grove Village, with the membership fee based on population.
The Des Plaines City Council voted 16-0 on Feb. 17 to discontinue membership. One alderman was absent.

REASONS cited by the council were duplication of services between the Northwest Municipal Conference and the council, as well as the increase in membership fee from $75 to $578.
Council members said they would have probably continued membership if the fee had not risen.
Elk Grove Village paid $75 last year, according to finance director Donald Eppley. He estimated the price on the council's new rate schedule of $1 per 100 population would place the new fee at between $190 and $210.

But some Rolling Meadows aldermen have already made up their minds to oppose the change.
Scholz is requesting the rezoning to accomplish a more esthetic layout of the remainder of the Three Fountains apartment buildings around Beiderman Lake.

Aldermen Oppose Plea Before Zoners

Pahl is the chairman of COG.
The village president was absent from Tuesday's board meeting, and Keith, a presidential aspirant in the April 15 municipal elections, was selected chairman pro tem.
At the end of the meeting, Keith handed the gavel to Village Clerk Eleanor Turner and made the motion.
Without elaboration, he simply said, "I move that Elk Grove Village follow the lead of Des Plaines and not renew our membership in the Council of Governments."
AFTER A brief pause, Gibson seconded the motion.
Other board members appeared surprised at the action, but in the brief discussion that

THE EXTRA strip of land along the east border of the Algonquin Road project was purchased for parking purposes, a permissible use of the industrial tract, to meet the city's ratio of two stalls for each apartment.
Now Scholz wants to move buildings to that area and place the parking on a section already zoned for apartments. There would be no change in total apartments.
"Our intent was to contain the apartment zoning," Ald. Donald Winn said of the industrial zoning east of Three Fountains.
"I mention this to give the zoning commission the feelings of some of the aldermen."

HIS POSITION was supported by Ald. James Watson, but Watson agreed with Ald. Stephen Eberhard that the council must grant Scholz the opportunity to make a presentation before the zoning commission.
"I think we should wait until we have their recommendation," said Mayor Roland J. Meyer.
He appointed Robert Sales chairman of the commission to hold the hearing, with members Kenneth White, Walter Jacobsen, Carl Couve, Robert Rogers, Richard Davis and Robert Rees.

Youth Ranks High In Chamber Budget

Youth projects figure prominently in the $7,000 budget adopted this week for Rolling Meadows Chamber of Commerce activities during 1969.

The college scholarship program is allotted $500. The Chamber is sponsoring a team in the boys baseball league, has taken out a $100 membership in the YMCA, is contributing $100 to the Palatine Township Youth Organization for the "Joint," and this week voted most of the $100 miscellaneous fund to the April 4 Hike for Hunger.

WITH HOPES renewed that the community bulletin board, a carry-over project, will be erected this year, the budget includes a fund for maintenance of the sign.

The office staff is being increased, and new office equipment is being purchased to keep pace with the growing business of the Chamber as its membership grows and it becomes more active.

For the same reason, the budget for telephone, printing and postage is increased so the Chamber's "Get Involved" campaign can be increased.

THE BUDGET is predicted on increasing membership, and Pres Elvin W. Byrom recommends appointment of a second vice president charged with the exclusive duty of seeking new members.

A study of dues structure is being made to determine whether a category should be included to appeal to professional people and one-man businesses.

Use of Schools By 'Y' Approved

The Dist. 15 school board Wednesday approved a request by Herman Hertog of the Countryside YMCA, for the use of Plum Grove and Sanborn schools by the "Y", for conducting an adult fitness program.

Hertog explained that the "Y" will use a "volunteer staff" and will provide adequate insurance and "out-of-pocket expenses," in return for "janitorial fees" for the use of the schools.

The "Y" charges $13 per individual for this program and have 10 enrolled at this time. The expenses originally were $50 a week for the 10-week program. Janitorial fees would cut expenses to $15 per week. Hertog said the "Y" hopes to have its own faculty in about four years.

THE YMCA would use the schools from 5:30 to 7 p.m. and guarantee the schools would be kept in good condition. An expense to be incurred would be the use of the shower room.

Hertog pointed out that Lake Zurich provides facilities at no charge, while Barrington provides them at a janitorial fee. He pointed to the "Y's" need for a larger enrollment in these programs, and believes they can be obtained.

In other action, the board reluctantly agreed to extend the spring vacation, two days, from March 31 to April 7 rather than April 2 to April 7. By law, the schools may set aside five days for "emergencies," such as extremely bad weather, power failure, etc. Because these days were not used this year, it was agreed to take two days to declare as "special holidays."

The extra days will provide for cleaning the schools, clerical work, etc. However, board members brought up the fact that this would only shorten the school year by two days, when there is already concern that the school year is too short.

THE MOTION carried, 7-0, but members, Joel Meyer, Mrs. Patricia Oakley, Otto Elsering and Les Ehringer voted "reluctantly" yes.

The board approved a request for a carpet in the Gray M. Sanborn School; tabled discussion on a proposed school site on the Pepper Tree location; put off final decision on a request that signs be placed in parking lots adjacent a school, stating that children should not use that area as a playground.

There were complaints to property damage to nearby homes, but board members thought the placing of signs would not be a deterrent. It is a question of "the lack of proper guidance." The matter will be looked into further.

The next meeting was scheduled for March 26.

Miss Graf Takes State Dept. Job

A Palatine girl left this week for The Hague, seat of the Netherlands government, as a Foreign Service secretary with the U. S. Department of State.

Mary Jo Graf, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John A. Graf Jr., 629 Bennett Street, left Washington, D.C. Tuesday for her overseas assignment.

THE PROGRAM is designed to acquaint new employees with diplomatic correspondence, procedures, styles and living and working conditions they may expect to find abroad.

Prior to appointment with the Foreign Service Staff Corps, Miss Graf was employed for several years by Bernard Davis & Sheldon Hodes as a legal secretary.

After her tour of duty in The Hague, she will return to the United States for home leave and receive assignment to another of the 300 embassies and consulates maintained abroad by the U. S. Department of State.

CHARRED DISPENSARY: Fire swept the main dispensary at the Arlington Heights Air Defense Site Thursday morning, gutting most of the one story quonset hut in which the medical facility was housed. Injured in the incident was Sgt. E-S Thomas Baumgartner, who cut his wrist trying to enter the burning building. The blaze which struck about 1 a.m. was put out by the Arlington Heights fire department. Sgt. Baumgartner was treated at Northwest Community Hospital and then transferred to Great Lakes Naval Hospital.

POOL PROPOSAL UP TO PARKS

High School Dist. 211's proposed swimming pool program is almost entirely in the hands of three Palatine and Schaumburg Township park districts.

Dist. 211 board member Lyle Johnson this week told residents of the district that his proposal, which would result in construction of indoor pools at the three existing schools in the district and also at the proposed Schaumburg High School, would involve building of the pools by the park districts on land deeded to them by Dist. 211.

THE SCHOOL district would pay an annual fee to the park district for use of each pool, and agreements would be reached between the two districts concerning scheduling and availability of the pool.

The three park districts — Palatine, Hoffman Estates and Schaumburg — have not been approached officially by the school district, Johnson said.

"Following our meetings this week, we intend to sit down and discuss this with them," he said. Public meetings were held at Conant High School Tuesday and at Palatine High School Wednesday.

CONSTRUCTION of the pools could be financed best through a park district sale of general obligation bonds, which would result in a tax levy against residents of that park district. Cost of an indoor pool was estimated at about $600,000.

Dist. 211 does not have the bonding power to build the pools, Johnson said, adding that the new school is being built with a loan from the Illinois School Building Commission.

Johnson said the rapid growth of the district has forced the addition of more and more classrooms but the physical education facilities in the district have not kept pace.

A FORMER president of the Conant Booster Club, Johnson said the shortage of facilities would be most evident at Conant High School next fall.

Under a priority list announced when Johnson first proposed the pool program in January, Conant would be first to get a pool, followed by Fremd, Palatine and the new Schaumburg school. This week, however, Johnson said it would be more economical for a pool to be included at Schaumburg High School while it is being built.

Preliminary architect's drawings by Frickstein & Fitch, Dist. 211 architects, show that the same basic style pool could be built at all four high schools. The design allows storage space for both the school district and the park district bleachers and a gymnasium area, and a warming shed for ice skaters.

Hunger March Rally Slated

Preparations for a mammoth "March for Hunger" through the Northwest suburbs now include a rally and "new form of expression" planned for Sunday afternoon at the St. Peter Lutheran Church, 111 W. Olive, Arlington Heights.

According to Steven Sonnenberg, minister of youth of the church, Sunday's services will include a rally between 2 p.m. and 4 p.m. and a worship service between 5 p.m. and 6 p.m., which will include a performance by a rock band, a slide show and Beethoven songs.

The "free expression service" will be held to create interest in the hunger march planned for Good Friday, April 4.

SONNENBERG said the march has received good response from churches and organizations in the area. Sponsors of the march now hope to attract between 5,000 and 10,000 persons, who will march between Park Ridge and Palatine.

Money, donated by sponsors for each mile walk, will be used for three projects: relief of hunger in Biafra, sponsorship of a community project in Ecuador, and funds for the local Northwest Opportunity Center in Rolling Meadows.

THE MARCHERS will meet at 9 a.m. on Good Friday near Maine Township East High School and will walk through the suburbs, roughly following the route of the Northwest Highway.

Sonnenberg said the marchers have their permits now and will be marching through the residential neighborhoods of each community. An initial idea to walk down Northwest Highway was abandoned for safety and traffic reasons.

Chamber To Pay Marcher

Rolling Meadows Chamber of Commerce will pay a marcher $5 per mile for the April 4 Hike for Hunger.

The sponsorship was voted by the directors at their regular luncheon meeting Tuesday.

THE HIKE, from Park Ridge northwest to Palatine and then on to Rolling Meadows, is to raise funds for three projects: the people of Biafra, agricultural aid to Ecuador, and the Northwest Opportunity Center, which maintains an office in Rolling Meadows.

The Good Friday march was originated by young people at St. Paul Lutheran Church in Mount Prospect under the guidance of their youth leader, David Werham.

Registration for the hike will be accepted until March 28.

School Aid Is 'Obligation'

Howard Olsen, Palatine Township supervisor, told members of the Dist. 15 school board, Wednesday that township officials have "a moral obligation" to give financial aid to the school district when this year's surplus funds are allocated.

Surplus funds amount to $42,756 for 1968-70, a drop from previous years. The surplus is generally distributed to schools, mental health funds and other organizations which make requests.

Although Olsen told the board, "Our obligation still exists," he in effect said the school board would have to be satisfied with the amount it and other agencies receive. "We will try for adequate funds," he told them, but said other agencies will be asking for a fair share.

IT WAS suggested that "$14,000 or so" might be a realistic figure for the school board. Board Pres. Walter Sundling said he thought Olsen's remarks were a very fair presentation of the financial situation. The board thought its funds would be "down to zero" at one time, he said.

Mental health requests along with the school board, originally totaled $45,000, but came down to $28,000. "We applied some persuasion" to them to get them to cut their original figure, Olsen said, adding there would be no surplus if the request was granted.

After meeting with all agencies and hearing their requests, the township "hammered away at it" to get at reasonable figures. Mental health last year received more than $36,000, almost as much as this year's surplus.

OLSEN told the school board that mental health will get "as near rock bottom" as would allow it to continue. He frankly told the board, "We didn't think of election expenses" when planning the budget. Olsen pointed to "one-time expenses," such as work on new additions to town hall.

Olsen also pointed to miscalculations in the cost of the original building. He told the board that the Palatine board of auditors asked school officials to "give us more time" to get adequate funds for the school board.

Sundling asked Olsen if there are "any surprises or planned projects" in the budget that would cut school funds.

Olsen said there "are no surprises, but planned projects," such as tearing down the old roof on town hall and building a new one.

THAT, HE said, is the type of "one-time expense" he was referring to.

On March 25, the town budget will be reviewed and figures will be suggested for the April 1 town meeting. It was agreed earlier in the week to suggest appropriate figures for voters, rather than have them try to decide at the town meeting.

Public Transportation Outlook Reported as Dim

The outlook is dim for an area-wide public transportation system, Rolling Meadows industrialists learned Thursday.

Expansion of the United Motor Coach service or enticing a new bus company to come into the northwest suburbs is being studied by the recently organized industrial division of the Rolling Meadows Chamber of Commerce.

United now holds a charter to operate in Rolling Meadows and offers two buses morning and evening to Arlington Heights train station.

The industrialists believe a broader coverage within the suburbs and between the area and other population centers may increase their labor supply.

RETAIL BUSINESSES in the city are interested in routes between apartment concentrations and downtown, for the convenience of shoppers and employees.

"I was discouraged," Mrs. Blanche Nimmemann, chamber vice president and chairman of the public transportation committee, reported of her conference with United officials.

"The modern concept is to travel by car. They tell me there isn't a bus on the street that isn't losing money."

United says it is not profitable to operate unless there is a concentration of 10,000 people per square mile.

True, many municipalities have taken over public transportation and it operates with a subsidy, agreed Paul Faranda of Hallcrafters, chairman of the industrial division.

SUCCESS of private enterprise might depend on quality of service, mused Elvin W. Byrum of Western Electric, chamber president, citing the Chicago and North Western Railway program.

Several privately chartered buses now bring employees to the Western Electric offices on Golf Road from Chicago.

The Rolling Meadows study group has been advised to watch the progress of a move to expand public bus service in Arlington Heights, where a federal grant is being talked about to help defray the cost of a transportation center and equipment.

AT BEST, it would be two years, said Mrs. Nimmemann, before such a system could be operative. For Rolling Meadows to form a transportation district and follow the same procedure puts actual service four years off, she added.

There is interest in bus service, Faranda said, reporting that a Palatine resident had read of the committee's study in Paddock Publications and phoned him to say older and retired people often have no means of transportation except costly taxis or dependence on friends.

Arlington Park Race Track management may be interested, suggested Clint Clickner of Curtis 1000, but others at the meeting speculated that the train stop at the race track may be sufficient for the needs of the expanded facilities.

BEFORE PURSUING the talks with United or any other bus company, the committee is polling industries to determine the need for transportation.

"Results of the poll will help us identify the importance of bus service to the area," said Faranda.

The industrial division set its next meeting for April 17.

League Lunch To Feature Wigs

Immanuel Lutheran Parent-Teacher League will hold its annual spring luncheon March 22.

Highlight of the event will be a wig demonstration by Cheries' Wigs, with models displaying the hairpieces. A wiglette will be offered as the door prize.

The luncheon begins at 11:30 a.m. in the school cafeteria.

Tickets are $1.50 and may be obtained from PTL members or at the school office.

Owner Maintenance Urged by Scanlan

The care and maintenance of commercial property was taken up by Rolling Meadows city council this week.

"Homeowners have to take care of their own parkways," Sid Tom Scanlan said, in objection to the purchase of new grass-mowing equipment for the city public works department.

His irritation stemmed from the fact that city crews frequently mow weeds on private property during the summer. Property owners are then billed by the city for the service.

SCANLAN would press for better maintenance by the owners.

But the city equipment is due for replacement, and the council approved the acquisition of new mowers, a wood chipper and a rodder in the 1969-70 fiscal year.

Scanlan reported that in conjunction with the city health officer, John Schultz, unsanitary conditions in one restaurant have been improved.

$45,000 City Parking Lot To Be Paved Through MFT

The $45,000 city hall parking lot improvement has been approved for motor fuel tax (MFT) financing.

Rolling Meadows City Council has set April 8 for bidding on demolition of the house and garage on the lot west of city hall, paving the lot and repaving the present parking space.

Aldermen this week questioned possible demolition of the buildings.

Board Tables Offer To Annex School

The Dist. 15 school Board Wednesday delayed making a decision on a written request by Rolling Meadows, signed by Mayor Roland J. Meyer, inquiring if the school board wants the city to annex Plum Grove School.

Board members agreed the matter requires further study.

Meyer told Paddock Publications that since Rolling Meadows provides police protection on a "volunteer" basis, it might be "advantageous" to both parties if the school were annexed. If, however, school officials wish to stay unincorporated, "we would have no objections."

MEYER CITED the fact that the school has "the need for school crossing guards and our police can't furnish them," unless Plum Grove is in city limits.

Parents, Meyer said, have requested school crossing guards from Rolling Meadows.

The Plum Grove school was strip annexed by Palatine and Rolling Meadows challenged this in court. After the matter was involved in litigation, it was ruled that the Palatine move was illegal.

When Plum Grove School reverted to an unincorporated area, it lost Palatine police and fire service, except for rural protection.

In another action Wednesday board members decided to request a Palatine village hearing on their desire to continue to use village fire and police protection for the Marion Jordan School, which also is in an unincorporated area.

"If the park district doesn't want it, we want to be in a position to dispose of the building," reported Ald. Donald Winn.

MAYOR Roland J. Meyer said he has received inquiries regarding the sale of the building, and a public auction may be held.

The cost of the total project represents approximately six months' allotment of MFT funds.

The city's MFT check for February amounted to $6,783.

Sales Drop In December

For the first time in 28 months, retail sales in Rolling Meadows for December, 1968, fell behind the same month of the year before.

The measure of retail sales is the sales tax receipts refunded to the city each month.

The check for last December was $20,761, compared with $22,692 for the same month a year ago. The decrease breaks the spiral which has been in progress for more than two years.

ONE interpretation could be that people did their Christmas shopping early — very early. The check for October was more than $4,000 greater than for October of 1967, and the November check topped the one for the same month in 1967 by $2,000.

For the 1968 calendar year, the city has now received total sales tax revenue in the amount of $190,789, compared with $133,416 for calendar 1967, a gain of $57,353.

APPROVE RETENTION BASIN WORK

Work can begin right away on Wheeling's proposed Heritage Park retention basin. Metropolitan Sanitary District acting chief engineer Frank Dalton said yesterday.

Final approval of a joint construction project for the basin with the MSD contributing $180,000, or two-thirds of the construction cost if less, was given by the MSD board yesterday.

The contract calls for construction of the basin by the MSD which lets bids on the contracting. Despite other MSD budget problems, the money is included in the 1969 construction program and is available immediately.

MSD FUNDS cannot, however, be used for any recreational aspects of the basin. Negotiations for the joint construction program have been going on since November, 1968 between the village, Wheeling Park District, and the MSD.

Village Pres. Ted C. Scanlon called the MSD approval of the agreement "wonderful."

"We've been holding our breath," Scanlon said. The village has okayed the agreement numerous times since November inserting various MSD amendments each time.

"WE'RE READY to go," Scanlon said about construction of the basin. The actual starting date will depend on Harza Engineering, the village's engineers in the project, and the MSD.

The village's portion of funds for the project will come from a bond referendum held last spring.

Wheeling 'V' Show Starting

Tickets for the show, which benefits students with vocational school and college scholarships, are available from members of community organizations or at the door.

Elk Grove May Quit COG — Group's Second Loss in Year

A move to quit the Cook County Council of Governments (COG) was tabled for one week by Elk Grove Village board members Tuesday night.

It was spearheaded by Trustees Eugene Keith and James Gibson, but the decision to table the matter received unanimous support.

In making the motion to discontinue membership in the organization, Keith noted that the Des Plaines village board had unanimously agreed to drop from COG.

AFTER THE board meeting, it was noted by several that the Elk Grove Park District had nearly dropped out but decided to stay in the council for a "contingency" to Elk Grove Village Pres. Jack Pahl.

Pahl is the chairman of COG. The village president was absent from Tuesday's board meeting, and Keith, a presidential aspirant in the April 15 municipal elections, was selected chairman pro tem.

At the end of the meeting, Keith handed the gavel to Village Clerk Eleanor Turner and made the motion. Without elaboration, he simply said, "I move that Elk Grove Village follow the lead of Des Plaines and not renew our membership in the Council of Governments."

AFTER A brief pause, Gibson seconded the motion.

Other board members appeared surprised at the action, but in the brief discussion that followed, Trustee George Coney noted, "We ought to review a lot of organizations we belong to."

The expressed concern was that little benefit is being derived from membership in COG.

Trustee Richard McGrenera said, "It's an area of concern for consideration, but since Pres. Pahl isn't here, I suggest we defer action."

"I'm not trying to sneak it through," Keith said, but he did want the matter discussed.

WITH THAT, Trustee Ronald Chernick made a motion to table Keith's move; it was seconded by McGrenera.

But voting on the tabling action didn't show the strength or weakness of Keith's position on the matter; the vote to table was unanimous.

A tabling motion must come up for action at the next regular board meeting, and presumably Pahl will be present to defend the council and rally supporting board members to accept his viewpoint.

Price for membership in the council was increased to $210 annually for Elk Grove Village, with the membership fee based on population.

The Des Plaines City Council voted 16-0 on Feb. 17 to discontinue membership. One alderman was absent.

REASONS cited by the council were duplication of services between the Northwest Municipal Conference and the council, as well as the increase in membership fee from $75 to $578.

Council members said they would have probably continued membership if the fee had not risen.

Elk Grove Village paid $75 last year, according to finance director Donald Eppley. He estimated the price on the council's new rate schedule of $1 per 100 population would place the new fee at between $190 and $210.

Cochran Baby Dies As Rescue Try Fails

A 20-month-old baby boy died in his Wheeling home yesterday despite efforts by Wheeling police and firemen to save the boy, first by using an inhalator, then rushing him to Holy Family Hospital in Des Plaines.

James M. Cochran, 1500 S. Wolf Road, unincorporated Wheeling, was pronounced dead on arrival at the hospital. The cause of death has not been determined.

THE BOY'S mother, Mrs. John Cochran, called police when she couldn't awaken the infant.

Wheeling firemen failed in their attempt to revive the boy, then police rushed him to the hospital in an ambulance. The Cochrans live in the Lamplighter apartments.

Shaken but unhurt, Kean stood up, but found he had lost his sense of direction. Wandering into the field alongside the construction site, he was spotted by Mrs. Andrew Koepen, of 327 W. Dundee, who helped him back to the sidewalk and on his way to work.

Mrs. Koepen then called wheeling police to see if something could be done about the barricade.

POLICE CHIEF M. O. Horcher put the wheels rolling with a call to the gas company's northern division headquarters. When the situation was explained, James Dodd, a gas company spokesman, assured police that the area would be smoothed by Wednesday afternoon and blacktopped by Thursday evening.

Police called Kean's home to offer assistance Thursday morning, but were assured that his mother would give him a ride to work until the area was repaired.

Kean, however, apparently didn't find the obstacles and his adventure to be of major importance. When Wheeling police called DOOR, Inc. to check on the young man, he hadn't even reported the incident to his boss.

Rogers Co. Now Back On The Job

The Rogers Co. of Postoria, Ohio is on the job again after a meeting Tuesday of the Wheeling Diamond Jubilee Committee.

Eight men on the committee decided for a second time to hire the company to run the nine day celebration of the town's 75th anniversary this August.

Their decision, which rescinded a letter to the Rogers Co. turning down the program, followed a visit to Wheeling by Wayne Lemmon, Rogers Co. vice president.

Lemmon, in a quiet, soft-spoken manner apologized for any lack of trust the committee might have felt in the company.

HE CUT the company's fee down to $9,600 and the cost of the program to $11,000. For that cut, Lemmon also removed the services of a Rogers assistant director from the town for two weeks.

After committee members bombarded him with questions on prices, Lemmon said, "If you're only looking at prices you shouldn't have a celebration," but admitted that "We've given you cause to mistrust us."

Lemmon apologized for a misunderstanding about a $3,000 cost for stage construction which the committee will have to pay. He pointed out that it was in the original proposal. The misunderstanding occurred in a sales pitch with a picture in which the salesman said "everything you see in this picture is provided by the company," Lemmon explained.

LEMMON said scaffolding he rented and put up by day laborers. If the company had to provide the stage and scaffolding the Rogers Co. price would even be higher because of transportation problems, he said. The item remains in the company proposal.

He stressed that what the village men needed to worry about was talent. "If you don't believe in us we don't believe in you."

Hunger March Rally Slated

Preparations for a mammoth "March for Hunger" through the Northwest suburbs now include a rally and "new form of expression" planned for Sunday afternoon at the St. Peter Lutheran Church, 111 W. Olive, Arlington Heights.

According to Steven Sonnenberg, minister of youth of the church, Sunday's services will include a rally between 2 p.m. and 4 p.m. and a worship service between 5 p.m. and 6 p.m., which will include a performance by a rock band, a slide show and Beethoven songs.

The "free expression service" will be held to create interest in the hunger march planned for Good Friday, April 4.

SONNENBERG said the march has received good response from churches and organizations in the area. Sponsors of the march now hope to attract between 5,000 and 10,000 persons, who will march between Park Ridge and Palatine.

Money, donated by sponsors for each mile walk, will be used for three projects: relief of hunger in Biafra, sponsorship of a community project in Ecuador, and funds for the local Northwest Opportunity Center in Rolling Meadows.

THE MARCHERS will meet at 9 a.m. on Good Friday near Maine Township East High School and will walk through the suburbs, roughly following the route of the Northwest Highway.

Sonnenberg said the marchers have their permits now and will be marching through the residential neighborhoods of each community. An initial idea to walk down Northwest Highway was abandoned for safety and traffic reasons.

Candidates for the village board.

Lillian Stiller, Mary Jo Reid, Thomas Weaver and Michael Kane, candidates for Dist. 21 school board, and Eugene Sackett and George Kaage, candidates for the park board, also will appear. Short speeches by each candidate will precede a question-and-answer session.

Wheeling residents and residents of Dist. 21 are invited.

Candidate Forum Is Tuesday

The Wheeling Woman's Club will sponsor a village public forum at the Jack London Junior High School library Tuesday at 8 p.m.

CANDIDATES invited to speak are Village Pres. Ted C. Scanlon, Evelyn Diens, John Koepen, Roger Stricker, William Hart and Michael Valenza.

Blind Man's Walk Hindered

A handicapped man's determination won out against tremendous odds this week in Wheeling with the help of police and the Northern Illinois Gas Co.

Walter Kean, 21, of 99 W. Jeffery, walks over two miles to work each morning. The jaunt is a two hour trip for Kean, who is both blind and physically handicapped.

KEAN, WHO leaves his home at 6:30 a.m. each morning, is employed at DOOR, Inc., a training and workshop center for mentally, emotionally, and physically handicapped persons at 729 W. Dundee.

The independence of being able to walk to work alone is important to Kean, who has a sighted friend who walks home with him in the afternoon.

Wednesday morning Kean met an unexpected obstacle, however, as he walked along the sidewalk in front of the new municipal building construction site.

BECAUSE OF the installation of gas lines, the ripped-up sidewalk was barricaded, and the young man fell when he hit the unexpected obstacles.

School Board May Be Forced To Take Over Remodelling

High School Dist. 214 board members are showing increased concern over an Arlington Heights School remodeling project stalled since the general contractor dropped out of sight in mid-November.

Reichert's full contract was $157,217. The firm's owner, James Reichert of Prospect Heights, has been paid all but $28,000 of the project funds.

The work is currently in the hands of a bonding company, Capital Indemnity, but the school board was told this week that the district may have to step in to get the job completed.

WAYNE FRITCH, of Berger, Kelley, Untied, Scaggs and Associates, architects for the project, told the school board he hopes to get a decision from the bonding company this week.

"If they don't decide to move, you'll have to complete the work yourself," Fritch told the school board Monday. Fritch has estimated from subcontractors who can complete the project. He says the $28,000 not collected by Reichert is sufficient to cover remaining work.

THE AMOUNT IS not sufficient, however, to cover subcontractors' claims against Reichert.

Fritch says that when Reichert "disappeared" in mid-November, he left dozens of subcontractors unpaid — many of them with no way to prove it.

Lien waivers were given by 40 of 69 subcontractors in advance of receiving their money. Reichert was paid by Dist. 214 when he presented the lien waivers — but apparently did not pass the payments on.

FRITCH SAYS one small Arlington Heights painting contractor, who was a "good guy" and provided the lien waivers, is owed $14,000.

The bonding company is under obligation only to those subcontractors who didn't sign lien waivers.

If Dist. 214 goes ahead and completes the work rather than letting the bond company do it, the bonding company may sue, Fritch told the board Monday. HE TOLD Paddock Publications later in the week that such a suit is usually intended to bring all the interested parties together for a settlement. Supt. Edward H. Gilbert was asked by the school board to consult the district's attorneys regarding implications of the possible take-over.

Other major contract holders for the project were Peter Smith, plumbing, $19,351, Jamar-Olmen, heating and ventilating, $32,500, and Divane Brothers, electrical, $62,722.

The project included renovation of girls' locker rooms, relocation of washrooms in the girls' gymnasium area, and extensive changes designed to bring the high school — District 214's oldest — in line with the State Life Safety Code.

Says Laws Ineffective Legalized 'Weed' Urged

by GERRY De ZONNA

"Marijuana is illegal, and this is one of the reasons why it's such a big kick with students today. Our laws are doing the same thing for marijuana that Prohibition did for booze," said Tyler Clements, a commissioner on the Mount Prospect Youth Commission and candidate for the Mount Prospect Library Board.

Clements, a 1962 graduate of the University of Iowa with a degree in psychology, thinks it's time for communities to adopt a realistic approach to marijuana, its availability and usage.

Placing the same restrictions on the purchase of marijuana and alcohol could possibly decrease the weed's popularity and consequently its usage, he said.

"MARIJUANA is readily and easily available to anyone in this area, and its usage is widespread in our communities by high school students who have been greatly influenced by the acceptance of marijuana on the college campuses."

The commissioner explained that present federal laws governing the sale, possession, and use of marijuana are strict, but obviously ineffectual. Despite the law, marijuana is easily available to almost anyone, he said.

Prohibiting marijuana is not going to stop people from using it, Clements thinks. As long as marijuana is already so easily available, a change in federal restrictions could benefit the communities a lot more than people are willing to realize, he said.

"ORGANIZED crime is making a tremendous profit on illegal traffic in marijuana. It's an enterprising business venture. As long as organized crime can be assured of these profitable gains financially, they'll push marijuana regardless of the law."

By placing the same restrictions on marijuana as the federal government places on alcohol, the economy would benefit from the revenue rather than supporting the syndicate's treasury, according to Clements.

"As long as marijuana is being smoked, I see no reason why the government shouldn't benefit from the revenue gained by legal sale," he explained. "I'm not pushing for an all-out campaign to legalize marijuana, and I don't necessarily think that the weed is great, nor do I approve of it."

"HOWEVER, I do think that realistic restrictions on the sale of marijuana, regulated by the government, would possibly curb its widespread use by eliminating the thrill in purchase and also benefit us economically."

Marijuana is not harmful to the user, according to Clements, because it is not habit-forming. However, it is possible that marijuana can lead to the use of harmful drugs, such as the amphetamines (speed) and LSD, he said.

"But then, alcohol can lead to alcoholism and cigarette smoking can lead to cancer. If a person needs a crutch in life, he'll find it regardless of the laws, whether it's drugs, alcohol, or anything else that is equally habit-forming and harmful."

IN THE commissioner's estimation, the biggest threat today is not marijuana but the widespread lack of knowledge among students and their parents about drugs and drug abuse.

He would like to see an educational program established in Mount Prospect to inform children as well as adults about drugs and the dangers involved in using them.

Teacher Union Head To Speak at Harper

The president of the Cook County College Teachers Union will speak this morning at a Harper Junior College faculty meeting.

The union spokesman is the first of two nationally-affiliated teachers' organizations invited to speak to the community college faculty.

A representative of the National Education Association's National Faculty Association will appear at the college next week.

ARRANGEMENTS were made through the Faculty Senate, whose new president is Martin J. Ryan, an English teacher.

Ryan was elected unanimously at a senate meeting yesterday afternoon.

Other new officers elected were Tom McCabe, president pro tem, and Michael Bartos, secretary.

Bartos is also a member of the English department and McCabe is a mathematics teacher. Ryan succeeds John Birkholz, who served a one-year term. Birkholz, named last week as assistant dean of transfer programs, resigned Wednesday as a senate member. One of the first duties of the new senate officers will be to arrange for a special election to fill Birkholz' at-large senate seat.

Wilbert A. Stellman

Wilbert A. Stellman, 64, died Wednesday of a kidney ailment in DuPage County Memorial Hospital, Elmhurst. He lived at 11860 Franklin St. in Bensenville.

Visitation is today at Geils Funeral Home, 180 S. York Road, Bensenville, and tomorrow until time of funeral services at 11 a.m. at the funeral home. Interment will be at Mount Emblem Cemetery in Elmhurst.

His only survivor is a brother, Vernon Stellman of Florida.

Mrs. Annie R. Mapes

Mrs. Annie R. Mapes, 90, died Wednesday of a heart attack in DuPage County Memorial Hospital, Elmhurst. She was born July 8, 1878, in England, and had lived with her son, Edward at 337 S. Judson St. in Bensenville.

Visitation is today at Geils Funeral Home, 180 S. York Road, Bensenville, and tomorrow until 10 a.m. Then the body will lie in state from 11 a.m. until time of funeral services at 1 p.m. at the United Methodist Church of Bensenville, 4N748 Church in Bensenville. Interment will be at Mount Emblem Cemetery, Elmhurst. She leaves no other survivors.

What seemed to sell the local committee members however, were samples of the company psychology.

"We think we know something about mass motivation," Lemmon explained. His company claims to be the only organization in the country selling celebration management.

TO PROTESTS from the men that the fireman could only sell 3,000 tickets for their dance, Lemmon revealed a part of the company's plans for a ticket sales campaign.

Stressing that the campaign had to be kept a secret until the last minute in order to be effective, he convinced the men that, with the company's psychological motivation techniques, a sales of 70 per cent could be expected.

After Lemmon left, the committee members, headed by John Koeppe, agreed that the professional proposal seemed to promise more success than plans by local community residents. Koeppe, quoting a plaque he keeps on his desk, led the committee in a unanimous vote for hiring the company.

The plaque read, "Nothing will ever be attempted if all possible objections must first be overcome."

This column is dedicated to the reader who complained about the Herald telling the truth in a news story because the truth made a certain institution look bad.

Washington, D.C. June 15 — Latest figures released by the Census Department reveal Wheeling has the highest per capita income in the country.

The average income of each Wheeling family is listed as $20,000 a year. Home values in the area, up 100 per cent in the last year, are now estimated at $40,000.

There has been a building boom in Wheeling as homeowners rush to build additions to their garages to house third and fourth cars.

When news of the Census Department figures reached Wheeling, the village board voted unanimously to erect a golden statue of Village Pres. Ted Scanlon in the multi-million dollar park surrounding the municipal building.

Iran, Dec. 16 — The team of oil drillers sent here by the Cooperative Dist. 21 and 23 Development Project announced today the new Dist. 21-23 oil well is producing 500,000 barrels of oil per day.

The two districts are now completely out of debt, school taxes have been abolished and there is talk of the two school districts supporting the state.

When news of the first oil strike reached superintendents Kenneth Gilt and Edward Grodsky, it is reported they wept joyfully in each others arms.

Washington, D.C. Oct. 20 — President Richard Nixon has named Prospect Heights "Model City of the Nation."

"What has been done in Prospect Heights can be a lesson to us all," Nixon told a press conference. "If the federal government could follow the example of Prospect Heights it would substantially reduce the national debt."

"Prospect Heights, by refusing to incorporate itself, has saved thousands of dollars by eliminating such offices as village manager, building commissioner, director of zoning, sanitation, village clerk and building inspector," Nixon continued.

"If this government followed the Prospect Heights plan, we could eliminate Congress, the treasury department, the department of commerce, the defense department and the presidency," he said.

No one from Prospect Heights was present to accept the award, as the area has no elected representative.

"Another example of shrewd economy," Nixon said.

New York, Feb. 3 — Levitt and Son developers have announced a sweeping change in company policy following a complaint from Buffalo Grove.

Levitt plans to demolish every third home in its suburban developments throughout the nation. Homeowners will be paid double the value of their houses as a goodwill gesture.

By eliminating every third house in the many Levitt developments, we will provide more open space and promote aesthetics in the area," said a Levitt spokesman.

Levitt also intends to build a half-acre park on every block in its subdivisions.

The company has offered to completely alter the facade of every house in its subdivisions at its own expense in an effort to eliminate monotony.

Village Pres. Donald Thompson told the Herald he is "greatly impressed" by the Levitt action.

"All we did was send them one letter saying Paxton, Saxon, Jaxon, and Naxon streets had a certain similarity," said Thompson.

Now, can we get back to telling the truth?

Sensitivity Training — Way to Gain Self-Esteem

Sensitivity training, according to Dr. Donald Thomas, Superintendent of schools for Dist. 59, is not presently being planned — to his knowledge — as part of the curriculum for district schools.

He said this during a meeting of the district's school community council, during a lecture aimed at defining "sensitivity training."

Ideally, Thomas said, it's a method for people to enhance, through group participation, their own values. Properly conducted, directed by qualified leaders, Thomas feels sensitivity training can be wholesome.

IT'S NOT therapy, but a mind expanding experience, he indicated. Thomas said the concept is ancient: Socrates used it in Greece when scholars were asked to explain their definition of many key words.

Sensitivity training, according to Thomas, is a process by which a person solidifies his own self-image, and realizes that his individuality is precious. Once the person is convinced that he is a valuable human commodity, he also realizes that every human life is equally valuable.

He also pointed out some pitfalls of sensitivity training. "In its violent extreme," Thomas said in response to a question from the audience, "it is the North Korean brand of brainwashing. They submitted prisoners to extreme physical and mental torture. Permitted no rest. Eventually, the prisoners were ready to say and believe anything the 'leader' directed."

Thomas emphasized that such sensitivity training is not wholesome.

THE VALUE OF sensitivity training, Thomas said, is determined by the leader. He explained the "T-group" technique now in use by American industry, education, and some entrepreneurs he labels as quacks.

Basically, a group of volunteers meet under the direction of an allegedly qualified leader. They talk. Express their feelings about many things. Discussions get quite personal, people unburden their minds.

"Like hypnotism, it can be used for good purposes or quackery. A qualified person can use hypnotism to help a patient. Or he can get on a stage and put subjects into a trance for a profit," Thomas said.

"A SENSITIVITY training can operate either way, also. No certification is necessary — as for a doctor or psychiatrist — for a person to practice in sensitivity training sessions."

Thomas said there are certain guidelines that can indicate whether a sensitivity training program will be wholesome. The rationale behind the technique, he explained, is based on answering four questions:

1. Is man good or evil? If the practitioner feels man is evil, he will try to improve the subjects by emphasizing their failures, through self-punishment.

If the leader believes man is basically good, he will attempt to pinpoint the positive aspects of the individual, feeling that the person will reduce his weaknesses by basing his actions on his strengths.

2. CAN HUMAN behavior be modified by attacking and destroying his personal values? Thomas said that is the type of brainwashing used by Communists against American servicemen.

Another approach is the Freudian Theory that all males have an Oedipus complex. Human behavior can't be explained that simply, Thomas said.

3. Can man change his behavior or does he have to be influenced by an outside force? Negative sensitivity training practitioners, Thomas explained, feel that a man does not know good from evil unless he is told.

4. SHOULD BASIC behavioral changes be attempted early in life, or when a person is mature. Thomas feels it can be harmful to try and change the value structure of older people.

"I could make $1,200 a week, working weekends only, by conducting sensitivity training sessions," he said he has attended a workshop on the subject in Bethel, Maine. He does not feel that institution provides the type of training to prepare a session leader to operate on the positive side of the fence.

He offered some points to consider when evaluating a sensitivity training program. "Select a highly competent leader. Such a person needs at least a master's degree in psychology, a doctorate in philosophy, or a doctorate in divinity."

"No adult should enter such a session under any form of pressure. He should sincerely desire to attend, not be shamed into it by colleagues."

"AS SOON AS anyone in the group starts practicing psychology, get out. Sensitivity training is not therapy, but a way to gain self-esteem."

Thomas said participants in sensitivity training should not attend "marathon sessions," which can last 24, 48, or 56 hours. "Such sessions lead to fatigue, people drop their guard

7-Hour Delay, Then Surgery

A 12-year-old Palatine boy is recovering well in Northwest Community Hospital after surgery last night for a severe leg cut, following an agonizing seven-hour delay before the operation could begin.

The delay was caused by hospital's inability to contact James Martin's parents in Miami for permission to perform surgery.

Permission for surgery is necessary for a boy under 21. That law caused the agonizing and painful delay last night. JIM, WHO attends St. Thomas School in Palatine, spent about seven hours waiting for that permission to arrive.

When his parents were contacted at 6:35 p.m. the operation began immediately in the hospital's emergency room. Orthopedic surgeon Dr. Rollo J. Nesset sewed up the laceration, using a local anesthetic.

Jim received the injury while playing baseball at the school.

CANDIDATES SPEAK OUT IN DIST. 23

Independent Dist. 23 school board candidate Jo Ellen Clawes was taken to task for her opposition to a state-financed school building when she appeared before a citizens group Tuesday night.

Donald Colby, 38 Glenbrook Drive, Prospect Heights, challenged Mrs. Clawes' contention that she would do her best for the school district if elected.

"How can you justify the fact that you opposed a 17-room school when you have admitted asking for a reduction to 12 rooms?" Colby asked.

MRS. CLAWES contended that Dist. 23 had not filed a proper application for the state-financed school, and she opposed the form of the application.

She has also stated that she thought the proposed school site was in the wrong place, and believes that other schools in the state needed aid more desperately than Dist. 23.

Colby insists the application for aid was accurate.

"THE application stated that we were not to include the five non-instructional classrooms in our statement," he said.

Mrs. Clawes insisted "you were all misled by Louis Pansino." Pansino was the former superintendent of the district.

Mrs. Clawes says her qualifications exceed those of the three caucus-endorsed candidates because she has attended more school board meetings.

ART KOESTER, candidate for the Dist. 23 school board, was stranded in Mexico, but the other three contestants were present and accounted for at the PTA candidates' forum.

Koester, a pilot for American Airlines, and his entire family were stranded in Mexico due to the American Airlines flight engineers strike.

During the forum, candidates Alan Krinsky, a scrap metal dealer; John Stull, a real estate broker; and Mrs. Clawes, ticked-off their qualifications for the three open positions on the board.

IN HIS presentation, Krinsky said, "I have lived in School Dist. 23 for 3 1/2 years and am a member of the Arlington Vista Homeowners Association. I have an extreme desire to be on this board."

"The children in this area are our future," Krinsky said. "I think everyone in the area should do what they can. The first priority of the school board is to the children."

"I am self-employed," Krinsky stated, "and have a lot of time to devote to this job. My hours are flexible and I can arrange them to suit myself."

"I AM SURE you are all aware of the issues facing the school board," said John Stull, the next candidate. "I am here tonight mainly to sell myself."

Stull noted that for the past two years he has served as state director of the Arlington Heights Jaycees, and was honored as the key man in 1967.

"I was successful in organizing a Jaycee chapter in Prospect Heights," Stull continued. "I was chosen to serve on the Republican nominating committee for Wheeling Township offices, and I am Cub master of Pack 336."

"I make it my business to know what is going on in this area," Stull said. "All the activities I am involved in take a lot of cooperation on my wife's part, and she is behind me all the way. We have to think about the future. There are methods undiscovered — and there are some people with the time. I have the time and I can find these methods."

QUESTIONING of the candidates was invited, and on being asked, "What part of the school board function would you fit best?" Krinsky replied, "I have an extensive background in accounting, but I feel I can do whatever has to be done."

Mrs. Clawes was asked, "Why didn't you go thru the caucus?" She replied, "I think the caucus is as outdated as the horse and buggy. It has outlived its usefulness. I think the people should make their own choice."

"Not being a parent yourself, Mr. Stull," a member of the audience asked, "do you understand the problems of a parent?"

"I HAVE 48 boys in my Scout pack. I shall become a parent in July. I have always been involved in activities for children," Stull replied. "The children I have the most success with are in situations where there is parent participation. I am aware of the problems and I think I am qualified to deal with them."

Rally Set For March On Hunger

Preparations for a mammoth "March for Hunger" through the Northwest suburbs now include a rally and "new form of expression" planned for Sunday afternoon at the St. Peter Lutheran Church, 111 W. Olive, Arlington Heights.

According to Steven Sonnenberg, minister of youth of the church, Sunday's services will include a rally between 2 p.m. and 4 p.m. and a worship service between 5 p.m. and 6 p.m., which will include a performance by a rock band, a slide show and Beethoven songs.

The "free expression service" will be held to create interest in the hunger march planned for Good Friday, April 4.

SONNENBERG said the march has received good response from churches and organizations in the area. Sponsors of the march now hope to attract between 5,000 and 10,000 persons, who will march between Park Ridge and Palatine.

Money, donated by sponsors for each mile walk, will be used for three projects: relief of hunger in Biafra, sponsorship of a community project in Ecuador, and funds for the local Northwest Opportunity Center in Rolling Meadows.

THE MARCHERS will meet at 9 a.m. on Good Friday near Maine Township East High School and will walk through the suburbs, roughly following the route of the Northwest Highway.

Sonnenberg said the marchers have their permits now and will be marching through the residential neighborhoods of each community. An initial idea to walk down Northwest Highway was abandoned for safety and traffic reasons.

Citizens Group Urges 'Yes' Vote

The Prospect Heights Citizens Committee has concluded a "yes" vote is urgently needed in the April 12 referendum.

The referendum will ask for voter approval of a 21-cent tax increase which will increase the school tax on homes in the district from $1.60 to $1.81 and boost district revenues $50,000 yearly.

The increased tax will amount to approximately $21 on a home with an assessed valuation of $10,000.

"We wanted to investigate every angle," Citizens Committee Chairman Larry Purcell told an audience of the Prospect Heights PTA Tuesday night.

"That is the reason the Citizens Committee was formed, to find out if this referendum is really necessary," he said.

"ALMOST ALL organizations in the area," Purcell continued, "attended this first meeting. Questions were asked and the answers were to be investigated and given at the next meeting. We formed various committees to investigate different areas."

"Last Thursday we had the information we needed," Purcell said, "this referendum is necessary."

"The cost of running schools goes up every year... almost anything you can think of goes up."

"Cigarettes, cars and houses are the solid, you-can-touch-em type things," Purcell said. "What about the things you can't see, feel or hear? What about your young son's spelling or that pretty little daughter's arithmetic? You are buying knowledge for your children and the cost of gaining knowledge is going up."

"Could your son's teacher send home a bill saying the package of spelling has gone up 8 cents this year?"

"THE SCHOOL needs the money to maintain its position," Purcell said, "some people oppose this, but let me remind you when a person tells you there are unnecessary frills... don't believe them until you have had the facts. A fact sheet will be mailed to each and everyone in the district."

"Study them," Purcell continued, "and you will know why you are urged to vote 'YES' on April 12th."

Parks May Blossom Out

by MARTY MOSER

A maturing Prospect Heights Park District may burst out this summer with neighborhood parks and buildings in accordance with a preliminary master plan.

The preliminary plans call for joint park-school and park-library ventures to tap the underutilized area's full recreation potential. Developing two elementary school sites and one future high school site, are land possibilities pointed out Monday by Al Caskey, park district planner.

At the end of a presentation of the master plan, enthused Park Board Pres. Lewis Wolhausen was ready to "get the show on the road." He said he would favor bonding without referendum as provided by state statutes to start development.

The board adjourned to executive session to discuss privately owned real estate viewed as possible park sites. Generally, this would include one large park and extension of a smaller park.

LIMITED FROM future expansion on all sides, the two-year-old park district has a unique problem of providing parks in subdivisions that grew up with no planning for open space.

Residents have largely relied for recreation on the Lions Club and its 4.8 acre Community Park and Aquacenter at Elm and Camp McDonald Roads. The park district Monday acquired this land and swimming pool complex by assuming its debts.

Commissioners were told this park could be expanded by utilizing seven adjacent acres to Camp McDonald School to the west. A joint park-library building, separated in function by offices and lounge, was suggested for the Lions park site.

John Muir School also has about five acres along side that could be developed, and a similar site could be placed on the 40-acre grounds of a proposed Dist. 214 high school, Caskey said.

THE HIGH school site is north of Camp McDonald Road and east of Wheeling Road. Muir School is east of Route 83 at Drake Terrace. Commonwealth Edison Co. right-of-way was mentioned as a park possibility in the Country Gardens subdivision in the northwest corner of Prospect Heights. A tot lot is feasible at St. Alphonsus School grounds east of Wheeling Road, Caskey said.

Caskey recommended commissioners attend a March 19 meeting with the Prospect Heights Library District to sound out the library board on cooperative agreements. He recommended the same procedure with School Dist. 23.

The planner said both the other taxing bodies have indicated willingness to consider joint agreements.

Little League is also anxious to cooperate for facilities, he said.

"THE PEOPLE of this community are going to be very anxious to see what you are going to do," Caskey told commissioners.

Under state statute, new park districts are allowed to issue by resolution one-half of one percent of its assessed valuation. Recreation director Ron Greenberg figured Prospect Heights Park District could issue $140,000 in bonds under this formula, based on the district's $20.6 million assessed valuation.

Caskey said the board should be aware of possible future events that could affect the district's master plan. One was the proposed Rand Road Expressway which will parallel Rand Road within a two-mile stretch on either side of Rand.

Another effect could be legislation encouraging merger of small park districts the planner pointed out. Caskey offered little encouragement if the unincorporated area was annexed by the Arlington Heights or Mount Prospect park districts, stating both were at maximum bonded indebtedness now.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Actually, although both districts are heavily bonded, they do have some unused bonding power. Mount Prospect has one half million left and Arlington Heights has $508,945 at this time.)

River Trails is also having difficulty paying for its projects, Caskey asserted.

"So if anyone is going to provide facilities for you, you'll have to do it," Caskey said.

The board turned down a request to conduct a $4,400 attitude and interest survey in the community.

CASKEY represents the park and recreation planning firm of McFadden and Everly Limited, Winnetka. The master plan was contracted for at a cost of $4,500.

Further refinements of the plan will be made after the library and school boards make their interests known, it was agreed.

Cochran Baby Dies As Rescue Try Fails

A 20-month-old baby boy died in his Wheeling home yesterday despite efforts by Wheeling police and firemen to save the boy, first by using an inhalator, then rushing him to Holy Family Hospital in Des Plaines.

James M. Cochran, 1500 S. Wolf Road, unincorporated Wheeling, was pronounced dead on arrival at the hospital. The cause of death has not been determined.

THE BOY'S mother, Mrs. John Cochran, called police when she couldn't awaken the infant.

Wheeling firemen failed in their attempt to revive the boy, then police rushed him to the hospital in an ambulance.

'Sleep-in' Set By Local Church

The Community Presbyterian Church in Mount Prospect is sponsoring a "sleep-in" for 65 junior high school students March 15.

According to Thomas Phillips, church pastor, the day's activities will begin at 4 p.m. with a bowling party and end with a worship service just before bedtime. The students will be "camping" in the church and sleeping in sleeping bags.

OTHER EVENTS planned for the evening include a special dinner, singing, an amateur hour, and movies. Also, George Bookless, a teacher at Central School, will present a slide program on his experiences with the Peace Corps in Nigeria. Chaperones for the evening are Pastor Phillips, Mr. and Mrs. Dan Braback, Mr. James Munn, Mrs. Joe McLaughlin, and Mr. and Mrs. Joel Mattson.

Blocked By Barricade

Blind Man's Walk Hindered

A handicapped man's determination won out against tremendous odds this week in Wheeling with the help of police and the Northern Illinois Gas Co.

Walter Kean, 21, of 99 W. Jeffery, walks over two miles to work each morning. The jaunt is a two hour trip for Kean, who is both blind and physically handicapped.

KEAN, who leaves his home at 6:30 a.m. each morning, is employed at DOOR, Inc., a training and workshop center for mentally, emotionally, and physically handicapped persons at 729 W. Dundee.

The independence of being able to walk to work alone is important to Kean, who has a sighted friend who walks home with him in the afternoon.

Wednesday morning Kean met an unexpected obstacle, however, as he walked along the sidewalk in front of the new municipal building construction site.

BECAUSE OF the installation of gas lines, the ripped-up sidewalk was barricaded, and the young man fell when he hit the unexpected obstacles.

Shaken but unhurt, Kean stood up, but found he had lost his sense of direction. Wandering into the field alongside the construction site, he was spotted by Mrs. Andrew Koeppen, of 327 W. Dundee, who helped him back to the sidewalk and on his way to work.

Mrs. Koeppen then called Wheeling police to see if something could be done about the barricades.

POLICE CHIEF M. O. Horcher put the wheels rolling with a call to the gas company's northern division headquarters. When the situation was explained, James Dodd, a gas company spokesman, assured police that the area would be smoothed by Wednesday afternoon and blacktopped by Thursday evening.

Police called Kean's home to offer assistance Thursday morning, but were assured that his mother would give him a ride to work until the area was repaired.

Kean, however, apparently didn't find the obstacles and his adventure to be of major importance. When Wheeling police called DOOR, Inc. to check on the young man, he hadn't even reported the incident to his boss.

Says Laws Ineffective Legalized 'Weed' Urged

by GERRY De ZONNA

Placing the same restrictions on the purchase of marijuana is one of the reasons why it's such a big kick with students today. Our laws are doing the same thing for marijuana that prohibition did for booze," said Tyler Clements, a commissioner on the Mount Prospect Youth Commission and candidate for the Mount Prospect Library Board.

Prohibiting marijuana is not going to stop people from using it, Clements thinks. As long as marijuana is already so easily available, a change in federal restrictions could benefit the communities a lot more than people are willing to realize, he said.

"ORGANIZED crime is making a tremendous profit on illegal traffic in marijuana. It's an enterprising business venture. As long as organized crime can be assured of these profitable gains financially, they'll push marijuana regardless of the law."

By placing the same restrictions on marijuana as the federal government places on alcohol, the economy would benefit from the revenue rather than supporting the syndicate's treasury, according to Clements.

"As long as marijuana is being smoked, I see no reason why the government shouldn't benefit from the revenue gained by legal sale," he explained. "I'm not pushing for an all-out campaign to legalize marijuana, and I don't necessarily think that the weed is great, nor do I approve of it."

"HOWEVER, I do think that realistic restrictions on the sale of marijuana, regulated by the government, would possibly curb its widespread use by eliminating the thrill in purchase and also benefit us economically."

Marijuana is not harmful to the user, according to Clements, because it is not habit-forming. However, it is possible that marijuana can lead to the use of harmful drugs, such as the amphetamines (speed) and LSD, he said.

"But then, alcohol can lead to alcoholism and cigarette smoking can lead to cancer. If a person needs a crutch in life, he'll find it regardless of the laws, whether it's drugs, alcohol, or anything else that is equally habit-forming and harmful."

IN THE commissioner's estimation, the biggest threat today is not marijuana but the widespread lack of knowledge among students and their parents about drugs and drug abuse.

He would like to see an educational program established in Mount Prospect to inform children as well as adults about drugs and the dangers involved in using them.

Teacher Union Head To Speak at Harper

The president of the Cook County College Teachers Union will speak this morning at a Harper Junior College faculty meeting.

The union spokesman is the first of two nationally-affiliated teachers' organizations invited to speak to the community college faculty.

A representative of the National Education Association's National Faculty Association will appear at the college next week.

ARRANGEMENTS were made through the Faculty Senate, whose new president is Martin J. Ryan, an English teacher.

Ryan was elected unanimously at a senate meeting yesterday afternoon.

Other new officers elected were Tom McCabe, president pro tem, and Michael Bartos, secretary.

Bartos is also a member of the English department and McCabe is a mathematics teacher. Ryan succeeds John Birkholz, who served a one-year term.

Birkholz, named last week as assistant dean of transfer programs, resigned Wednesday as a senate member. One of the first duties of the new senate officers will be to arrange for a special election to fill Birkholz' at-large senate seat.

Mrs. Black Joins Anniversary Group

Mrs. Gordon Black, 2302 Grouse Lane, has been appointed the fifth member of the Rolling Meadows 15th anniversary steering committee.

Besides the chairman, Chester Vandy, the planning group includes Wil Hutchison, Hester Kline and John J. Woods.

This will be the third quinquennial celebration.

Parades, youth activities and a dinner dance have been highlights of the fifth and tenth anniversary affairs.

This column is dedicated to the reader who complained about the Herald telling the truth in a news story because the truth made a certain institution look bad.

Washington, D.C. June 15 — Latest figures released by the Census Department reveal Wheeling has the highest per capita income in the country.

The average income of each Wheeling family is listed as $20,000 a year. Home values in the area, up 100 per cent in the last year, are now estimated at $40,000.

There has been a building boom in Wheeling as homeowners rush to build additions to their garages to house third and fourth cars.

When news of the Census Department figures reached Wheeling, the village board voted unanimously to erect a golden statue of Village Pres. Ted Scanlon in the multi-million dollar park surrounding the municipal building.

Iran, Dec. 16 — The team of oil drillers sent here by the Cooperative Dist. 21 and 23 Development Project announced today the new Dist. 21-23 oil well is producing 500,000 barrels of oil per day.

The two districts are now completely out of debt, school taxes have been abolished and there is talk of the two school districts supporting the state.

When news of the first oil strike reached superintendents Kenneth Gill and Edward Grodzky, it is reported they wept joyfully in each others arms.

Washington, D.C., Oct. 20 — President Richard Nixon has named Prospect Heights "Model City of the Nation."

"What has been done in Prospect Heights can be a lesson to us all," Nixon told a press conference. "If the federal government could follow the example of Prospect Heights it would substantially reduce the national debt."

"Prospect Heights, by refusing to incorporate itself, has saved thousands of dollars by eliminating such offices as village manager, building commissioner, director of zoning, sanitation, village clerk and building inspector," Nixon continued.

"If this government followed the Prospect Heights plan, we could eliminate Congress, the treasury department, the department of commerce, the defense department and the presidency," he said.

No one from Prospect Heights was present to accept the award, as the area has no elected representative.

"Another example of shrewd economy," Nixon said.

New York, Feb. 3 — Levitt and Son developers have announced a sweeping change in company policy following a complaint from Buffalo Grove.

Levitt plans to demolish every third home in its suburban developments throughout the nation. Homeowners will be paid double the value of their houses as a goodwill gesture.

By eliminating every third house in the many Levitt developments, we will provide more open space and promote aesthetics in the area," said a Levitt spokesman.

Levitt also intends to build a half-acre park on every block in its subdivisions.

The company has offered to completely alter the facade of every house in its subdivisions at its own expense in an effort to eliminate monotony.

Village Pres. Donald Thompson told the Herald he is "greatly impressed" by the Levitt action.

"All we did was send them one letter saying Paxton, Saxon, Jaxon, and Naxon streets had a certain similarity," said Thompson.

Now, can we get back to telling the truth?

Sensitivity Training — Way to Gain Self-Esteem

Sensitivity training, according to Dr. Donald Thomas, Superintendent of schools for Dist. 59, is not presently being planned — to his knowledge — as part of the curriculum for district schools.

He said this during a meeting of the district's school community council, during a lecture aimed at defining "sensitivity training."

Ideally, Thomas said, it's a method for people to enhance, through group participation, their own values. Properly conducted, directed by qualified leaders, Thomas feels sensitivity training can be wholesome.

IT'S NOT therapy, but a mind expanding experience, he indicated. Thomas said the concept is ancient: Socrates used it in Greece when scholars were asked to explain their definition of many key words.

Sensitivity training, according to Thomas, is a process by which a person solidifies his own self-image, and realizes that his individuality is precious. Once the person is convinced that he is a valuable human commodity, he also realizes that every human life is equally valuable.

He also pointed out some pitfalls of sensitivity training. "In its violent extreme," Thomas said in response to a question from the audience, "it is the North Korean brand of brainwashing. They submitted prisoners to extreme physical and mental torture. Permitted no rest. Eventually, the prisoners were ready to say and believe anything the 'leader' directed."

Thomas emphasized that such sensitivity training is not wholesome.

THE VALUE OF sensitivity training, Thomas said, is determined by the leader. He explained the "T-group" technique now in use by American industry, education, and some entrepreneurs he labels as quacks.

Basically, a group of volunteers meet under the direction of an allegedly qualified leader. They talk. Express their feelings about many things. Discussions get quite personal, people unburden their minds.

"Like hypnotism, it can be used for good purposes or quackery. A qualified person can use hypnotism to help a patient. Or he can get on a stage and put subjects into a trance for a profit," Thomas said.

"A SENSITIVITY training can operate either way, also. No certification is necessary — as for a doctor or psychiatrist — for a person to practice in sensitivity training sessions."

Thomas said there are certain guidelines that can indicate whether a sensitivity training program will be wholesome. The rationale behind the technique, he explained, is based on answering four questions:

1. Is man good or evil? If the practitioner feels man is evil, he will try to improve the subjects by emphasizing their failures, through self-punishment.

If the leader believes man is basically good, he will attempt to pinpoint the positive aspects of the individual, feeling that the person will reduce his weaknesses by basing his actions on his strengths.

2. CAN HUMAN behavior be modified by attacking and destroying his personal values? Thomas said that is the type of brainwashing used by Communists against American servicemen.

Another approach is the Freudian Theory that all males have an Oedipus complex. Human behavior can't be explained that simply, Thomas said.

3. Can man change his behavior or does he have to be influenced by an outside force? Negative sensitivity training practitioners, Thomas explained, feel that a man does not know good from evil unless he is told.

4. SHOULD BASIC behavioral changes be attempted early in life, or when a person is mature. Thomas feels it can be harmful to try and change the value structure of older people.

"I could make $1,200 a week, working weekends only, by conducting sensitivity training sessions," he said he has attended a workshop on the subject in Bethel, Maine. He does not feel that institution provides the type of training to prepare a session leader to operate on the positive side of the fence.

He offered some points to consider when evaluating a sensitivity training program. "Select a highly competent leader. Such a person needs at least a master's degree in psychology, a doctorate in philosophy, or a doctorate in divinity."

"No adult should enter such a session under any form of pressure. He should sincerely desire to attend, not be shamed into it by colleagues."

"AS SOON AS anyone in the group starts practicing psychology, get out. Sensitivity training is not therapy, but a way to gain self-esteem."

Thomas said participants in sensitivity training should not attend "marathon sessions," which can last 24, 48, or 56 hours. "Such sessions lead to fatigue, people drop their guard excessively and say things they regret later. This can lead to guilt, shame, and destroy any positive value the program might otherwise have."

A man asked, "Couldn't such sessions tend to reduce a group to a common denominator? Wouldn't persons with higher values tend to think they are trying too hard to be good, and lower their standards?"

Thomas answered, "It's like a classroom situation. It depends on the teacher. The better teacher will have a group, say four and five. When the term is over, he will have a wider spread — probably fours and tens. The poor teacher, on the other hand, will cause the group to be more nearly equal."

THOMAS SAID that any use of sensitivity training in schools, in his opinion, should be restricted to children with strong behavioral problems. He stresses that such programs are not to his knowledge, in Dist. 59's plans.

He reported, however, that about 30 faculty members are now involved in related sessions. Three of them are principals: Richard Jenness of Holmes; Harold Hoeksema of Grant Ward and Tom Powers of High Ridge Knolls.

With faculty members, they are attending weekend sensitivity training sessions conducted and funded by the Stone Foundation.

Elk Grove May Quit COG — Group's Second Loss in Year

A move to quit the Cook County Council of Governments (COG) was tabled for one week by Elk Grove Village board members Tuesday night.

It was spearheaded by Trustees Eugene Keith and James Gibson, but the decision to table the matter received unanimous support.

In making the motion to discontinue membership in the organization, Keith noted that the Des Plaines village board had unanimously agreed to drop from COG.

AFTER THE board meeting, it was noted by several that the Elk Grove Park District had nearly dropped out but decided to stay in the council for at least one more year as "a courtesy" to Elk Grove Village Pres. Jack Pahl.

Pahl is the chairman of COG. The village president was absent from Tuesday's board meeting, and Keith, a presidential aspirant in the April 15 municipal elections, was selected chairman pro tem.

At the end of the meeting, Keith handed the gavel to Village Clerk Eleanor Turner and made the motion.

Without elaboration, he simply said, "I move that Elk Grove Village follow the lead of Des Plaines and not renew our membership in the Council of Governments."

AFTER A brief pause, Gibson seconded the motion. Other board members appeared surprised at the action, but in the brief discussion that followed, Trustee George Coney noted, "We ought to review a lot of organizations we belong to."

The expressed concern was that little benefit is being derived from membership in COG.

Trustee Richard McGrenera said, "It's an area of concern for consideration, but since Pres. Pahl isn't here, I suggest we defer action."

"I'm not trying to sneak it through," Keith said, but he did want the matter discussed.

WITH THAT, Trustee Ronald Chernick made a motion to table Keith's move; it was seconded by McGrenera.

But voting or the tabling action didn't show the strength or weakness of Keith's position on the matter; the vote to table was unanimous.

A tabled motion must come up for action at the next regular board meeting, and presumably Pahl will be present to defend the council and rally supporting board members to accept his viewpoint.

Price for membership in the council was increased to $210 annually for Elk Grove Village, with the membership fee based on population.

The Des Plaines City Council voted 16-0 on Feb. 17 to discontinue membership. One alderman was absent.

REASONS cited by the council were duplication of services between the Northwest Municipal Conference and the council, as well as the increase in membership fee from $75 to $78.

Council members said they would have probably continued membership if the fee had not risen.

Elk Grove Village paid $75 last year, according to finance director Donald Eppley. He estimated the price on the council's new rate schedule of $1 per 100 population would place the new fee at between $190 and $210.

7-Hour Delay, Then Surgery

A 12-year-old Palatine boy is recovering well in Northwest Community Hospital after surgery last night for a severe leg cut, following an agonizing seven-hour delay before the operation could begin.

The delay was caused by hospital's inability to contact James Martin's parents in Miami for permission to perform surgery.

Permission for surgery is necessary for a boy under 21. That law caused the agonizing and painful delay last night.

JIM, WHO attends St. Thomas School in Palatine, spent about seven hours waiting for that permission to arrive.

When his parents were contacted at 6:35 p.m. the operation began immediately in the hospital's emergency room. Orthopedic surgeon Dr. Rollo J. Nesset sewed up the laceration, using a local anesthetic.

Jim received the injury while playing baseball at the school.

END OF LINE FOR CENTRAL?

Tomorrow just may be the end of the line for Central School. Described by one school official as "the millstone"

Candidate Responses In Herald

Even though Mount Prospect's two mayoral candidates will not be getting together for a debate this year, they will be meeting on the pages of the Mount Prospect Herald.

Beginning Monday, both Mayor Daniel Congreve and Trustee Robert Teichert will respond to a series of questions about the campaign, the village and their policies.

The answers to 10 questions will appear in daily issues of the all new Mount Prospect Herald.

First question: What role will the regular Republican organization of Elk Grove Township play in the campaign for village president?

around Dist. 57's neck, the junior high school is expected to be sold to the highest bidder tomorrow when sealed bids are opened by the school board members.

Through its stormy recent history, the school at Main and Central has been the target of groups aiming to abolish it as a learning institution or to preserve it for more generations of Mount Prospect students.

The school is blamed for indirectly effecting at least two Dist. 57 referendums which would have allowed more money to be spent by the district to improve other schools.

Backers of Central thought the referendums were a threat to the old school and defeated the issues on that basis.

With the opening of the bids tomorrow at noon, Dist. 57 officials hope to see enough money bid for the property to offset expansion plans at other district schools.

How much is the old school worth? In terms of just money, Dist. 57 thinks it is worth a great deal. Based on estimates of similar property in that part of Mount Prospect, the local school officials hope to get at least $570,000.

To this amount the district will add some $750,000 they hope to gain through a district referendum March 29. The two figures will give Dist. 57 a total of some $1.2 million with which to expand classrooms at Sunset Park, Gregory, and Lincoln schools.

Although the district is hoping for as much money from the property as possible, base bid on the parcel has been established at $4.10 per square foot.

The 114,000 square feet to be sold by the district would net the schools $570,000, using that formula. The bids require a $25,000 surety bond and so many bids probably will not arrive at the district until the day of the opening.

7-Hour Delay, Then Surgery

by TOM WELLMAN

A 12-year-old Palatine boy is recovering well in Northwest Community Hospital after surgery last night for a severe leg laceration, after an agonizing seven-hour delay before the operation could begin.

The delay was caused by the hospital's inability to contact James Martin's parents, vacationing in Miami, for permission for the operation.

Permission for surgery is necessary for a boy under 21 years of age. That law caused the agonizing and painful delay.

JIM, WHO ATTENDS St. Thomas school in Palatine, was operated on immediately after permission was received by long-distance telephone. Orthopedic surgeon Rollo J. Nesset sewed up the laceration, a V-shaped cut to the bone below the knee. He used a local anesthetic.

Jim came out of surgery at about 8 p.m. (the operation began at 7 p.m.). He spent the night in the hospital, and will probably spend most of today in the pediatric ward.

The drama began at noon, when Jim hooked his leg sliding into second base during a baseball game at St. Thomas. His leg was snagged by the hood holding the base to the ground. Jim was rushed to the hospital by a teacher. The boy did not lose consciousness.

Shortly afterward, the long-distance search for Mr. and Mrs. Martin started.

At 12:35, about five minutes after Jim had been admitted to the emergency room, the staff called the hotel in Miami where his parents were registered. They were not in the building. A message was left at the desk.

At about 3:30 p.m., it was decided that a decision on surgery would be necessary by 7 p.m.

Mr. Martin called at 6:35. He talked with doctors, the baby-sitter, and neighbors, who clustered into the clean and brightly-lit reception room off the emergency area.

Today, Jim is resting comfortably. It should not be long before he is back on the baseball diamond, and he'll have a scar to show his friends.

The hospital staff is resting easier, too. It could have been worse.

The doctors might have waited too long.

Or they might have been threatened with a legal suit for operating without permission.

Says Laws Ineffective

Legalized 'Weed' Urged

by GERRY De ZONNA

"Marijuana is illegal, and this is one of the reasons why it's such a big kick with students today. Our laws are doing the same thing for marijuana that Prohibition did for booze," said Tyler Clements, a commissioner on the Mount Prospect Youth Commission and candidate for the Mount Prospect Library Board.

Clements, a 1962 graduate of the University of Iowa with a degree in psychology, thinks it's time for communities to adopt a realistic approach to marijuana, its availability and usage.

Placing the same restrictions on the purchase of marijuana and alcohol could possibly decrease the weed's popularity and consequently its usage, he said.

"MARIJUANA is readily and easily available to anyone in this area, and its usage is widespread in our communities by high school students who have been greatly influenced by the acceptance of marijuana on the college campuses."

The commissioner explained that present federal laws governing the sale, possession, and use of marijuana are strict, but obviously ineffectual. Despite the law, marijuana is easily available to almost anyone, he said.

Prohibiting marijuana is not going to stop people from using it, Clements thinks. As long as marijuana is already so easily available, a change in federal restrictions could benefit the communities a lot more than people are willing to realize, he said.

"ORGANIZED crime is making a tremendous profit on illegal traffic in marijuana. It's an enterprising business venture. As long as organized crime can be assured of these profitable gains financially, they'll push marijuana regardless of the law."

By placing the same restrictions on marijuana as the federal government places on alcohol, the economy would benefit from the revenue rather than supporting the syndicate's treasury, according to Clements.

"As long as marijuana is being smoked, I see no reason why the government shouldn't benefit from the revenue gained by legal sale," he explained.

"I'm not pushing for an all-out campaign to legalize marijuana, and I don't necessarily think that the weed is great, nor do I approve of it."

"HOWEVER, I do think that realistic restrictions on the sale of marijuana, regulated by the government, would possibly curb its widespread use by eliminating the thrill in purchase and also benefit us economically."

Marijuana is not harmful to the user, according to Clements, because it is not habit-forming. However, it is possible that marijuana can lead to the use of harmful drugs, such as the amphetamines (speed) and LSD, he said.

"But then, alcohol can lead to alcoholism and cigarette smoking can lead to cancer. If a person needs a crutch in life, he'll find it regardless of the laws, whether it's drugs, alcohol, or anything else that is equally habit-forming and harmful."

IN THE commissioner's estimation, the biggest threat today is not marijuana but the widespread lack of knowledge among students and their parents about drugs and drug abuse.

He would like to see an educational program established in Mount Prospect to inform children as well as adults about drugs and the dangers involved in using them.

CHARRED DISPENSARY: Fire swept the main dispensary at the Arlington Heights Air Defense Site Thursday morning, gutting most of the one story quonset hut in which the medical facility was housed. Injured in the incident was Sgt. E-S Thomas Baumgartner, who cut his wrist trying to enter the Township Office: Home for Geriatrics?

Is township government to serve "the several communities of Mount Prospect, Arlington Heights, Des Plaines and Elk Grove Village, or continue to use our township offices as a headquarters and a home for the geriatric set?" That was the query posed by Jack Ivans, an Active Citizen's Party (ACP) candidate for Elk Grove Township collector, while calling for a change in Republican control of the township.

IVANS SAID, "These offices (are) occupied by a group whose families' names are synonymous with the early beginnings of the community."

He added that "their perpetual entrenchment and tenure of office is equivalent to a self-imposed seniority system."

Contending that this doesn't represent "democratic processes of the people new to the community," Ivans contended, "The only basis they can offer for their re-election is that to date they have at least functioned within the existing legislative framework of township government and nothing more."

Ivans would like to see "revitalized township government," with "more active involvement on the part of the citizenry."

He also proposed a citizens committee "relating to the elected in a para-political environment whereby involvement on the part of the citizenry is a constant rather than a quadrennial variable."

HE CHARGED, "To date there has not been a single statement" by the GOP, "not even a fragmentary indication as to what direction they would take or what they could offer the people of Elk Grove Township."

Why? Ivans added, "This is because they have nothing to offer. They have no platform. They prefer the status quo."

To the contrary, he said, the ACP "belittles the residents of the unincorporated areas are recipients of inadequate and duplicated county and township services, best served by local villages or municipal government."

To that end, the ACP advocates annexations to local government units.

This, Ivans said, could result in real estate tax cuts at the township level or greater channeling of funds into municipal governments to ease cost burdens there.

Beer License Case Taken to Chamber

In a continuing attempt to get a beer license for his restaurant, Howard Cooper, owner of Farmer Cooper's 303 E. Kensington, Mount Prospect, has appealed to the Mount Prospect Chamber of Commerce.

COOPER SAID the general membership of the chamber was willing to take on the project, and future work on the matter will be decided by the directors.

Cooper suffered a series of setbacks in his attempt to get a beer license for his restaurant when the village board voted the matter down and three appeals were also decided against him.

THE ACCEPTED INFLUENCE IN THE NORTHWEST SUBURBS

Rohlwing Called 'Capable, Farsighted' by Backers

Leader of Elk Grove Township government for the past 16 years, Supervisor William Rohlwing is described by his Republican Party backers as "capable and farsighted," and the man in charge of "one of the most efficient and best run township offices in the northwest suburbs."

Head of the GOP ticket seeking re-election, his supporters believe that "it has been Rohlwing's expert leadership and administrative abilities and tight budgetary controls which enable township officials to eliminate the need for a tax levy."

THERE HAS been no tax levied for the township or general assistance fund since the 1958-59 year, and there will not be a need for one this year.

Even so, officials say the township general assistance programs have been improved through "sound administration" and paid for entirely out of excess commissions, 2 per cent of all taxes paid locally to the township collector.

The township has been able to finish each of the last four years with excess funds. These were distributed as follows to township agencies: $346,000 to elementary School Districts 59, 57, 25 and 15 in the past four years; $20,000 to the Northwest Mental Health Program; $37,000 to the Clearbrook School for the Retarded; and $111,000 has been paid to local welfare recipients over the past four years. "These funds helped significantly to ease the tax burden on Elk Grove Township property owners," officials said.

ROHLWING IS the administrator of general assistance and as such, manages the welfare program for the township. Besides himself, he has another certified welfare worker on his staff who helps him with welfare cases. He received his certificate as a registered certified social worker from Illinois last year.

In the past four years, the township has provided assistance to 229 families. All recipients are interviewed and each application received Rohlwing's personal attention.

When a recipient is found eligible, there is no waiting period for assistance to begin. Another part of the program has resulted in the distribution of 45 tons of canned food, collected by local schools, to the needy at Christmas time. Toys, clothing and home made articles also have been distributed.

As head of the township board, Rohlwing is responsible for the newly formed youth committee, currently conducting a pilot program in basic vocational training for selected pupils in School Dist. 57, with the cooperation of School Dist. 214.

The committee has also been working to establish a close relationship between the Junior Achievement Program and local industry.

WITH THE board's approval, he retained an expert in civil defense to set up an emergency headquarters at town hall in case of disasters.

Plans are under way for purchasing a short wave radio, cots, blankets, first aid supplies, stretchers, and other materials. "All purchases will be paid out of excess commissions at no extra cost to the taxpayer," a spokesman said.

Rohlwing has increased the return on invested funds by 400 per cent in 1968 over 1964. Each successive year since 1964 has shown an increase over the preceding year.

He acts in the capacity of the township trustee and is treasurer in charge of township funds. He receives and pays out money for township expenses and is required to keep a record of all transactions.

The three township auditors are responsible for auditing his books.

Books Ease Search For Summer Jobs

Earlier this week, Prospect High School hosted a college night for Elk Grove, Forest View, and Prospect. Also, Hersey hosted one for Arlington, Wheeling, and Hersey. Spring is the time when upperclassmen in the area must begin to seriously consider a choice of college, if they haven't already done so.

Along with this, they become concerned with good paying and suitable summer jobs.

The Mount Prospect Public Library has 382 college catalogues which can circulate for a week — as well as many books suggesting summer program and employment leading up to a career.

The "Summer Employment Directory of the U.S." lists 80,000 summer jobs, by state. The high school student can choose jobs ranging from YMCA camps in Hawaii, to resorts, restaurants, and summer theaters in Illinois. Each job is listed with the dates of employment, address to write, salary, and job description.

NOT EVERYONE will be working this summer. Many students prefer to participate in some of the many college programs for high school students.

The 1969 issue of the book that lists all of these programs for the summer is the reference section of the library. Three indexes list the programs by state, subject, and school. Programs are offered in art, college prep, journalism, music, P.E., speech and drama.

The "Handbook of Job Facts" consists entirely of easy to read charts. It is excellent for previewing many different jobs at a glance.

THE CHARTS give the duties of the job, where the employment is, the number of workers, education and training required, special qualifications, ways to enter the field, chance of advancement, hours per week, pay and supply and demand.

"The Encyclopedia of Careers and Vocational Guidance," with two volumes, is useful after you have selected a job from the brief descriptions in the above book. This one tells about the opportunities, branches within the field, and has a glossary of terms at the end of each article.

"The Macmillan Job Guide to American Corporations" describes jobs with 260 top U.S. corporations in 50 states and overseas. These can be found by corporation, by college degree, and by home office.

THE LIBRARY has a magazine called "Occupational Outlook Quarterly," which is published by the U.S. Department of Labor. This can go out, and it emphasizes the future of many of the jobs available today.

This magazine also features some of the more unusual jobs, as in the article "Your Career Abroad a Deep Sea Merchant Ship."

The library also has a vocational shelf. One of the series included here is the "Occupational Guidance" series, which features different jobs and information about them.

Another series, featuring the future of specific occupations and your chances in them, is the "Occupational Outlook Report Series," which is really reprints from the "Occupational Outlook Handbook," found in the reference section.

THE ADVANTAGE of this series is that the pamphlets can be checked out, so you can take home exactly what you're interested in.

The library is open 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. on weekdays; 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Saturday; and 2 p.m. to 5 p.m. on Sunday. These guide books can save a lot of wasted effort in summer job hunting, as well as prepare the high school student now for his choice of a job tomorrow.

Sensitivity Training — Way to Gain Self-Esteem

Sensitivity training, according to Dr. Donald Thomas, Superintendent of schools for Dist. 59, is not presently being planned — to his knowledge — as part of the curriculum for district schools.

He said this during a meeting of the district's school community council, during a lecture aimed at defining "sensitivity training."

Ideally, Thomas said, it's a method for people to enhance, through group participation, their own values. Properly conducted, directed by qualified leaders, Thomas feels sensitivity training can be whole-some.

IT'S NOT therapy, but a mind-expanding experience, he indicated Thomas said the concept is ancient. Socrates used it in Greece when scholars were asked to explain their definition of many key words.

Sensitivity training, according to Thomas, is a process by which a person solidifies his own self-image, and realizes that his individuality is precious. Once the person is convinced that he is a valuable human commodity, he also realizes that every human life is equally valuable.

He also pointed out some pitfalls of sensitivity training. "In its violent extreme," Thomas said in response to a question from the audience, "it is the North Korean brand of brainwashing. They submitted prisoners to extreme physical and mental torture. Permitted no rest. Eventually, the prisoners were ready to say and believe anything the leader directed."

Thomas emphasized that such sensitivity training is not whole-some.

THE VALUE OF sensitivity training, Thomas said, is determined by the leader. He explained the "T-group" technique now in use by American industry, education, and some entrepreneurs he labels as quacks.

Basically, a group of volunteers meet under the direction of an allegedly qualified leader. They talk. Express their feelings about many things. Discussions get quite personal, people unburden their minds.

"Like hypnosis, it can be used for good purposes or quackery. A qualified person can use hypnosis to help a patient. Or he can get on a stage and put subjects into a trance for a profit," Thomas said.

"A SENSITIVITY training can operate either way, also. No certification is necessary — as for a doctor or psychiatrist — for a person to practice in sensitivity training sessions."

Thomas said there are certain guidelines that can indicate whether a sensitivity training program will be wholesome. The rationale behind the technique, he explained, is based on answering four questions:

1. Is man good or evil? If the practitioner feels man is evil, he will try to improve the subjects by emphasizing their failures, through self-punishment.
2. If the leader believes man is basically good, he will attempt to pinpoint the positive aspects of the individual, feeling that the person will reduce his weaknesses by basing his actions on his strengths.
3. CAN HUMAN behavior be modified by attacking and destroying his personal values? Thomas said that is the type of brainwashing used by Communists against American servicemen.
4. Another approach is the Freudian Theory that all males have an Oedipus complex. Human behavior can't be explained that simply, Thomas said.

3. Can man change his behavior or does he have to be influenced by an outside force? Negative sensitivity training practitioners, Thomas explained, feel that a man does not know good from evil unless he is told.

4. SHOULD BASIC behavioral changes be attempted early in life, or when a person is mature. Thomas feels it can be harmful to try and change the value structure of older people.

"I could make $1,200 a week, working weekends only, by conducting sensitivity training sessions," he said he has attended a workshop on the subject in Bethel, Maine. He does not feel that institution provides the type of training to prepare a session leader to operate on the positive side of the fence.

He offered some points to consider when evaluating a sensitivity training program. "Select a highly competent leader. Such a person needs at least a master's degree in psychology, a doctorate in philosophy, or a doctorate in divinity.

"No adult should enter such a session under any form of pressure. He should sincerely desire to attend, not be shamed into it by colleagues.

"AS SOON AS anyone in the group starts practicing psychology, get out. Sensitivity training is not therapy, but a way to gain self-esteem."

Thomas said participants in sensitivity training should not attend "marathon sessions," which can last 24, 48, or 56 hours. "Such sessions lead to fatigue, people drop their guard excessively and say things they regret later. This can lead to guilt, shame, and destroy any positive value the program might otherwise have."

A man asked, "Couldn't such sessions tend to reduce a group to a common denominator? Wouldn't persons with higher values tend to think they are trying too hard to be good, and lower their standards?"

Thomas answered, "It's like a classroom situation. It depends on the teacher. The better teacher will have a group, say four and five. When the term is over, he will have a wider spread — probably fours and tens. The poor teacher, on the other hand, will cause the group to be more nearly equal."

THOMAS SAID that any use of sensitivity training in schools, in his opinion, should be restricted to children with strong behavioral problems. He stresses that such programs are not to his knowledge, in Dist. 59's plans.

He reported, however, that about 30 faculty members are now involved in related sessions. Three of them are principals: Richard Jenness of Holmes; Harold Hoeksema of Grant Ward and Tom Powers of High Ridge Knolls.

With faculty members, they are attending weekend sensitivity training sessions conducted and funded by the Stone Foundation.

The programs cover two hour sessions, three times over the weekend. The leaders are psychologists employed by the Stone Foundation.

About 70 residents attended the meeting to hear Thomas' presentation. If any had strong objections to the concept, they remained silent.

"It's not something to be dished out to the student body, like a gym program," Thomas emphasized.

Elk Grove May Quit COG — Group's Second Loss in Year

A move to quit the Cook County Council of Governments (COG) was tabled for one week by Elk Grove Village board members Tuesday night.

It was spearheaded by Trustees Eugene Keith and James Gibson, but the decision to table the matter received unanimous support.

In making the motion to discontinue membership in the organization, Keith noted that the Des Plaines village board had unanimously agreed to drop from COG.

AFTER THE board meeting, it was noted by several that the Elk Grove Park District had nearly dropped out but decided to stay in the council for at least one more year as "a courtesy" to Elk Grove Village Pres. Jack Pahl.

Pahl is the chairman of COG. The village president was absent from Tuesday's board meeting, and Keith, a presidential aspirant in the April 15 municipal elections, was selected chairman pro tem.

At the end of the meeting, Keith handed the gavel to Village Clerk Eleanor Turner and made the motion.

Without elaboration, he simply said, "I move that Elk Grove Village follow the lead of Des Plaines and not renew our membership in the Council of Governments."

AFTER A brief pause, Gibson seconded the motion.

Other board members appeared surprised at the action, but in the brief discussion that followed, Trustee George Coney noted, "We ought to review a lot of organizations we belong to."

The expressed concern was that little benefit is being derived from membership in COG.

Trustee Richard McGreener said, "It's an area of concern for consideration, but since Pres. Pahl isn't here, I suggest we defer action."

"I'm not trying to sneak it through," Keith said, but he did want the matter discussed.

WITH THAT, Trustee Ronald Chernick made a motion to table Keith's move; it was seconded by McGreener.

But voting or the tabling action didn't show the strength or weakness of Keith's position on the matter; the vote to table was unanimous.

A tabling motion must come up for action at the next regular board meeting, and presumably Pahl will be present to defend the council and rally supporting board members to accept his viewpoint.

Price for membership in the council was increased to $210 annually for Elk Grove Village, with the membership fee based on population.

The Des Plaines City Council voted 16-0 on Feb. 17 to discontinue membership. One alderman was absent.

REASONS cited by the council were duplication of services between the Northwest Municipal Conference and the council, as well as the increase in membership fee from $75 to $578.

Council members said they would have probably continued membership if the fee had not risen.

Elk Grove Village paid $75 last year, according to finance director Donald Eppley. He estimated the price on the council's new rate schedule of $1 per 100 population would place the new fee at between $190 and $210.

Teacher Union Head To Speak at Harper

The president of the Cook County College Teachers Union will speak this morning at a Harper Junior College faculty meeting.

The union spokesman is the first of two nationally-affiliated teachers' organizations invited to speak to the community college faculty.

A representative of the National Education Association's National Faculty Association will appear at the college next week.

ARRANGEMENTS were made through the Faculty Senate, whose new president is Martin J. Ryan, an English teacher.

Ryan was elected unanimously at a senate meeting yesterday afternoon.

Other new officers elected were Tom McCabe, president pro tem, and Michael Bartos.

Group To Launch Study of Flooding

The Mount Prospect Drainage and Clean Streams committee established sub-committees to investigate and study suggested projects to control flooding problems in the community.

The committee divided the projects into two categories based on "external" and "internal" control. Internal projects are those which can be dealt with on the local level and are within the village government's jurisdiction.

EXTERNAL PROJECTS are those which will require the aid and cooperation of commissions outside the village's jurisdiction, such as neighboring municipal commissions with mutual flooding problems.

The detention and sub-surface storage of storm water was designated as an internal project which will be studied by the committee.

Committeemen Lloyd Schafer and Robert Hoffman will conduct an investigation on sewer maintenance, illegal sanitary sewer connections and the separation of sanitary and storm sewer systems in the village.

ACP Plots Unseating Of Hansen's Regime

by JAMES VESELY

There is an old saying among revolutionaries . . . "If we are to succeed, we must rub raw the sores of discontent."

That slogan may be a little strong to describe the campaign of the Active Citizens Party in their bid for Elk Grove township offices, but it is close enough.

The seven men and one woman who make up the ticket of the ACP have to be called revolutionists because they are trying to tackle the strongly entrenched forces of Carl Hansen's township GOP organization.

Many of the men who now hold offices in Elk Grove township government are descendants of the founders of this area. Some have been in office as long as 16 years. Their names are emblazoned on street signs and landmarks. They are the establishment.

PLOTTING against them is a relatively small group of candidates who act as if no one told them Elk Grove Township is Republican territory.

Three of those candidates met last week in the kitchen of a suburban home in south Mount Prospect. It was the home of Bill Robbins, campaign manager for the Active Citizens Party. Sitting around the table, Robbins and the candidates served instant coffee, donuts, and discontent.

One of the men reacted to a recent press release in which Carl Hansen had labeled the party as Democrats and a "wolf in sheep's clothing."

"I am very sorry if Hansen is disturbed that I am a Democrat," he said, but there are Democrats out here and there are going to be more as time goes on."

AND THERE is the crux of the matter.

Assuming that Chicago is strongly in the Democratic camp, the rest of Cook County is theoretically up for grabs.

Or at least it would be if it were not for the political makeup of township government. In addition to providing a source of local government, the township is also a base of power for one of the political parties. Township officers dispense money, a certain amount of patronage, and a good deal of influence. And right now, all that rests with the Republicans.

Local Democrats, such as those who are seeking the offices now so comfortably in the hands of the GOP, disclaim any ties with the Daley machine or with an organized move to rid

Hunger March Rally Slated

Preparations for a mammoth "March for Hunger" through the Northwest suburbs now include a rally and "new form of expression" planned for Sunday afternoon at the St. Peter Lutheran Church, 111 W. Olive, Arlington Heights.

According to Steven Sonnenberg, minister of youth of the church, Sunday's services will include a rally between 2 p.m. and 4 p.m. and a worship service between 5 p.m. and 6 p.m., which will include a performance by a rock band, a slide show and Beattle songs.

The "free expression service" will be held to create interest in the hunger march planned for Good Friday, April 4.

SONNENBERG said the march has received good response from churches and organizations in the area. Sponsors of the march now hope to attract between 5,000 and 10,000 persons, who will march between Park Ridge and Palatine.

Money, donated by sponsors for each mile walk, will be used for three projects: relief of hunger in Biafra, sponsorship of a community project in Ecuador, and funds for the local Northwest Opportunity Center in Rolling Meadows.

THE MARCHERS will meet at 9 a.m. on Good Friday near Maine Township East High School and will walk through the route of the Northwest Highway.

Sonnenberg said the marchers have their permits now and will be marching through the residential neighborhoods of each community. An initial idea to walk down Northwest Highway was abandoned for safety and traffic reasons.

Offer Youth Program on Golf Rules

The Mount Prospect Park District is offering a youth program on golf rules, regulations, and golf course etiquette to start April 12 at the Mount Prospect Community Center.

Boys and girls, 12 to 13-years-old are required to attend three of the four sessions in order to qualify for junior restricted golf passes. Golfers aged 14 and 16 who wish to qualify for a junior golf pass must attend one session.

The class schedule for junior restricted passes will be held at 1 and 2 p.m. on April 12, 19, 26 and May 3.

Classes for junior passes will be held at 3 p.m. on April 12 and 19.

Teichert Fund-Raise Lunch Set

A fund-raising luncheon, aimed at helping the candidacy of Robert Teichert for mayor of Mount Prospect, is being planned by two local women.

Mary Ellen Walker and Jean Partridge, both living on S. School Street, will act as chairwomen for a luncheon to be held in the Chestnut Room of the Mount Prospect Country Club, 12:30 p.m., March 27.

COST OF THE luncheon will be $5, according to Mrs. Walker and will include lunch and a meeting with Robert Teichert.

Mrs. Walker said about 160 women will be at the luncheon. Reservations can be made by calling Mrs. Walker at 392-7318 or Jean Partridge at 392-4918.

Vision Clinic Set March 18-20

The Mount Prospect Nurses' Club is sponsoring a free vision screening clinic to be held March 18-20 at the South Community Baptist Church in Mount Prospect.

Children 3½ to 5-years-old will be screened for the detection of "lazy eye blindness." The screening will be handled by state health trained technicians working with the Illinois Society for the Prevention of Blindness.

Parents who have not registered their preschool children for vision screening may call Mrs. Robert Cishek at 439-4214 or Mrs. James Jirak, 255-8969. There are screening appointments still open for March 19 and 20.

Lenten Series To Hear Laymen

Laymen from a young and innovative congregation will speak at the Wednesday Lenten series at the Community Presbyterian Church in Mount Prospect on Wednesday at 8 p.m.

These laymen are representatives from the Westminster Presbyterian Church in Des Plaines.

THEY WILL describe their experiences as members of a church that has experimented with unique worship forms, a system of "house churches," and a new approach to Christian education.

They were invited to speak at the Community Presbyterian Church due to the congregation's interest to develop a ministry of the laity.

Candidate Responses In Herald

Even though Mount Prospect's two mayoral candidates will not be getting together for a debate this year, they will be meeting on the pages of the Mount Prospect Herald.

Beginning Monday, both Mayor Daniel Congreve and Trustee Robert Teichert will respond to a series of questions about the campaign, the village and their policies.

The answers to 10 questions will appear in daily issues of the all new Mount Prospect Herald.

First question: What role will the regular Republican organization of Elk Grove Township play in the campaign for village president?

around Dist. 57's neck, the junior high school is expected to be sold to the highest bidder tomorrow when sealed bids are opened by the school board members.

Through its stormy recent history, the school at Main and Central has been the target of groups aiming to abolish it as a learning institution or to preserve it for more generations of Mount Prospect students.

The school is blamed for indirectly effecting at least two Dist. 57 referendums which would have allowed more money to be spent by the district to improve other schools.

Backers of Central thought the referendums were a threat to the old school and defeated the issues on that basis.

With the opening of the bids tomorrow at noon, Dist. 57 officials hope to see enough money bid for the property to offset expansion plans at other district schools.

How much is the old school worth? In terms of just money, Dist. 57 thinks it is worth a great deal. Based on estimates of similar property in that part of Mount Prospect, the local school officials hope to get at least $570,000.

To this amount the district will add some $750,000 they hope to gain through a district referendum March 29. The two figures will give Dist. 57 a total of some $1.2 million with which to expand classrooms at Sunset Park, Gregory, and Lincoln schools.

Although the district is hoping for as much money from the property as possible, base bid on the parcel has been established at $4.10 per square foot.

The 114,000 square feet to be sold by the district would net the schools $570,000, using that formula. The bids require a $25,000 surety bond and so many bids probably will not arrive at the district until the day of the opening.

7-Hour Delay, Then Surgery

by TOM WELLMAN

A 12-year-old Palatine boy is recovering well in Northwest Community Hospital after surgery last night for a severe leg laceration, after an agonizing seven-hour delay before the operation could begin.

The delay was caused by the hospital's inability to contact James Martin's parents, vacationing in Miami, for permission for the operation.

Permission for surgery is necessary for a boy under 21 years of age. That law caused the agonizing and painful delay.

JIM, WHO ATTENDS St. Thomas school in Palatine, was operated on immediately after permission was received by long distance telephone. Orthopedic surgeon Rollo J. Nesset sewed up the laceration, a V-shaped cut to the bone below the knee. He used a local anesthetic.

Jim came out of surgery at about 8 p.m. (the operation began at 7 p.m.). He spent the night in the hospital, and will probably spend most of today in the pediatric ward.

The drama began at noon, when Jim hooked his leg sliding into second base during a baseball game at St. Thomas. His leg was snagged by the hook holding the base to the ground. Jim was rushed to the hospital by a teacher. The boy did not lose consciousness.

Shortly afterward, the long distance search for Mr. and Mrs. Martin started.

At 12:35, about five minutes after Jim had been admitted to the emergency room, the staff called the hotel in Miami where his parents were registered. They were not in the building. A message was left at the desk.

At about 3:30 p.m., it was decided that a decision on surgery would be necessary by 7 p.m.

Mr. Martin called at 6:35. He talked with doctors, the baby-sitter, and neighbors, who clustered into the clean and brightly-lit reception room off the emergency area.

Today, Jim is resting comfortably. It should not be long before he is back on the baseball diamond, and he'll have a scar to show his friends.

The hospital staff is resting easier, too. It could have been worse.

The doctors might have waited too long.

Or they might have been threatened with a legal suit for operating without permission.

Says Laws Ineffective

Legalized 'Weed' Urged

by GERRY De ZONNA

"Marijuana is illegal and this is one of the reasons why it's such a big kick with students today. Our laws are doing the same thing for marijuana that Prohibition did for booze," said Tyler Clements, a commissioner on the Mount Prospect Youth Commission and candidate for the Mount Prospect Library Board.

Clements, a 1962 graduate of the University of Iowa with a degree in psychology, thinks it's time for communities to adopt a realistic approach to marijuana, its availability and usage.

Placing the same restrictions on the purchase of marijuana and alcohol could possibly decrease the weed's popularity and consequently its usage, he said.

"MARIJUANA is readily and easily available to anyone in this area, and its usage is widespread in our communities by high school students who have been greatly influenced by the acceptance of marijuana on the college campuses."

The commissioner explained that present federal laws governing the sale, possession, and use of marijuana are strict, but obviously ineffectual. Despite the law, marijuana is easily available to almost anyone, he said.

Prohibiting marijuana is not going to stop people from using it, Clements thinks. As long as marijuana is already so easily available, a change in federal restrictions could benefit the communities a lot more than people are willing to realize, he said.

"ORGANIZED crime is making a tremendous profit on illegal traffic in marijuana. It's an enterprising business venture. As long as organized crime can be assured of these profitable gains financially, they'll push marijuana regardless of the law."

By placing the same restrictions on marijuana as the federal government places on alcohol, the economy would benefit from the revenue rather than supporting the syndicate's treasury, according to Clements.

"As long as marijuana is being smoked, I see no reason why the government shouldn't benefit from the revenue gained by legal sale," he explained.

"I'm not pushing for an all-out campaign to legalize marijuana, and I don't necessarily think that the weed is great, nor do I approve of it."

"HOWEVER, I do think that realistic restrictions on the sale of marijuana, regulated by the government, would possibly curb its widespread use by eliminating the thrill in purchase and also benefit us economically."

Marijuana is not harmful to the user, according to Clements, because it is not habit-forming. However, it is possible that marijuana can lead to the use of harmful drugs, such as "LSD," he said.

"But then, alcohol can lead to alcoholism and cigarette smoking can lead to cancer. If a person needs a crutch in life, he'll find it regardless of the laws, whether it's drugs, alcohol, or anything else that is equally habit-forming and harmful."

IN THE commissioner's estimation, the biggest threat today is not marijuana but the widespread lack of knowledge among students and their parents about drugs and drug abuse.

He would like to see an educational program established in Mount Prospect to inform children as well as adults about drugs and the dangers involved in using them.

'Sleep-in' Set By Local Church

The Community Presbyterian Church in Mount Prospect is sponsoring a "sleep-in" for 65 junior high school students March 15.

According to Thomas Phillips, church pastor, the day's activities will begin at 4 p.m. with a bowling party and end with a worship service just before bedtime. The students will be "camping" in the Church and sleeping in sleeping bags.

CHARRED DISPENSARY. Fire swept the main dispensary at the Arlington Heights Air Defense Site Thursday morning, gutting most of the one-story quonset hut in which the medical facility was housed. Injured in the incident was Sgt. E.S. Thomas Baumgarner, who cut his wrist trying to enter the burning building. The blaze which struck about 1 a.m. was put out by the Arlington Heights fire department. Sgt. Baumgarner was treated at Northwest Community Hospital and then transferred to Great Lakes Naval Hospital.

Township Office: Home for Geriatrics?

Is township government to serve "the several communities of Mount Prospect, Arlington Heights, Des Plaines and Elk Grove Village, or continue to use our township offices as a headquarters and a home for the geriatric set?"

That was the query posed by Jack Evans, an Active Citizen's Party (ACP) candidate for Elk Grove Township collector while calling for a change in Republican control of the township.

IVANS SAID, "These offices (are) occupied by a group whose families' names are synonymous with the early beginnings of the community."

He added that "their perpetual entrenchment and tenure of office is equivalent to a self-imposed seniority system."

Contending that this doesn't represent "democratic processes that are representative of the people new to the community," Evans contended. The only basis they can offer for their re-election is that to date they have at least functioned within the existing legislative framework of township government and nothing more.

Evans would like to see "revitalized township government, with more active involvement on the part of the citizenry."

He also proposed a citizens committee "relating to the electoral in a para-political environment whereby involvement on the part of the citizenry is a constant rather than a quadrennial variable."

HE CHARGED, "To date there has not been a single statement" by the GOP, "not even a fragmentary indication as to what direction they would take or what they could offer the people of Elk Grove Township."

Why? Evans added, "This is because they have nothing to offer. They have no platform. They prefer the status quo."

To the contrary, he said, the ACP "belittles the residents of the unincorporated areas are recipient of inadequate and duplicated county and township services, best served by local villages or municipal government."

To that end the ACP advocates annexations to local government units.

This Evans said could result in real estate tax cuts at the township level or greater channelling of funds into municipal governments to ease cost burdens there.

Beer License Case Taken to Chamber

In a continuing attempt to get a beer license for his restaurant Howard Cooper, owner of Farmer Cooper's 303 E. Kensington, Mount Prospect, has appealed to the Mount Prospect Chamber of Commerce.

COOPER SAID the general membership of the chamber was willing to take on the project and future work on the matter will be decided by the directors.

Cooper suffered a series of setbacks in his attempt to get a beer license for his restaurant when the village board voted the matter down and three appeals were also decided against him.

A $75,000 FIRE swept the post dispensary at the Arlington Heights Air Defense Site shortly after midnight Thursday morning destroying the contents of the one-story metal hut. The only injury came when Sgt. E.S. Thomas Baumgartner cut his wrist as he entered the building to determine whether anyone was inside. The Arlington Heights Fire Department put out the blaze and the medical records of all base personnel were saved.

Arlington Heights Fire Chief Harvey Carothers said the fire was caused by faulty wiring in X-Ray equipment. A man on duty in the building awoke to the smell of smoke and turned in the alarm. Sgt. Baumgartner was taken to Great Lakes Naval Hospital where he is in good condition.

Hospital Drama

7-HOUR DELAY, THEN SURGERY

by TOM WELLMAN

A 12-year-old Palatine boy is recovering well in Northwest Community Hospital after surgery last night for a severe leg laceration, after an agonizing seven-hour delay before the operation could begin.

The delay was caused by the hospital's inability to contact James Martin's parents, vacationing in Miami, for permission for the operation.

Permission for surgery is necessary for a boy under 21 years of age. That law caused the agonizing and painful delay.

JIM, WHO ATTENDS St. Thomas school in Palatine, was operated on immediately after permission was received by long-distance telephone. Orthopedic surgeon Rollo J. Nesset sewed up the laceration, a V-shaped cut to the bone below the knee. He used a local anesthetic.

Jim came out of surgery at about 8 p.m. (the operation began at 7 p.m.). He spent the night in the hospital, and will probably spend most of today in the pediatric ward.

The drama began at noon, when Jim hooked his leg sliding into second base during a baseball game at St. Thomas. His leg was snapped by the hook holding the base to the ground.

Jim was rushed to the hospital by a teacher. The boy did not lose consciousness.

Shortly afterward, the long-distance search for Mr. and Mrs. Martin started.

At 12:35, about five minutes after Jim had been admitted to the emergency room, the staff called the hotel in Miami where his parents were registered. They were not in the building. A message was left at the desk.

At about 3:30 p.m., it was decided that a decision on surgery would be necessary by 7 p.m. At that time the chief surgeon would have attempted to find a surgeon willing to operate without parental approval — which is illegal.

In life-or-death cases, there is no delay; surgery is often immediate. In less serious cases, however, surgeons prefer to wait as long as possible before operating, hoping permission arrives before the patient becomes critically ill.

HOWEVER, AS THE time slips away, the danger of permanent damage can increase. The 7 p.m. deadline for Jim was set to avoid waiting, and thus increasing the danger of infection or muscle damage.

Jim was in pain until the surgery began. The wound had been cleaned, but he had not been given any anesthetic.

Mr. Martin called at 6:35. He talked with doctors, the baby-sitter, and neighbors, who clustered into the clean and brightly-lit reception room off the emergency area.

Today, Jim is resting comfortably. It should not be long before he is back on the baseball diamond, and he'll have a scar to show his friends.

The hospital staff is resting easier, too. It could have been worse.

The doctors might have waited too long. Or they might have been threatened with a legal suit for operating without permission.

Joint Study On Rd. Safety

Members of the School District Board of Education last night that Arlington Heights Road affects student safety in many areas and appointed an official representative to meet with other boards and agencies to iron out traffic safety problems.

James Penn was named to represent the board in this area.

Termining the action "a very important move," School Supt. Dr. Donald Strong recommended that the district sponsor a series of meetings with village, township, county and state officials.

Dunton School Principal Chester Raasch met with village trustees and the Safety Committee previously concerning the safety of children attending the school.

THE STATE HAS said there will be a traffic signal at White Oak Street, one block south of Cypress Street. But Raasch has said, "This solution does not look good" as there are no sidewalks in the area.

Board members and school officials are also concerned about student safety problems on North Arlington Heights Road, particularly when Rand Junior High School opens in September.

A recent decrease to 45 miles per hour between Rand and Dundee roads was termed unsatisfactory by Strong.

Penn said he intends to contact school principals to learn the particular safety problems of each school.

Edwards Backs Park Board

(The following is the third article in a series of interviews with the four candidates for the Arlington Heights Park Board.)

John "Jack" Edwards, the only incumbent candidate for the Arlington Heights Park Board, defends the park board against accusations of sluggishness by saying, "I don't think we're dragging our feet."

The board has been accused of being too slow in construction of parks approved by last summer's referendum.

Edwards said the board has planned the development of the nine parks to get as much as they can out of them. He said other park districts take longer to get building underway than Arlington's board has.

An Arlington Heights resident for eight years, Edwards has served on the board since his election in 1963 and served as president of the board during the 1965-66 term. He is the park district's representative on the planning commission. He resides at 319 Ivy Lane and has four children, ages 6 through 15.

EDWARDS works for U. S. Gypsum where he is product manager of classroom materials and systems. The 40-year-old park board member was graduated from the University of Wisconsin with a B.S. degree in civil engineering.

As a present board member, Edwards said the district has been strong in the area of acquiring open land. He said the recreation programs have been adequate with the facilities available.

"I think Tom Thornton (park director) has done a terrific job in developing the facilities we have," he said.

"I think some of the programs such as day school for handicapped children and the Over 50 Club have been very innovative," Edwards said.

The proposed new swimming pools are to have open areas of grass near the pools for swimmers to lie on. "There's nothing like it in the state of Illinois," Edwards said.

AN INDOOR skating rink could be put to good use, he said. "We now only have 25 to 30 days of skating time with the outdoor rinks," he said.

Cooperation with schools in lighting tennis courts will make them available to more people, Edwards said. "However, with all the tennis players in this town, I don't know if we could ever build enough courts."

Referring to declarations by other park board candidates that park district staff salaries should be raised, Edwards said, "I think we are competitive with districts in this general area. I think this park district has a lot more to offer, especially with the new facilities."

Park Board meetings could be speeded up "if the agenda were put out and everyone did their homework. Some evenings have dragged out but things need to be discussed," Edwards said.

"THE TIME that is spent there is up to the board members. The important thing is that we have reached conclusions and taken action," he said.

Edwards said that the board should not initiate recreation programs. "You have experts for that. We shouldn't become involved unless there is a definite lack," he said.

The park district should complete programs that are in the works now and get the buildings finished. "We should develop staff for the new facilities and be prepared for the tremendous growth which will take place," he said.

Asked why people should vote for him, Edwards said, "I think I have the experience on the board. I've gone through the period of growth, seen the problems and can help overcome them."

Rally Set Sunday For Hunger March

Preparations for a mammoth "March for Hunger" through the Northwest suburbs now include a rally and "new form of expression" planned for Sunday afternoon at the St. Peter Lutheran Church, 111 W. Olive, Arlington Heights.

According to Steven Sonnenberg, minister of youth of the church, Sunday's services will include a rally between 2 p.m. and 4 p.m. and a worship service between 5 p.m. and 6 p.m., which will include a performance by a rock band, a slide show and Beattle songs.

The "free expression service" will be held to create interest in the hunger march planned for Good Friday, April 4.

SONNENBERG said the march has received good response from churches and organizations in the area. Sponsors of the march now hope to attract between 5,000 and 10,000 persons, who will march between Park Ridge and Palatine.

More, donated by sponsors for each mile walk, will be used for three projects: relief of hunger in Biafra, sponsorship of a community project in Ecuador, and funds for the local Northwest Opportunity Center in Rolling Meadows.

THE MARCHERS will meet at 9 a.m. on Good Friday near Maine Township East High School and will walk through the suburbs, roughly following the route of the Northwest Highway.

Sonnenberg said the marchers have their permits now and will be marching through the residential neighborhoods of each community. An initial idea to walk down Northwest Highway was abandoned for safety and traffic reasons.

Chamber To Pay Marcher

Rolling Meadows Chamber of Commerce will pay a marcher $5 per mile for the April 4 Hike for Hunger.

The sponsorship was voted by the directors at their regular luncheon meeting Tuesday.

THE HIKE, from Park Ridge northwest to Palatine and then on to Rolling Meadows, is to raise funds for three projects: the people of Biafra, agricultural aid to Ecuador, and the Northwest Opportunity Center which maintains an office in Rolling Meadows.

The Good Friday march was originated by young people at St. Paul Lutheran Church in Mount Prospect under the guidance of their youth leader, David Werham.

Registration for the hike will be accepted until March 28.

Solve Mini-Quarrel Over Trash Pick-Up

A controversy over the cost of trash pickup for merchants in Arlington Heights apparently has been resolved, according to the participants in the mini-quarrel.

Harold Bell, executive secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, told The Herald yesterday afternoon that the dispute, concerning the cost of trash and garbage pickup by Laseke Disposal Co., was "water over the dam."

The controversy arose when several merchants complained to the chamber that they were faced by "very large percentage increases in charges" for garbage and trash pickups.

The chamber's Triangle Newsletter released Wednesday, stated that the sudden increase might be due to the fact that past charges were far below the $3.20 per yard maximum set by the village or that the present measurement of garbage was being overestimated.

THE NEWSLETTER also stated that a suggestion had been made that payment of bills be seemed out of line should be held up.

However, Laseke, Bell, and asst. village manager John Coste said Thursday that the problem had been blown out of proportion.

Albert Bruder, general manager of Laseke, explained that merchants are never charged the maximum rate of $3.20 per cubic yard.

Bruder said that recently the size of commercial pickups have increased, as has the cost of pickups. In individual cases, Laseke is seeking price increases up to $2.50 or $2.75.

WHEN MERCHANTS receive the bill, however, they don't realize that an increased price per yard can be compounded by an increase in the amount of garbage produced, Bruder said.

So, Laseke has negotiated in each case, and according to Bell and Coste, the problem has been resolved. Coste stressed that the entire problem was caused by a lack of communication between the involved parties.

However, Harold Laseke Sr., owner of the scavenger service, said he was still mad about the controversy.

"I demand an apology for holding up our money (the chamber had suggested the merchants withhold payment). I'll have to seek legal action," Laseke said that his drivers were not overestimating the amount of garbage. Most of the drivers have worked 15 or 20 years for the company and are quite skilled at determining garbage yardage, he said.

Angry Zeller Raps The Village Caucus

Becoming increasingly angry as he spoke, independent village president candidate Charles Zeller last night accused the village Caucus Party and the trustees it has elected of violating the freedom of speech of Arlington Heights residents.

Pointing out that he had lost a battle against sidewalks in his section of the village, Zeller presented himself to a meeting of Stonegate residents as a champion of their own cause against the concrete ribbons.

After listing the programs that the village plans to embark upon and noting further that the country is engaged in a war, Zeller complained, "It's about time some local leaders learned to postpone unnecessary improvements."

This drew one loud clap of applause, rather than Zeller who then assailed the Stonegate timekeeper for asking that he conclude his speech.

Trustee John Walsh, Caucus candidate for the village presidency refused to even attempt replying to the points raised by Zeller and instead reviewed his own experience in government and his plans for improving it.

The Stonegate meeting, held at Miner Junior High School, featured township, park board and village board candidates in the April 1 election.

Community Council Votes to Disband

The Arlington Heights Community Council has voted to disband itself.

Directors of the group, which served as a discussion group for various village projects, voted last week to disband and to present its $150 treasury to the United Fund.

Presentation of the check will be made by Anthony Tomaso, first president of the council, to James Mason, executive director of the United Fund, at 11 a.m. tomorrow at the Bank and Trust Co. of Arlington Heights, 909 E. Kensington.

UNITED Fund's predecessor, Combined Appeal, was started in Arlington Heights under the sponsorship of the Community Council.

In the past, the council has served as a forum for discussions of juvenile delinquency, gun registration, and village trustee candidates. It gained support from community organizations across Arlington Heights.

Don't Confuse Cankers With Cold Sores

Cold sores are on the outside of the lips and are caused by a virus. Canker sores are on the inside of the mouth and not on the gums.

The cause of canker sores is not definitely certain. A form of strep germ has been found in such ulcers. Some experts blame injury to the tissues, caused by a tooth brush or hard foods. Others blame them on an allergic reaction. If you are often troubled by canker sores consult a physician.

MOST UNLIKELY Rumor and only rumor has it that there is a municipally sponsored plan afoot to condemn the land at Arlington Park to make way for a possible northwest senior college. Can't you just see the bulldozers now, chewing into the multimillion dollar grandstand? Can't you see the conversion of the new hotel into a highrise dormitory? Can't you see the Horse Shoe Club turned into a faculty dining room? Any visionaries at Gulf and Western?

VOTER TURNOUT for the April 1 elections should be a light one according to the estimates of Village Clerk Jeanne Novotny. Will this help or hurt her own bid for reelection? She says she can't tell, but hopes the regulars who do the voting will retain some brand name loyalty.

COMMCO COLLAPSE—After wandering for two years in the desert of uncertainty, COMMCO, the community council group that tried to present programs of village-wide interest, finally collapsed of its own inertia and citizen disinterest. There is some talk now of setting up a forum committee that would not try to present regular programs but that would arrange public debate and review of important issues only as they occur.

FOR WANT of a project, the police department almost refused a $4.475 grant (matching funds needed) for a traffic safety program. Lt. Jack Aldrich said Monday he wasn't sure the department could find a program that needed the money. However, yesterday he said the funds will be channeled into traffic safety training, subject to Chief L. W. Calderwood's approval.

PUBLIC SAFETY Comr. Arnold Siegel is outraged by an old, old problem: Palatine Road, Siegel says children must walk along the 35 m.p.h. frontage road just east of Windsor Drive to reach McArthur Junior High. If it's muddy, they walk in the street, and cars dodge them. Perhaps someday...

UNCERTAIN: Retiring Park District Comr. Douglas Thompson told the board Tuesday night he would be out of town for the next meeting in March. "Since this is my last meeting, I would like to say I have enjoyed working with you fellows for the last nine-and-a-half years," he said. Park Director Thomas Thornton asked Thompson where he would be during April. "I assumed that after the April 1 election I was through," Thompson said. Board members told him the new commissioners will not take office until May 1. "You mean I'll have to give my farewell speech again?" Thompson asked. "Yes, and let's hope you do better next time," someone said.

LOOK, MA! Arlington Heights Park Board was told Tuesday night that a new truck was needed for the maintenance crew. The old truck was described as a "hazard on the highways." Richard Julison, head of maintenance, said "Last week one of the men was driving it, and the steering wheel came off."

HAPPY ANNIVERSARY: Village Manager L. A. "Rudy" Hanson celebrated his 25th wedding anniversary on Tuesday. Hanson, who seldom allows sentiment into his office, was quite happy about the occasion.

THE VIRUS CRISIS, which kept 12 students out of one class at Dryden School last week and 9 home from a South Junior High School room, continues to rage throughout the village. One mother visited three local stores yesterday before locating a box of baby aspirin.

VILLAGE ABSENTEEMINEDNESS may be on the decrease — at least for large objects. Funds received from library patrons for lost books have dropped from $615 last year to $572 for the current year. Residents still have difficulty holding on to library cards though — the amount received in this category increased from $478 to $856.

BUT CAN THEY BE FIRED? Will citizens volunteering to assist the library board with their referendum be put on the payroll? Board members went into executive session Tuesday to consider possible citizens committee appointments. The Illinois open meeting law provides that closed meetings may be held only when discussions relating to appointments or dismissals of employees or officers are under consideration.

Citizens Group Urges 'Yes' Vote

The Prospect Heights Citizens Committee has concluded a "yes" vote is urgently needed in the April 12 referendum.

The referendum will ask for voter approval of a 21-cent tax increase which will increase the school tax on homes in the district from $1.60 to $1.81 and boost district revenues $50,000 yearly.

The increased tax will amount to approximately $21 on a home with an assessed valuation of $10,000.

"We wanted to investigate every angle," Citizens Committee Chairman Larry Purcell told an audience of the Prospect Heights PTA Tuesday night.

"That is the reason the Citizens Committee was formed, to find out if this referendum is really necessary," he said.

"ALMOST ALL organizations in the area," Purcell continued, "attended this first meeting. Questions were asked and the answers were to be investigated and given at the next meeting. We formed various committees to investigate different areas."

"Last Thursday we had the information we needed," Purcell said, "this referendum is necessary."

"The cost of running schools goes up every year... almost anything you can think of goes up."

"Cigarettes, cars and houses are the solid, you-can-touch-em type things," Purcell said. "What about the things you can't see, feel or hear? What about your young son's spelling or that pretty little daughter's arithmetic? You are buying knowledge for your children and the cost of gaining knowledge is going up."

"Could your son's teacher send home a bill saying the package of spelling has gone up 8 cents this year?"

"THE SCHOOL needs the money to maintain its position,"

Purcell said, "some people oppose this, but let me remind you when a person tells you there are unnecessary frills... don't believe them until you have had the facts. A fact sheet will be mailed to each and everyone in the district."

"Study them," Purcell continued, "and you will know why you are urged to vote 'YES' on April 12th."

Candidates in Dist. 23 Field Voter Questions

Independent Dist. 23 school board candidate Jo Ellen Claws was taken to task for her opposition to a state-financed school building when she appeared before a citizens group Tuesday night.

Donald Colby, 38 Glenbrook Drive, Prospect Heights, challenged Mrs. Claws' contention that she would do her best for the school district if elected.

"How can you justify the fact that you opposed a 17-room school when you have admitted asking for a reduction to 12 rooms?" Colby asked.

MRS. CLAWS contended that Dist. 23 had not filed a proper application for the state-financed school, and she opposed the form of the application.

She has also stated that she thought the proposed school site was in the wrong place, and believes that other schools in the state needed aid more desperately than Dist. 23.

Colby insists the application for aid was accurate.

"THE application stated that we were not to include the five non-instructional classrooms in our statement," he said.

Mrs. Claws insisted "you were all misled by Louis Pansino." Pansino was the former superintendent of the district.

IN HIS presentation, Krinsky said, "I have lived in and am a member of the Arlington Vista Homeowners Association. I have an extreme desire to be on this board."

During the forum, candidates Alan Krinsky, a scrap metal dealer; John Stull, a real estate broker; and Mrs. Claws, ticked-off their qualifications for the three open positions on the board.

"I was chosen to serve on the Republican nominating committee for Wheeling Township offices, and I am Cub master of Pack 338."

"I make it my business to know what is going on in this area," Stull said. "All the activities I am involved in take a lot of cooperation on my wife's part, and she is behind me all the way. We have to think about the future. There are methods undiscovered — and there are some people with the time. I have the time and I can find these methods."

QUESTIONS of the candidates was invited, and on being asked, "What part of the school board function would you fit best?" Krinsky replied, "I have an extensive background in accounting, but I feel I can do whatever has to be done."

Mrs. Claws was asked, "Why didn't you go thru the caucus?" She replied, "I think the caucus is as outdated as the horse and buggy. It has outlived its usefulness. I think the people should make their own choice."

"Not being a parent yourself, Mr. Stull, a member of the audience asked, 'do you understand the problems of a parent?'"

"I HAVE 48 boys in my Scout pack. I shall become a parent in July. I have always been involved in activities for children," Stull replied. "The children I have the most success with are in situations where there is parent participation. I am aware of the problems and I think I am qualified to deal with them."

Elk Grove May Quit COG — Group's Second Loss in Year

A move to quit the Cook County Council of Governments (COG) was tabled for one week by Elk Grove Village board members Tuesday night.

It was spearheaded by Trustees Eugene Keith and James Gibson, but the decision to table the matter received unanimous support.

In making the motion to discontinue membership in the organization, Keith noted that the Des Plaines village board had unanimously agreed to drop from COG.

AFTER THE board meeting, it was noted by several that the Elk Grove Park District had nearly dropped out but decided to stay in the council for at least one more year as "a courtesy" to Elk Grove Village Pres. Jack Pahl.

Pahl is the chairman of COG. The village president was absent from Tuesday's board meeting, and Keith, a presidential aspirant in the April 15 municipal elections, was selected chairman pro tem.

At the end of the meeting, Keith handed the gavel to Village Clerk Eleanor Turner and made the motion.

Without elaboration, he simply said, "I move that Elk Grove Village follow the lead of Des Plaines and not renew our membership in the Council of Governments."

AFTER A brief pause, Gibson seconded the motion.

Other board members appeared surprised at the action, but in the brief discussion that followed, Trustee George Conway noted, "We ought to review a lot of organizations we belong to."

The expressed concern was that little benefit is being derived from membership in COG.

Trustee Richard McGrenera said, "It's an area of concern for consideration, but since Pres. Pahl isn't here, I suggest we defer action."

"I'm not trying to sneak it through," Keith said, but he did want the matter discussed.

WITH THAT, Trustee Ronald Chernick made a motion to table Keith's move; it was seconded by McGrenera.

But voting on the tabling action didn't show the strength or weakness of Keith's position on the matter; the vote to table was unanimous.

A tabling motion must come up for action at the next regular board meeting, and presumably Pahl will be present to defend the council and rally supporting board members to accept his viewpoint.

Price for membership in the council was increased to $210 annually for Elk Grove Village, with the membership fee based on population.

The Des Plaines City Council voted 16-0 on Feb. 17 to discontinue membership. One alderman was absent.

REASONS cited by the council were duplication of services between the Northwest Municipal Conference and the council, as well as the increase in membership fee from $75 to $78.

Council members said they would have probably continued membership if the fee had not risen.

Elk Grove Village paid $7 last year, according to financial director Donald Eppley. He estimated the price on the council new rate schedule of $1 per population would place the fee at between $190 and $210.

'Yes' Vote Urged To Meet Growth

Arlington Heights School Dist. 25 will seek voter approval tomorrow for a three-year construction program. A "yes" vote on the proposal is merited.

Approval of the referendum would ease overcrowding at Thomas and Miner junior high schools and provide elementary classrooms for children moving into new subdivisions.

The building proposal would also give the district an opportunity to shuffle or combine special programs to provide room for some parochial school students if a private facility is forced to partially or completely eliminate its programs.

Saturday's referendum would authorize the district to issue bonds for $2,385,000 over a three-year period to finance the construction plan. As the district is already at its maximum bonding level, the proposal would not raise taxes for residents, but would keep the rate for bonds and interest at the current level for an additional three-to four-year period.

If the district receives voter permission to proceed, negotiations for a five-classroom addition to Rand Junior High School, scheduled to open in September, could be made immediately, and probably at better cost, while builders are still on the site. An additional 12 rooms are scheduled for the school by September, 1971.

A new elementary facility on the Rand property is included in the plan. The district, which worked with village officials in projecting future population growth, estimates that about 700 new homes and apartment units will be built in the next four to seven years in the area north of Rand Road.

If the dwellings produce elementary children at the usual rate, some 525 K-5 students will join the school system. Nearby Ivy Hill School already faces a shortage of two to four rooms next year.

Extra classrooms for Dunton and Olive schools, both now housing children and both with additional building space in their areas, are scheduled next year.

As the school population grows, the need for more special education classes will most likely keep pace. Many programs, such as those for children with learning disabilities, are limited by law to 10 students and cannot be overcrowded.

School officials have met with parochial school representatives in the community and are keeping abreast of current private school problems.

The Board of Education of St. James Catholic Church officially endorsed the referendum, and is urging parishioners to cast a "yes" vote to maintain top-quality facilities for all community children.

We believe the schools need the additional 47 classrooms. The district is planning to adequately meet the educational needs of district pupils.

Sensitivity Training — Way to Gain Self-Esteem

Sensitivity training, according to Dr. Donald Thomas, Superintendent of schools for Dist. 59, is not presently being planned — to his knowledge — as part of the curriculum for district schools.

He said this during a meeting of the district's school community council, during a lecture aimed at defining "sensitivity training."

Ideally, Thomas said, it's a method for people to enhance, through group participation, their own values. Properly conducted, directed by qualified leaders, Thomas feels sensitivity training can be wholesome.

IT'S NOT therapy, but a mind expanding experience, he indicated. Thomas said the concept is ancient: Socrates used it in Greece when scholars were asked to explain their definition of many key words.

Sensitivity training, according to Thomas, is a process by which a person solidifies his own self-image, and realizes that his individuality is precious. Once the person is convinced that he is a valuable human commodity, he also realizes that every human life is equally valuable.

He also pointed out some pitfalls of sensitivity training. "In its violent extreme," Thomas said in response to a question from the audience, "it is the North Korean brand of brainwashing. They submitted prisoners to extreme physical and mental torture. Permitted no rest. Eventually, the prisoners were ready to say and believe anything the 'leader' directed."

Thomas emphasized that such sensitivity training is not wholesome.

THE VALUE OF sensitivity training, Thomas said, is determined by the leader. He explained the "T-group" technique now in use by American industry, education, and some entrepreneurs he labels as quacks.

Basically, a group of volunteers meet under the direction of an allegedly qualified leader. They talk. Express their feelings about many things. Discussions get quite personal, people unburden their minds.

"Like hypnosis, it can be used for good purposes or quackery. A qualified person can use hypnosis to help a patient. Or he can get on a stage and put subjects into a trance for a profit," Thomas said.

A SENSITIVITY training can operate either way, also. No certification is necessary — as for a doctor or psychiatrist — for a person to practice in sensitivity training sessions."

Thomas said there are certain guidelines that can indicate whether a sensitivity training program will be wholesome. The rationale behind the technique, he explained, is based on answering four questions:

1. Is man good or evil? If the practitioner feels man is evil, he will try to improve the subjects by emphasizing their failures, through self-punishment.

If the leader believes man is basically good, he will attempt to pinpoint the positive aspects of the individual, feeling that the person will reduce his weaknesses by basing his actions on his strengths.

2. CAN HUMAN behavior be modified by attacking and destroying his personal values? Thomas said that is the type of brainwashing used by Communists against American servicemen.

Another approach is the Freudian Theory that all males have an Oedipus complex. Human behavior can't be explained that simply, Thomas said.

3. Can man change his behavior or does he have to be influenced by an outside force? Negative sensitivity training practitioners, Thomas explained, feel that a man does not know good from evil unless he is told.

4. SHOULD BASIC behavioral changes be attempted early in life, or when a person is mature. Thomas feels it can be harmful to try and change the value structure of older people.

"I could make $1,200 a week, working weekends only, by conducting sensitivity training sessions," he said he has attended a workshop on the subject in Bethel, Maine. He does not feel that institution provides the type of training to prepare a session leader to operate on the positive side of the fence.

He offered some points to consider when evaluating a sensitivity training program. "Select a highly competent leader. Such a person needs at least a master's degree in psychology, a doctorate in philosophy, or a doctorate in divinity."

"No adult should enter such a session under any form of pressure. He should sincerely desire to attend, not be shamed into it by colleagues."

"AS SOON AS anyone in the group starts practicing psychology, get out. Sensitivity training is not therapy, but a way to gain self-esteem."

Thomas said participants in sensitivity training should not attend "marathon sessions," which can last 24, 48, or 56 hours. "Such sessions lead to fatigue, people drop their guard excessively and say things they regret later. This can lead to guilt, shame, and destroy any positive value the program might otherwise have."

A man asked, "Couldn't such sessions tend to reduce a group to a common denominator? Wouldn't persons with higher values tend to think they are trying too hard to be good, and lower their standards?"

Thomas answered, "It's like a classroom situation. It depends on the teacher. The better teacher will have a group, say four and five. When the term is over, he will have a wider spread — probably fours and tens. The poor teacher, on the other hand, will cause the group to be more nearly equal."

THOMAS SAID that any use of sensitivity training in schools, in his opinion, should be restricted to children with strong behavioral problems. He stresses that such programs are not to his knowledge, in Dist. 59's plans.

He reported, however, that about 30 faculty members are now involved in related sessions. Three of them are principals: Richard Jenness of Holmes; Harold Hoeksema of Grant Ward and Tom Powers of High Ridge Knolls.

With faculty members, they are attending weekend sensitivity training sessions conducted and funded by the Stone Foundation.

The programs cover two hour sessions, three times over the weekend. The leaders are psychologists employed by the Stone Foundation.

About 70 residents attended the meeting to hear Thomas' presentation. If any had strong objections to the concept, they remained silent.

"It's not something to be doled out to the student body, like a gym program," Thomas emphasized.

Teacher Union Head To Speak at Harper

The president of the Cook County Teachers Union will speak this morning at a Harper Junior College faculty meeting.

The union spokesman is the first of two nationally-affiliated teachers' organizations invited to speak to the community college faculty.

A representative of the National Education Association's National Faculty Association will appear at the college next week.

ARRANGEMENTS were made through the Faculty Senate, whose new president is Martin J. Ryan, an English teacher.

Ryan was elected unanimously at a senate meeting yesterday afternoon.

Other new officers elected were Tom McCabe, president pro tem, and Michael Bartos, secretary.

Bartos is also a member of the English department and McCabe is a mathematics teacher.

Ryan succeeds John Birkholz, who served a one-year term.

Birkholz, named last week as assistant dean of transfer programs, resigned Wednesday as a senate member.

One of the first duties of the new senate officers will be to arrange for a special election to fill Birkholz' at-large senate seat.

Zeller Lashes At 'Chaos Party'

Charles Zeller, independent candidate for the presidency of Arlington Heights, has lashed out at the Caucus Party, which he calls the "Chaos Party."

Zeller charged that the party "has broken faith with the villagers time and time again and has denied redress and has been guilty of some almost infamous atrocities in connection with sewers and the laying of roads."

HE SAID excessive assessments and tree removal without notice are only two of the problems. If elected, he promises to "endeavor to have these conditions remedied and try to have such cases reduced to a minimum or completely eliminated."

He also stated: "All these cases have filled me to the brim, and they lead me to the conclusion that the time for a change is here, since we cannot tolerate these conditions further."

Zeller also charges that Caucus members "either cannot do what they promise, they do not know how, or they do not find the time or they purposely neglect to act and sit on their hands."

Near-Tragedy Arrest Made

A 22-year-old Des Plaines man has been arrested following an incident in which Officer Gene Deck of the Arlington Heights police department was almost run down.

Stephen Brennan, 22, of 625 Howard, Des Plaines, turned himself in Wednesday morning to the Arlington Heights police, after the police had contacted his mother.

Brennan was charged with disobeying railroad gates and attempting to elude police officers. He was released on his driver's license.

On Monday evening at 6:15,

Officer Deck was directing traffic at Wing and Vall, south of the railroad tracks, when a car cut through the lowered railroad gates.

DECK SAID the car sped straight at him. It struck his left hand and turned the officer half around, then sped south.

An officer at Vall and Campbell spotted the car, which sped through the intersection. The officer estimated the car's speed at 50 miles per hour.

However, police were able to obtain the license number and track down the vehicle. Brennan will face both charges on April 16 in the Arlington Heights branch of the circuit court.

School Board May Be Forced To Take Over Remodelling

High School Dist. 214 board members are showing increased concern over an Arlington High School remodeling project stalled since the general contractor dropped out of sight in mid-November.

Reichert's full contract was $157,217. The firm's owner, James Reichert of Prospect Heights, has been paid all but $28,000 of the project funds.

The work is currently in the hands of a bonding company, Capital Indemnity, but the school board was told this week that the district may have to step in to get the job completed.

WAYNE FRITCH, of Berger, Kelley, Unteet, Scaggs and Associates, architects for the project, told the school board he hopes to get a decision from the bonding company this week.

"If they don't decide to move, you'll have to complete the work yourself," Fritch told the school board Monday.

Fritch has estimated from subcontractors who can complete the project. He says the $28,000 not collected by Reichert is sufficient to cover remaining work.

THE AMOUNT IS not sufficient, however, to cover subcontractors' claims against Reichert.

Fritch says that when Reichert "disappeared" in mid-November, he left dozens of subcontractors unpaid — many of them with no way to prove it.

Lien waivers were given by 40 of 69 subcontractors in advance of receiving their money. Fritch was paid by Dist. 214 when he presented the lien waivers — but apparently did not pass the payments on.

FRITCH SAYS one small Arlington Heights painting contractor, who was a "good guy" and owed $14,000.

The bonding company is under obligation only to those subcontractors who didn't sign lien waivers. If Dist. 214 goes ahead and completes the work rather than letting the bond company do it, the bonding company may sue, Fritch told the board Monday.

HE TOLD Paddock Publications later in the week that such a suit is usually intended to bring all the interested parties together for a settlement.

Supt. Edward H. Gilbert was asked by the school board to consult the district's attorneys regarding implications of the possible take-over. Other major contract holders for the project were Peter Smith, plumbing, $19,351; Jamar-Olmen, heating and ventilation, $32,500; and Divane Brothers, electrical, $62,722.

The project included renovation of girls' locker rooms, relocation of washrooms in the girls' gymnasium area, and extensive changes designed to bring the high school — District 214's oldest — in line with the State Life Safety Code.

Legion Will Note 50th Anniversary

A dinner-dance at the Arlington Heights American Legion Hall Saturday will commemorate the 50th anniversary of the Legion. Members of Rolling Meadows post 1251 and Wheeling Post 1968 will co-sponsor the event with the Arlington Heights post.

A corned beef and cabbage dinner will be served at 7:30 p.m. in the hall at Douglas Avenue and Miner Street.

The Civilian Air Patrol and Guardsmen Drum and Bugle Corps, sponsored by the Arlington Heights Legion, will assist in presentation of colors. Squadron commander is Joseph Furman, of Arlington Heights, and corps director is Richard Ledig, of Des Plaines.

THE "SING Out Palatine" teenage show will present a one-hour musical variety show. Under the direction of Mrs. Virginia Morris, the group has appeared on television in the past. Community singing will be led by C. Leslie Griffith, Arlington Heights. Robert Bishop will serve as master of ceremonies and Bill Oas is ticket chairman.

The Scouting movement, sort of an antique, para-military salute to colonialist adventures (some of the troops are wearing green berets) of the past, may be in for a bit of a change, if change can originate in places like Santiago, Chile.

For there, last week, a group of rebel Scouts took over national headquarters after holding a "revolutionary jamboree" and proclaimed a new directorate to carry out "a movement of profound transformation." Hog dog. It's time for some kind of change.

IT SOUNDS like just the thing my own troop would have tried 20 years ago if taking over buildings had been the most to do at that time.

The Chilean directors accused the rebels of "a most unscouts-like attitude" (horror), something that dear old Troop 33 of Beverly Hills got accused of many a time.

There should be more troops like it. Too often Scouting is a deadly serious thing of status, merit and demerit, conformity and programming.

Not our group. We made the Beverly Hillbillies look real. We were in fact, non-Scouts, and we revelled in it.

WE WERE nominally sponsored by the Beverly Hills Rotary Club, which first laid eyes on us at a luncheon meeting at the Beverly Hills Hotel. They probably haven't recovered.

They were to present us with neckerchiefs emblazoned with the Rotary emblem — nothing to suggest Scouting — and a bugle. We, in return, were supposed to look and behave like young Dr. Kildare. Oh, and we were supposed to give a demonstration of flag signalling.

Thank God, nobody in the room but four of us knew what the flag signals meant. I was a translator with ballpoint notes on my wrist, and after a few glances at the code, I became sure I was receiving what may have been the first and last obscure flag message sent in the main dining room of the Beverly Hills Hotel.

When 33 went someplace, we did it in style. Caddy convertibles chauffeured us into the mountains, to the desert, to the ocean. And our Scoutmasters and their assistants never bothered us. They always found the nearest bar and stayed there.

OUR LEADERS were wonderful to us. City types all, they could no more pitch a tent, use a compass or blaze a trail than any of us. And they never expected us to. They had other talents.

One of them, a doctor specializing in endocrine disorders, made one of our number grow three inches, a beard, and a bass voice overnight with the injection of some not too subtle hormone. Sounded like Dr. Diksen, and the kid was in the fifth grade.

"Keep away from the needle man" was the watch word after that.

Seeing our leaders happy with hootch, we sometimes found a supply of our own. And I can still remember the time the Scoutmaster's son disappeared stark naked and shrieking into the snow near Mount Wilson. Good ol' Terry liked the sauce, okay. Woke up about 40 cabins before we dragged him back.

OUR FREEDOM from achievement allowed us to channel our energies into more creative pursuits.

Like the sea dye incident.

We saw little possibility for ever using the water safety kit presented to us by some well-meaning group and so one August evening we pitched three sea dye packets ("will stain a nine-square-mile area," the label read) into Purple Lake in the California Sierras.

Awoke the next morning to find the deep blue lake a bright kelly green. Made the front page of the Bishop paper that day and the back pages of two conservation magazines.

THERE WAS the Great Camp Josephe Snipe Hunt, where we ran three other troops through a little midnight course that resulted in 150 of the most savage poison oak cases seen in Santa Monica and Venice medical offices that year.

There was the Palm Canyon Siege in which we discovered that we were camped almost directly on the route into the local lovers' lane.

Equipped with Tijuana-bought fire works, a seven-man patrol first blocked the road into the area, sealing about nine cars in a five-acre basin. Then, attacking from the high ground with an initial fusillade of torpedoes (hand-held cherry bombs that exploded on contact) we caused one of the vehicles to ram another.

Amid showers of roman candle balls and violent explosions from the giant four-inch cracker, another car attempted to escape the trap through our crackbrush blockade and wound up in the ditch.

ABOUT TO return in triumph, we found ourselves cut off from camp by the Palm Springs Police Department augmented by the San Bernardino County Sheriff. Never could figure how they got there so fast, but apparently the hills made nifty echo chambers and switchboards from Indio to Palm Desert were lit up with calls.

That was one night our chauffeurs returned from the bars early. Stayed the whole night too, just to show they cared.

Oh, Scouts of the world, unite and cast off your leaders, you have nothing to lose but the gridwork and you have yourselves a ball to gain.

AESOP SAYS:

The Boar and the Fox

A wild Boar was whetting his tusks against the stump of a tree when a Fox happened by. Thinking to make fun of his neighbor, he made a great show of looking anxiously about, as if in fear of some sudden enemy. But the Boar kept right on with his work.

"Why are you doing that?" asked the Fox at last with a grin. "I see no reason for it; there is neither hunter nor hound in sight nor any other danger."

"True," replied the Boar. "But when that danger does arise, I shall have something else to do than to sharpen my weapons."

It is too late to whet the sword when the trumpet sounds to draw it.

Every generation since Aesop 2,500 years ago has known the wisdom of his lesson of preparedness. Today, as we enjoy increased financial income, is the time to put some of it away — for old age, illness, or emergency.

Another sage put it this way: "It wasn't raining when Noah built the ark."

Park Cost Cuts Sought by Board

Park Board commissioners discussed bids for nine new parks in Arlington Heights at its meeting Tuesday night.

Bids for site development of the parks and construction of buildings and pools were opened last week. Pools for site development were under budgeted costs, but bids for buildings and pools were over.

PARK DIRECTOR Thomas Thornton, board representative, and architects will meet to discuss how to keep the costs down. Recommendations on what will be eliminated from the projects to cut down costs will be made at the board's March 24 meeting. Contracts will be awarded at that time.

Board members also approved the purchase of a one-ton International Harvester dump truck with a snow plow. The vehicle will replace a 10-year-old vehicle, described to board members as "a total loss" and a "hazard on the highway."

In other action, board members approved seal coating of tennis courts in Dryden and Greembrier parks.

BIDS FOR a new inch of asphalt and a sealer coat for tennis courts at Hasbrook Park, 333 W. Maude, will be presented at a future meeting.

Thornton said the Hasbrook courts were in "horrible condition" and the new asphalt and sealer would correct the problem of cracking.

Park Attorney Charles Bobinette said the joint-use agreement with Dist. 214 had been prepared. The high school and the park district have informally agreed to share costs of construction and operation of the Olympic Park indoor swimming pool, which will be built adjacent to Arlington High School. The formal agreement has been drawn up by Bobinette and has been submitted to the high school attorney.

"We need a chance for the park district staff and the high school staff to iron out any details," Bobinette said.

He said he will consult with the high school attorney and will present the agreement for the board's approval at its next meeting.

The agreement must be signed, so the title for the land can be transferred to the park district and then cleared before construction on the pool can begin.

Leader of Elk Grove Township government for the past 16 years, Supervisor William Rohlwing is described by his Republican Party backers as "capable and farsighted," and the man in charge of "one of the most efficient and best run township offices in the northwest suburbs."

Head of the GOP ticket seeking re-election, his supporters believe that "it has been Rohlwing's expert leadership and administrative abilities and tight budgetary controls which enable township officials to eliminate the need for a tax levy."

THERE HAS been no tax levied for the township or general assistance fund since the 1958-59 year, and there will not be a need for one this year.

Even so, officials say the township general assistance programs have been improved through "sound administration" and paid for entirely out of excess commissions, 2 per cent of all taxes paid locally to the township collector.

The township has been able to finish each of the last four years with excess funds. These were distributed as follows to township agencies: $346,000 to elementary School Districts 59, 57, 25 and 15 in the past four years; $20,000 to the Northwest Mental Health Program, $37,000 to the Clearbrook School for the Retarded, and $111,000 has been paid to local welfare recipients over the past four years.

"These funds helped significantly to ease the tax burden on Elk Grove Township property owners," officials said. ROHLWING is the administrator of general assistance and as such, manages the welfare program for the township. Besides himself, he has another certified welfare worker on his staff who helps him with welfare cases. He received his certificate as a registered certified social worker from Illinois last year.

In the past four years, the township has provided assistance to 229 families. All recipients are interviewed and each application received by Rohlwing's personal attention.

When a recipient is found eligible, there is no waiting period for assistance to begin. Another part of the program has resulted in the distribution of 45 tons of canned food, collected by local schools, to the needy at Christmas time. Toys, clothing and home made articles also have been distributed.

As head of the township board, Rohlwing is responsible for the newly formed youth committee, currently conducting a pilot program in basic vocational training for selected pupils in School Dist. 57, with the cooperation of School Dist. 214.

The committee has also been working to establish a close relationship between the Junior Achievement Program and local industry.

WITH THE board's approval, he retained an expert in civil defense to set up an emergency headquarters at town hall in case of disasters.

Plans are under way for purchasing a short wave radio, cots, blankets, first aid supplies, stretchers, and other materials. "All purchases will be paid out of excess commissions at no extra cost to the taxpayer," a spokesman said.

Rohlwing has increased the return on invested funds by 400 per cent in 1963 over 1964. Each successive year since 1964 has shown an increase over the preceding year.

He acts in the capacity of the township trustee and is treasurer in charge of township funds. He receives and pays out money for township expenses and is required to keep a record of all transactions.

The three township auditors are responsible for auditing his books.

He may prosecute in the name of the township and has the power to defend it in any court suit.

When the lease on the old town hall expired in 1959, Rohlwing supervised the planning and building of the present town hall.

"This is the only town hall in all 30 townships in Cook County that has all the township office and the highway department under one roof," officials said.

Rohlwing has lived in Elk Grove Township all of his life, now living at 901 S. I-Oka, Mount Prospect. He attended St. Peter Lutheran Grade School and graduated from the Metropolitan Business College in Elgin. In addition to the 16 years as supervisor, he earlier served four years as collector.

THE ACCEPTED INFLUENCE IN THE NORTHWEST SUBURBS

Bicycle Path Site To Be Determined

Morton Deutsch, owner of the 29-acre Chatelaine subdivision south of Rand Junior High School along north Arlington Heights Road, will meet with Arlington Heights Village Mgr. L. A. Hanson to determine a site for a park corridor along Arlington Heights Road.

The Park District is seeking a 2.5-acre slab of land to link Rand Junior High School and the Commonwealth Edison Co. right of way, offering paths for bicycle riders. No park equipment would be provided on the property.

THE PLAN Commission, in considering Deutsch's plans, agreed that a single home site just north of the right of way would be necessary for completion of the route.

The 26-acre property was originally owned by 3-H Homes, which sought village approval for the Berwick Gates apartment project late last year. However, after failing to gain approval, 3-H sold the property.

In other commission action, annexation and rezoning were granted for a 12-unit subdivision on the south side of Palatine Road near Verde.

Finally, Leo Mueller was appointed unanimously as secretary of the commission, despite a move to unseat him.

THE CALLERS have inquired about the number of children in the family and their habits, such as when they leave for and arrive from school, Lawlor said.
